CODE AUTHORITY'S RULING MADE FINAL

Rosenblatt Invokes Self-Regulation Phase of Executive Order; Denies Review Petition

The self-regulation interpretation of the Executive Order appended to the motion picture's NRA code was invoked for the first time recently by Division Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt when he denied a petition of Jefferson Amusement Co., Victoria, Texas, for a review of a final decision by the Code Authority in an overbuying case decided against Jefferson, it was disclosed this week. The Authority later received three petitions for rehearings.

Mr. Rosenblatt's denial for a review of the Code Authority's findings establishes a precedent under which the decisions of the industry's governing body in individual cases are recognized as absolutely final.

A review of the Code Authority's findings had been sought by Sol E. Gordon, chairman of the board of Jefferson Amusement, on the ground that the President's Executive Order accompanying the code provides for a review and, if necessary, disapproval of any action taken by the Code Authority or committees appointed by it on the part of the National Recovery Administrator.

Cites Johnson's Interpretation

Mr. Rosenblatt, in denying the petition for a review, cited the interpretation of the Executive Order by General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, Dec. 9, 1933, "construing the provisions of the order as not containing any right of appeal in individual cases."

It was lack of this interpretation, made after considerable disagreement between industry leaders and the Administration, which caused member companies of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to threaten to withhold their signatures from the code on the grounds that the Executive Order, as it then stood, deprived the industry of self-regulation.

Jefferson Amusement Co. is seeking a rehearing of its case by the Code Authority, the petition for which was to be heard late this week. This petition states that the company was not aware of the administrator's interpretation of the Executive Order refusing appeals to him in individual cases. However, the petition charges that such an interpretation is invalid "because no one has any right or power to change, alter or modify the provision of said Executive Order, except the President himself."

Says "Right to Buy" Recognized

The petition further declares that the Code Authority findings and the method of relief granted the complainant in the overbuying case constitute a recognition by the Authority of the "right to buy" and, in effect, result in incorporating the "right to buy" in the code. This principle was rejected last year when the code was drawn.

The Code Authority was confronted with still another problem this week in the form of a suit against major distributors filed in U. S. district court, Lincoln, Neb., by owners of three theatres in small Nebraska towns, for damages aggregating $156,000, for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws by enforcing zone agreements. The claim is made that the zoning agreement is being enforced in spite of an injunction obtained in 1930 against the zoning agreement set up by the Omaha Film Board.

Local Board Personnel to Stay

No changes will be made in the personnel of local clearance and zoning boards, the Code Authority indicated this week. Clearance and zoning activities will be resumed November 1, at which time the summer vacations of the boards will come to a close. Grievance boards will continue to function throughout the summer.

Final determination of appeals on 21 cases were announced last week by the Code Authority. Of these, eight were clearance and zoning cases, five concerned reduced admissions, five overbuying charges, two certifications to the Code Authority and one case referred back for rehearing to the local grievance board.

Among the most important decisions was that in the case of Lichtman Theatres of Norfolk, Va., against existing clearance granted theatres in Norfolk. The local board ruling was unanimously upheld by the Code Authority.

In the case of Rubin Frels of Victoria, Texas, against Jefferson Amusement Co., on the overbuying charges heretofore mentioned and on which decision the Jefferson company appealed to the Administration for a review, the Code Authority modified the Dallas grievance board ruling to affect only pictures on the 1933-34 schedules and "not for all time."

Drive-In Case Dismissed

In Lichtman Theatres of Washington, D. C., against existing clearance granted theatres in Washington, the local board decisions were unanimously affirmed.

Camden Drive-In Theatre against RKO Distributing was certified for hearing of the Code Authority, but was dismissed.

In Lewis Isenberg of Buffalo against E. Wick of Buffalo, the Code Authority found Wick had been guilty of violating Article 5E, Part 3, Section 1, of the code and that violations have taken place since the cease and desist order was entered.

RKO and Consolidated Negotiate Note Payment

Negotiations are under way in New York between RKO and Consolidated Film Industries for extension of the maturities on $1,800,000 of RKO gold notes, secured by virtually all of the RKO investments in its subsidiary companies.

The notes mature in the principal amount of $300,000 each on the first of August and the first of each succeeding month through January next. A $25,208 interest payment on the notes was met by RKO on July 1. The negotiations seek a six months' extension of the maturities of each of the five notes remaining after the August 1 payment, arrangements for which are being made.

New Photography Is Utilizing Old Still Technique

Modern cinematography is doubling on itself and reverting to the simplicity in still photography by the old masters.

Gregg Toland, whom Samuel Goldwyn has under contract for five years, photographed "Nana," and in that photoplay reintroduced the use of the single element lens in combination with the newly perfected silent carbon lamp.

Adapting to his uses this carbon lamp, the product of years of experimentation by one of the largest carbon lamp manufacturers in the world, Toland achieved a rare skin quality in his closeups of Miss Sten in "Nana." Now he is using the combination again in "We Live Again," the Goldwyn film version of Tolstoy's "Resurrection," in which Miss Sten is starred with Fredric March.

"Soft" Lighting in Vogue Six Years

Incandescent, or soft, lighting has been the vogue in film studios for the past six years, because the sputtering of the carbon interfered with the recording. With sound, lighting was almost a completely new problem to photographers.

Where day and night shifts were employed in making incandescent lamps, thousands of dollars worth of carbon lighting equipment was junked or laid aside. One of the larger studios stacked arc lamps worth $400,000 in storage in what was considered a good move.

The fight by carbon lamp manufacturers went on apace to keep their product alive. Silencing coils, the first step toward taking the crackle out of hard lighting, were introduced, and they succeeded to a great extent.

Toland, in making his beautiful shots of Miss Sten, used old equipment that had had silencing coils attached and found them adequately quiet. The results may be a forecast of the photography to come, a preview into a future that retreats into an almost forgotten past.

Sees Increased Use of Carbon Type

In making his shots Toland was confronted with the problem of negative depth. Because of the number of prints necessary it was imperative that the negative be firm in quality, a factor that made the negative unable to stand up in the laboratory when a large number of positive prints were needed. In prophesying the use of hard lighting in the future, Toland said that he could foresee an increased use of the old carbon type.

"I believe it," he said, "because of the carbon's very definite value in reproduction. Carbons are of particular value when using filters. It is my experience in close-ups that hard lighting, combined with the single-element lens, yields a sharp center and a most notable naturalness in skin quality, with the remainder of the photographic area going soft."

Observers will note that as in Goldwyn's forthcoming "We Live Again," more and more technicians are building ceilings into the sets. This presents another new problem in lighting, inasmuch as the cameraman is deprived of the advantage of his traditional back lights and must devise other angles.

REDUCED MASS AUDIENCE A FACTOR

salary ratios in proportion to gross receipts in production, distribution, exhibition; (6) basic observations made during the industry investigation; (7) the inadequacy of the two suspended excessive salary and "star raiding" provisions of the code to control such practices; (8) suggestions and recommendations for correcting alleged abuses, especially in production. This part of Mr. Rosenblatt's report follows:

"The years of depression were particularly trying ones for the motion picture industry. Dependent as it is for its financial prosperity upon mass patronage, the tremendous decline in mass purchasing power during the last few years made serious inroads on its theatre revenues. Moreover, tremendous capital investment had been made in studio and theatre equipment as a result of the new era in motion picture entertainment introduced by sound and talking pictures. Faced with the problem of decreased patronage and with the added problems of tremendous fixed charges, the industry was forced both to reduce theatre admission prices and to attempt to improve the quality of entertainment in the effort to attract more people into the theatres.

"To accomplish this, the producer invited the public with glamorous and more glamorous screen personalities. Producers discovered that the creation of such personalities was a costly process and, moreover, that once created, they were always open to the predatory raids of competing producers. Thus, in the scramble to attract the public, salaries of executives and screen stars were raised to abnormal heights. Stars were given contracts at figures substantially above recently prevailing rates, and far in excess on an average of salaries generally commanded by the outstanding personalities of the silent screen. By this action producers were flying in the face of sound judgment. Business management in every line of commercial activity was drastically reducing operating expenses, including salaries.

"The combined operation of these trends made it difficult, if not impossible, to adjust production costs to the new era of generally depressed earnings. A series of equity and other receiverships in the industry, affecting the investment of hundreds of thousands of stockholders, was the result.

"Of the five largest companies in the field, one is in bankruptcy; one is operating in receivership and bankruptcy; one undertook capital reorganization to meet an indebtedness of $42,000,000; one showed a loss of more than $16,000,000 for the year 1932; and the earnings of one were reduced from a net income of $15,000,000 in 1931 to a net income of $7,000,000 in 1932.

"Moreover, on the basis of the highest quotations to date, the public's equity in the common stock of these five major companies has been reduced from a high of $960,000,000 in 1930 to approximately $140,000,000 at the present time.

"Among the factors contributing to the distressed financial condition of the motion picture industry were:

"(a) a greatly reduced mass audience for screen entertainment by reason of widespread unemployment;

"(b) great operating losses, due to undoubted over-investment in large-type theatres;

"(c) cut-throat competition for the services of outstanding screen personalities, resulting in

"(d) excessive salary ranges, making it difficult to secure economical production.

"Inflated capital structures require drastic corrective measures, which come by the operation of the laws of economics during depression periods with operating losses.

"Increased activity of stockholders in the operations of their companies may result in an incentive to sounder and better management, and such activity has been and should be welcomed by able and competent management.

"Enforced readjustments, partially during the past 12 months, have already had a salutary effect upon the financial structure of the exhibition division of the industry. The drastic procedure of receivership and bankruptcy has operated to deflate capital structures. Substantial economies have been imposed upon theatre operation.

"But no convincing evidence exists to indicate that basic production costs have been greatly reduced, or that any substantial progress has been made toward the elimination of those practices prevalent within the industry which tend to depress the quality of motion picture entertainment offered to the consuming public.

"Rationalization of production costs remains the essence of the problems in the financial rehabilitation of the production division of the motion picture industry.

"The seriousness of these problems was given full consideration throughout the negotiations leading up to the final approval of the motion picture industry code. In support of the inclusion of the suspended provisions in the code, its sponsors contended—

"(1) That the payment of excessive salaries constitutes a major factor in the maintenance of high production costs, and that rationalization of production costs can best be accomplished by devices to control the payment of excessive salaries.

"(2) That the provisions dealing with excessive salaries, and with unfair competitive practices utilized in securing the services of certain classes of employees, furnish an effective and practicable method of control.

Many did not receive a full year's work in production at their agreed-upon weekly stipend. Cases demonstrating the gap between weekly salaries and annual compensation are numerous, especially among those listed in the lower annual compensation brackets in the compilation hereinabove.

* Employees whose compensation was less than $150 weekly were not included in the investigation.

"The industry has made no material progress in setting the production side of its house in order. One general indication of the contribution which salary payments make to the maladjustment of production costs is found in the failure of management to adjust salary ranges of executives or artists to changed earning capacity of the various companies in the industry. The question therefore naturally arises: Why has the situation not been corrected by calculated action on the part of management, or by the operation of natural competitive forces?

"The intangibles of human talent, not celluloid, constitute the basic ingredient of the entertainment service offered to the consuming public by the motion picture industry. Here, as in no other artistic field, the talents of unique personalities have, through the organization and sales ingenuity of the industry, been brought before vast audiences in every part of the world. The public following established by a director or star is the dominating element of sales appeal possessed by the distributor in offering a complete entertainment schedule to the exhibitor. . . .

Apply Also to Executives

"To a limited degree the factors which control the value of artists and directors apply also to production executives. Exceptional ability to approximate public reaction to an offering, to single out new entertainment possibilities, and to combine artistic services in the production of successful entertainment features calls for unusual talent. The vision which leads a producer to pioneer in new fields of entertainment unquestionably springs from creative instinct. Then, too, the investment dependent upon the fickleness of public reaction is too great to speculate on unproved executive ability.

"In the first place, and as a matter of principle, no salary is too high or excessive if the picture produced by the individual receiving the salary meets with unusual public favor as a result of unique direction or artistry. Such a picture may continue to earn large sums after the charges for the services which produced it have been absorbed. On the other hand, the reverse may be true. Public popularity of artists is a flimsy and perishable product. It is dependent upon the vagaries of public favor. A screen personality may be a popular hero today and forgotten tomorrow. Moreover, it is difficult for executives to determine with even a reasonable degree of certainty the extent of the contribution made to a motion picture by the author, director, actor, scenic artist, photographer, publicity agent, or any one of a large number of other indivduals who contribute to its creation and final presentation to the public.

"These imponderables make it difficult but not inherently impossible for management to maintain a reasonable adjustment between income and outlay for salary payments to executives and artists. The difficulties encountered on this score are not limited to the motion picture industry; they are common in one degree or another in every commercial enterprise whose existence is dependent upon the whims of public favor.

"Granting all of the legitimate reasons that make for comparatively high salaries, as well as giving full weight to the difficulties encountered by management in setting proper salary standards in the industry, the fact remains that all available evidence indicates that primary gross salary ranges in the motion picture industry have gone beyond any rational standard of compensation, i.e., based upon a percentage of the receipts representing the contribution to the picture. The basic reasons for the failure on the part of management in the adjustment of salary payments must therefore be sought for in some other quarters.

"These reasons are to be found for the most part in trade practices which have developed in the production division of the industry. In the absence of accurate standards by which the value of the contribution made by the various contributors to a finished motion picture product may be gauged, foreign elements have entered into the methods of setting standards for compensation. Jealousy, ambition, and other destructive factors play their full part in the present system. All of these elements find their final expression in the competitive practices which have arisen in the industry in the development of artists and in a competitive bidding for their services.

"Two specific expressions of these practices are found in:

"(1) The star system in motion picture production, exploited in such a manner that the values created by the producers are turned against them by the necessity for paying excessive salaries; and

"(2) Unfair competitive bidding for talent.

The "Star System"

"This system of selecting artists (actors, directors, technicians) in the motion picture industry tends to create an artificial scarcity of talent. Its operation tends to force the supposed values of artists to fantastic figures by withholding from the market the potentially available services of executive ability and artistic talent of equal ability.

"So in 1932 published statements of salaries paid or allegedly paid in the motion picture industry presumed to show a total of more than $16,000,000 paid annually to less than 230 employees in the eight major producing companies. Such statements do not include the salaries, payments, or bonuses received by approximately 500 officials, executives, directors, and others.

"The inflated values which producers have placed upon a limited number of executives and artists, have created a vicious circle of bidding for their services. The creatures of the system have turned to plague their masters.

"The position of the star has assumed such importance in the motion picture industry that producers have been induced to use every means at their disposal to entice away from other producers those individuals of proved box-office value who are performing under contract with another producer. Quite naturally, every producer has exerted similar ingenuity to retain the services of exceptional talent which he currently has under contract.

"Another result of the system has been in some cases to 'freeze' talent to the extent that valuable employees under contract to one company are permitted to remain idle for extended periods of time so that a rival company could not enjoy their services while they are not actually working under the then employer, and with the further result that their value to the industry generally, due to their inactivity, becomes greatly impaired.

"On the other hand, and the converse of that situation whereby talent is 'frozen,' is the loaning by employers of stars under contracts to competing producers at extremely high prices to the competing producer, such prices being any number of times the regular salary which the star is entitled to receive from the then employing producer. Such loaning arrangement, as distinguished from loaning at a nominal amount above the star's salary for the period of the loan, in itself causes increased production costs: an increased production cost to the competing producer who borrows the talent; the engendering of a feeling in the mind of the star that he must thereafter necessarily be worth to his then employing producer the exorbitantly higher amount which his then employer has charged the competing producer; and as a result of such feeling in the mind of the star the then employing producer is met at once with demands for increased compensation which must either be yielded to or refused with concomitant dissatisfaction and disharmony between the then employing producer and such employee.

Offers to Stars Under Contract

"The law of contracts, of course, furnishes protection to a producer against the offers which another producer might make to induce an employee to breach his contract. Thus, if a competing producer offers a larger salary to a star in order to induce him to break his existing contract, the former producer has legal recourse. However, if the offer to a star currently under contract is one which promises a larger salary at the expiration of the existing contract, the law of contracts offers no recourse to the injured producer for any injury which he may sustain.

"The practice of competitive bidding for stars, which has led to a great deal of the mischief in the production division of the industry, is based upon the stuff of which stars are made. It appears that the services performed by stars and directors are of such character, and moreover, their temperament is of such character, that complete contentment is necessary to the proper performance of their work. Their value is apparently nil when they are 'unhappy.'

"It is a common experience of producers that where offers of increased compensation are made to stars during their present employment, their services become practically worthless to their employers unless their salaries are increased to accord with the competing offer. The mere offer to a star of substantially increased compensation upon termination of his existing contract apparently produces a psychological effect in his work which tends to decrease or to actually destroy the value of his services to his present employer. Thus, in actual operation, a producer can by a mere offer compel his competitor to increase the compensation of the star beyond the value which the business judgment of that producer has placed upon the services of this employee.

"As already pointed out, the natural scarcity of talent in any field of artistic endeavor imposes certain restrictions upon the freedom which producers or managers can exercise in the selection of talent. When this natural scarcity is further aggravated by the artificial scarcity of talent which has been created by the star system, the producer has very little protection against a star who refuses to perform adequately under his contract.

"As a result, the competition of one producer against another for services of stars through the medium of offering increased compensation upon the termination of existing contracts, when such offer is made prior to the expiration date of contract, tends not only to force salary scales to excessive heights, but tends as well to depress the quality of film entertainment offered to the public.

"Most of the major producers have made decided efforts to correct the abuses resulting from excessive production costs. Acting individually and without the aid of any centralized machinery, however, their efforts have been ineffective.

The Statistical Survey

"With the cooperation of Donald K. Wallace, of the Division of Economic Research and Planning, National Recovery Administration, a statistical survey has been made with respect to the problems of payment of excessive compensation.

"It is quite generally believed that the weekly wage rate of employees in this industry is a barometer of their annual earnings. The findings of this investigation disprove this, however, and reveal that as a general thing the annual earnings are not 52 times greater than the weekly earnings. In other words, the weekly earnings and annual earnings are extremely disproportionate in many instances, with the weekly earnings holding the advantage as far as compensation is concerned.

"For example: Individual designated as number 102, an actress, received $75,000 during 1933, while her weekly wage rate, $10,000, would indicate earnings of $520,000 for the same period.

"A more glaring example of the fallacy of estimating annual earnings from weekly wage-rate figures is found in the following: Individual 98, an actor, received $25,000 a week during 1933, but his annual earnings totalled only $76,666.66. In other words, he was employed for approximately 3 weeks during the year, while a full year's employment at that rate would have amounted to $1,300,000. The lower salary brackets indicate the existence of similar conditions. For instance, individual No. 3044, an actor on a $1,200 a week salary basis, earned $400 during the year.

"During 1933 compensation to all individuals represented 41.3 per cent of the gross receipts of producing-distributing companies. Actors and actresses combined, not including extra players, ranked first, representing 8.6 per cent of the gross receipt; clerical and office employees held second place, representing 8.4 per cent; studio mechanics, third, representing 4.6 per cent; while supervisors ranked fourth, with a representation of 4.4 per cent of the gross receipts.

Distributing companies reporting to the NRA individually and independently of any producing-distributing affiliation listed only 32 executives earning above $150 weekly. In addition to these, it is assumed that dozens of others in distribution were listed under producing-distributing schedules. The 32 were paid as follows:

"If executives, supervisors and clerical and office employees are eliminated from the ratios, the remaining individuals, who might be classed as direct production employees, represent 26.7 per cent of the gross receipts.

"Total compensation represented 41.3 per cent of the gross receipts of producing-distributing companies during 1933, 41.6 per cent during 1932, and 37.7 per cent during 1931.

Salary Ratios in Producing Companies

"In producing companies, during 1933, total compensation of all individuals accounted for 52.8 per cent of the reporting companies' gross receipts, with actors and actresses holding first place and representing 10.8 per cent; executives in second position and accounting for 7.2 per cent; studio mechanics ranking third and representing 4.4 per cent; and artists and sculptors in fourth position, accounting for 4 per cent of the gross receipts.

"Reducing the ratios to those individuals who might be classed as direct production employees, by eliminating executives, supervisors, and clerical and office employees, the results show a representation of 40.1 per cent for the remaining individuals in the aggregate.

"Compensation to all individuals in producing companies represented 52.8 per cent of the gross receipts during 1933, 46 per cent during 1932, and 39.3 per cent during 1931. The spread between gross receipts and total compensation narrowed considerably from 1931 to 1933.

"Stating the converse of the foregoing proposition: Compensation to all individuals in producing companies increased 13.5 per cent on the basis of gross receipts between 1931 and 1933, inclusive.

"Total compensation to all individuals in distributing companies represented 25.3 per cent of the gross receipts during 1933, 28.9 per cent during 1932, and 24.7 per cent during 1931. During 1933, executive salaries accounted for 5.8 per cent of the gross receipts; salaries to supervisors for 6 per cent; and clerical and office salaries, for 13.6 per cent.

"In exhibiting companies, during 1933, compensation to all individuals represented 25.6 per cent of the gross receipts, with clerical and office salaries representing 6.6 per cent; actors and actresses, 4.2 per cent; musicians, 1.5 per cent; and supervisors and executors, 2.3 per cent.

Observations on the Investigation

"The following observations on the investigation are particularly pertinent:

"(1) The tendency of an increased ratio of compensation in producing and producing-distributing companies in proportion to decreased gross receipts.

"(2) The general tendency in the industry in producing and producing-distributing companies for a greater share of salary costs out of gross receipts than is customary in other forms of enterprise, where the ratio of salary costs to receipts generally ranges around 25 per cent.

"(3) The apparent absence of any standard cost accounting formula in the fixation of production costs, where ordinarily industries of the size and importance of the motion picture industry do generally employ a standard formula.

"Article V, division A, part 4, deals with unreasonably excessive salaries paid to executives and certain other classes of employees. Two very simple considerations recommend the indefinite suspension of this section of the code, namely:

"(1) The power granted to the Code Authority under this provision is not contemplated under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act; and

"(2) The provisions are administratively impracticable.

"Even if the Recovery Act itself did not impose limitations upon fixing maximum compensation, the suspended provision dealing with excessive salaries would be undesirable because it is not capable of effective administration.

"Thus, the administration of the suspended provision is rendered ineffective by virtue of the very reason that the problem of excessive salaries has developed. Leaving aside the question of social implications, a star or executive is worth as much as the public can be led to think he is worth by paying to see his offerings. If individual producers find it difficult to gauge in advance the possible value of these services, it is patently impossible for a Code Authority to exercise any more effective judgment in the matter. It is of course possessed of no better material than the cumulative guesses of its membership.

"Moreover, even if the term 'unreasonably excessive' could be determined on some discreet or quantitative basis, the penalty provided for the discipline of offenders could not be expected to exercise any materially deterring influence. The Code Authority is limited in its assessment of fines for the payment of unreasonably excessive salaries to a penalty of $10,000. Since the amounts involved in excessive salaries run into large figures, this relatively small penalty could not be expected to prove effective.

"If the public interest is being subserved through the payment of excessive salaries out of earnings of other divisions of the industry, or out of funds realized from the sale of securities, then the solution is obviously to be found in the establishment of machinery which will eliminate these practices, rather than in the attempt to arbitrarily limit the amount of salaries to be paid.

"It is therefore recommended that the provision as now contained in the code dealing with the payment of excessive salaries be indefinitely suspended.

"The other sections of the code suspended by the President's Executive order (article V, division B, part 5, sections 1 (c), 2, 3, 4, and 6) seek to preserve the relationship existing between a producer and his employees by controlling the terms under which competing offers of employment may be made—

"(a) Prior to the last 30 days of the period of the contract;

"(b) Within the last 30 days of the period of the contract, and

"(c) Within 3 to 6 months after the expiration date of the contract, dependent upon the salary range.

"The first two of these provisions are designed to control the conditions under which offers of employment can be made prior to the termination of the contract.

Offers of Employment Prior to Last 30 Days of Contract

"The first provision of this suspended section provides that no producer shall negotiate with or make any offer to an employee under contract with another producer prior to the last 30 days of the period of the contract. It is designed to prevent secret raids upon the artists of one producer by another producer, and presumably to make it possible for the artist to devote his unqualified energies to the work of his employer during the period of the contract. It assumes that since he owes complete loyalty to his employer, he should not be subject to any disturbing influences which might affect his ability to perform effectively under the terms of the contract. It further assumes that the application of the provisions would work no hardship on a competing producer, inasmuch as he does not intend to secure the services of the artist prior to the expiration date of the contract, and therefore is under no necessity to negotiate for his services more than 30 days prior to the expiration date of the contract.

"All of the employees affected, however, maintain that any restriction on their right to negotiate at any time during the period of their then outstanding contract for their services following the expiration of such contract would constitute an interference not only with their legal rights, but also with the right to assure themselves presently for the future. To illustrate: The California statutes permit contractual relationship for employment for a 7-year period. Usually the contract of employment is so drawn by the producer that while he, through the exercise of options at stated intervals of time, may continue the services of the affected employee for the full 7-year period, nevertheless upon his failure to exercise such option he will be free of any contractual obligation and the employee will be without employment. The employee, therefore, whose services might be in great demand by reason of some outstanding success, or other circumstances, insists upon his privilege to contract at any time for the rendition of his services following any expiration date of his contractual relationships then existing with his present employer. The balance of interests is no nicely adjusted that the consideration of the public interests involved would appear to be the determining factor.

"In my opinion the public interest should not permit such form of restraint as proposed, and it is therefore recommended that article V, division B, part 5, section I (c) of the code be indefinitely suspended.

Offers of Employment During Last 30 Days

"The second provision of this suspended section (article V, division B, part 5, section 2) provides that no producer shall negotiate with or make any offer to an employee who receives at least $250 per week or $2,500 per picture, and who is under contract to another producer, during the final 30 days of the period of the contract. The provisions of this section do not apply to 'free-lance' players unless their employment is intended to cover a period of at least one year. Thus there is immediately excluded from the provisions of this section of the code not only the 'free-lance' player but other employees who earn less than $250 per week or $2,500 per picture. The so-called 'little' artist is not affected.

SAYS SUSPENSION TO BE PERMANENT

"Under this part of the suspended section the producer has the right to list with a registrar the names of his artists who fall within the specified classifications of the code. If a competing producer wishes to make an offer to any of the listed employees, he is required to give notice to the present employer and to deliver a copy of his offer to the registrar. The employing producer in turn must be given a reasonable opportunity to negotiate for the continuation of the services of the affected employee.

"This latter provision is designed to guarantee that the bidding for services shall take place in the open and that the employing producer shall have an opportunity to meet any offers made by a competing producer, thus being able to retain the services of the affected employee under an open competitive situation.

"Two factors apparently are designed to guard the interests of the employee:

"(1) He has the full right under its operation to decide which offer he will accept.

"(2) The employee is protected against the possibility of loss of both offers.

"Opportunity is given to a competing producer to bid on any basis he sees fit for the services of the desired artist.

"No substantial restrictions are placed by the provisions of this section on the freedom of the employing producer to negotiate with an employee under contract and to offer as attractive terms of employment as he desires.

"It should be noted, however, that under the terms of this provision the employing producer is allowed a maximum of only three days in which to negotiate for the continued services of the artist, and that this maximum term may be further reduced in the discretion of the registrar. Such a provision places a somewhat arbitrary power in the hands of the registrar—one which conceivably might be used to restrict the employing producer in effectively negotiating with the artist who has received a competing offer.

"One other restriction is placed upon the freedom allowed the employing producer in meeting the offer of a competing producer for the services of employees under written contract for a period, inclusive of options, if any, of less than one year, who receive $250 per week or $2,500 per picture, and employees under written contract for one year, or at least three pictures, inclusive of options, if any, who receive $250 per week or $2,500 per picture, section 2 (b) and (c). With respect to such employees a competing producer need give notice of an offer only in cases where an artist is under written contract and where the employing producer has made an offer to renew or extend this contract prior to the last 30 days of its term.

"However, the same considerations as previously enunciated with respect to the employees' contentions, and those which the public interest has weighed, would apply.

"It is therefore recommended that article V, division B, part 5, sections 2 and 3, be indefinitely suspended.

"The remaining sections, article V, division B, part 5, sections 4 and 6, are designed to preserve in some degree even after the expiration date of a contract the so-called 'goodwill' value which a producer has built up in an artist. This section provides that if the last employing producer has made a bona fide firm offer for the services of an employee who has received from $500 to $1,000 per week, or from $5,000 to $10,000 per picture, the last employing producer shall have notice of offers made by competing producers within a three-month period subsequent to the expiration of the employment. In cases where the compensation of such employee was more than $1,000 per week or more than $10,000 per picture, the last employing producer shall be entitled to receive notice of offers made by competing producers within six months subsequent to the expiration of the contractual relationship previously existing.

"Further provision is made with respect to the determination by the Code Authority of the good faith of offers so as to entitle producers to notice of subsequent offers, and procedure is also devised whereby, after notice has been given to the last employing producer, he shall be allowed a reasonable time, not to exceed 3 days, within which to conduct negotiations designed to meet the offer of the competing producer. Machinery is also provided designed to furnish safeguards for the exercise by the former employee of his free choice for accepting or rejecting any offers made.

"The theory of prior repute forms the basis for the provisions of this section dealing with the control of competitive bidding for the services of artists prior to the expiration date of their contracts. This theory, supported by producers, contends that employees engaged in artistic and creative work have been enabled to a substantial degree to secure large compensations by reason of the efforts and the facilities furnished by their producer-employers. Moreover, it contends that by reason of such circumstances the producer-employer possesses an ethical and moral right to be made acquainted with offers made by competing producers for the services of former employees within a stipulated period of time after the expiration of the contractual relationship.

"The provisions of this entire section are based upon the assumption that while an artist may be born, in effect he has to be made by the efforts of the producer before his talents have any unusual commercial value.

"On the other hand, the employees affected by this provision oppose its application upon the ground that such provision will tend to decrease bidding for their services and thereby tend to limit the compensation which their services may command in the future; further, that such provisions impair their right of negotiation while completely free from any contractual obligations whatsoever.

"In analyzing the intent and purposes of this particular provision, it would appear that the factors involved are no different from those surrounding any other type of contractual relations governing any other type of speculative business procedure. Granting that a producer makes substantial investment in the development of the star during the period of the contract, there seems to be no valid reason why he should expect to retain any option in any values which might be created as a result of this investment beyond the period of the contract. The entire matter sifts down to one of business judgment.

"If, for some fortuitous reason, values are created during the period of the contract which exceed his original expectations, there seems to be no valid reason why he should expect to retain an option in perpetuity on these values if there is no contract basis for such continuation. The fact that this option is in effect granted only for a period of three months or six months is merely a limited time application of a faulty principle.

"The entire system of notice of offers and further opportunity to negotiate would in fact tend to increase unreasonable inducements rather than to decrease the same.

"It is therefore recommended that the provisions of article V, division B, part 5, sections 4 and 6 of the code be indefinitely suspended.

Suggestions and Recommendations

"It would not be fair to this industry, in my opinion, if, as a result of the investigation as made, some suggestions were not offered. The following is therefore respectfully submitted for consideration:

"The formulation of a committee either with or without government participation to investigate, study, and report on—

"A. A method for compensating those engaged in artistic, creative, interpretative, directorial, technical, and supervisory capacities on the basis of a minimum guaranteed compensation against a percentage of the receipts of the respective pictures upon which they may be engaged; and

"B. Recommendations for—

"(1) A uniform production cost formula.

"(2) A uniform production report system.

"(3) A uniform budget schedule.

"(4) Uniform salary ranges for classifications of artistic, creative, interpretative, directorial, technical, and supervisory employments;

"C. Whether it would be desirable, practical, proper, and legal to establish a permanent industry commission, with or without government participation, but in any event composed of a representative of producers, and a representative, depending upon the interest affected at any time, of any of the following classes of employees, and restricted solely to such classes, to wit: actors, writers, directors, technicians, or supervisors, which might possess with the consent and approval of the industry, among other things, the power—

"(1) To require all proposed offers of employment to be transmitted to the commission for its approval prior to the same being made.

"(2) To require all proposed negotiations for employment to be with full disclosure to the commission.

"(3) To provide for regulation of salaries in proper cases.

"(4) To direct that the services of employees not utilized by the then employing producer may be available upon such equitable terms and conditions as the commission may prescribe, and in a proper case, to other producers.

"(5) To make findings and report to the producing company concerned when in the opinion of the commission corporate assets have been wasted by production executives in their employment of any members of the foregoing classes of employees above mentioned."

Mr. Rosenblatt, at Kansas City en route to Hollywood, said this week that his recommendation in the report regarding suspension of star raiding clauses will be the subject of an executive order by the President or an administrative order by General Johnson, making its suspension permanent. The order will be issued, he said, upon his return to Washington from the Coast, where he is to confer on the salary situation.

FILM INDUSTRY'S GROSS RECEIPTS, SURPLUS, ASSETS, PROFIT OR LOSS

A most comprehensive statistical study of the motion picture industry, submitted to NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, by Sol A. Rosenblatt, deputy administrator, is presented in full on this and the three following pages. The tables are supplementary to Mr. Rosenblatt's report, following a six-months investigation, which was ordered in President Roosevelt's Executive Order of Nov. 27, 1933, the order having accompanied the Presidential approval of the code. At that time Mr. Roosevelt temporarily suspended the code clause on talent raiding and excessive salaries. Mr. Rosenblatt, in his current report, recommended further suspension of those provisions.

The statistical information is presented under three general classifications: Gross receipts, surplus, assets, profits or loss (on this page); individuals, payrolls, average compensation (see pages 32 and 33); compensation by classes—per cent of total compensation to all individuals (see pages 33 and 34).

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Manhattan Melodrama" furnished an appropriate setting for the dramatic killing of John Dillinger, arch criminal of the age, who was shot down by Department of Justice operatives as he walked quietly and unconcerned last Sunday evening from the 900-seat neighborhood Biograph theatre on Chicago's northside. Dillinger had just seen Metro's picture about a gangland murderer who died in the electric chair. A few minutes later the federal men brought to an end the greatest manhunt in contemporary criminal annals. "Manhattan Melodrama" moved with the same swift tempo in which the notorious criminal had lived.

Shielded for an hour or two under the cloak of darkness within the Biograph showhouse, Dillinger sat quietly and watched the lights of Sing Sing's death house dim suddenly as if the prison's electrical system was reflecting the nervous tension of an approaching electrocution. He saw the screen villain of Metro-Goldwyn's production stumble down the corridor from his cell into the little green room at Ossining, to pay with his life for a career of bloody crime.

Many have wondered since Sunday if Dillinger felt even a little uneasy as he watched the slow-moving march to the chair. Did he at that moment shudder from a realization that he might be the victim of a similar fate, by "burning" or the hangman's noose? Certainly he could not have guessed that within a few seconds his lights would darken completely as he, too, stumbled, but under the leaden fire of a squad of federal men who had been planted about the theatre lobby on Lincoln Avenue, hiding behind displays of "Manhattan Melodrama" to be ready in an instant to kill him.

Fate treated Dillinger to a glimpse of a ruthless murderer being put to death by the law, while it made ready for his death just a few steps away.

Much sleep has been lost of late by our tired old frame the while trying to guess the identity of the actor who is listed anonymously in Mr. Rosenblatt's NRA motion picture salary report as having received compensation of $315,000 last year. The difficulty is our complete inability to guess the identity of any actor who is worth that much—$200 an hour for every hour of a six-hour day during every five-day week in the year.

Regardless, the betting is even along Broadway that this highest paid person in the motion picture industry is either 52-year-old John Barrymore, an actor for 31 years, or Missouri-born Wallace Beery, whose career also spans three decades.

First of the Hollywood colony to have their motion picture careers blasted by the Legion of Decency are 20 parrots. The cockatoos had been taught by Paramount to chirp, "It Ain't No Sin" for Mae West's new feature. Came the church crusade and "It Ain't No Sin" was sent to the laundry, emerging with the fresh title of "Belle of the Nineties," but without the 20 parrots.

Mr. Harry Morris Warner underlays a row of cigars in his traveling humidor with sliced apples, to impart a flavor, of course. When our young Victor Shapiro saw the fruit under the smokes while traveling eastward from Hollywood on the same train, last weekend, he thought Mr. Warner was carrying along a snack of lunch from the studio kitchen at Burbank.

Rotund and bubbling Tony Muto, Hays aide de camp, rushed breathlessly back to Broadway from the south to report that he had actually found an American citizen who knew nothing about Hollywood.

"Was I flabbergasted? Was I preposterized?" he Durante-d.

Mr. Tony (Back to Nature) Muto, who once posed as an American Indian to evade a threatening game warden who had surprised him, unlicensed, beside a promising fishing stream, started out last weekend on an expedition through rural Virginia. Marching into the isolated place of Lorton, in the deep backwoods, where George Washington attended church, he happened across one Price Carpenter, an unshaven native member of an old aristocratic family, who had long since abandoned the polish of the Colonial mansion for a life in the raw in the woods.

"Say, pardner," bellowed the Virginian, "what do you do for a living?"

"Sir, I am a member of the staff of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Incorporated, Mr. Will H. Hays, president."

"Oh, yes," acknowledged the backwoodsman, "that's in the movie business? You have a lotta actresses, doncha? I've been sorta reading about 'em in Hollywood. By the way, where the hell is that place Hollywood—up north near the Capitol at Washington?"

Some of our best office anatomists have been burning the proverbial midnight oil tracing the history of theatricals and motion pictures. They are trying to find a record of a head as large as that mentioned the other day by Variety, which told how the stage producer, Sam H. Harris, fell down stairs at his newly rented Park Avenue duplex apartment, and "struck his head at the base of the spine."

One of the popular topics now being discussed in connection with the church crusade, is the unsuccessful box-office performances of many fine productions which should have been supported by those who are now demanding a higher morality standard in the cinema. "Abraham Lincoln," of a few years ago, is singled out as a notable example of a worthwhile production having "died" at the theatre doorstep. In Springfield, Illinois, the home of President Abraham Lincoln, particularly poor business was reported—only 20 people in the whole town going to see the picture.

The father of the animated film cartoon system of motion picture production had never seen the inside of a regular studio until last week when he visited Metro's plant at Culver City. He is Professor Robert Williams Wood, head of the physics department of Johns Hopkins University, and one of the world's most distinguished scientists, having originated the method now in use of thawing frozen street mains and service pipes by passing an electric current through them. That was in 1898. A few months later he produced the first animated film drawing when he drew some 300 diagrams and photographed them to show an electrical experiment in motion.

"Stardom's Hollywood Diet," a diet "wonder of the ages," guaranteed to produce sylphlike figures like those seen strutting down Hollywood Boulevard, has been receiving harsh treatment at the hands of a realistically minded United States Food and Drug Administration. Lots of "Hollywood Diet" has been seized in Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Detroit and elsewhere, under the federal food and drug act.

The label on the "Hollywood Diet" is just too thrilling. It asserts: "The possibility of your having an exciting type of Hollywood figure is now so real as to be absolutely breath-taking, and to gain it you won't have to go hungry, engage in violent exercises, use drugs or resort to laxatives."

One need not be a graduate chemist to detect the sugar, flour, cocoa and table-salt ingredients that are mixed together in a fancy jar to sell at $2 for a seven-ounce package.

The real "Hollywood Diet" is well known to hundreds of jobless actors.

British Film Academy Proposed; Associated Cinemas Completes Reorganizing; New Productions

By BRUCE ALLEN
London Correspondent

Herbert Thompson, editor of Film Weekly, made the suggestion that a British Film Academy be established, at a Savoy luncheon held last week for the presentation of that publication's award for the "Best British Film of 1933" to Michael Balcon, Victor Saville and Madeleine Carroll, producer, director and star, respectively, of "I Was a Spy," the Gaumont-British film which won a majority of readers' votes.

Mr. Thompson, emphasizing the need of a body which should recognize the work performed by at present anonymous members of production staffs, emphasized that the Academy must be composed of members whose impartiality and integrity were above reproach. He was supported by, among others, S. W. Smith of British Lion and by Victor Saville, who read a list of the "credits" due on "I Was a Spy" to illustrate the extent to which production is a corporative affair.

Although G-B captured Film Weekly's awards (Miss Carroll gaining the Best Performance honor) for the second year in succession, chief of production, Walter Mycroft of British International Pictures and representatives of other British production units were among those who gathered to honor the recipients, and to applaud Mr. Thompson's statement that 117 British films had competed for the award against 28 in 1928, when Film Weekly inaugurated the competition.

Toeplitz Plans Costume Film

Toeplitz Productions, Ltd., recently formed by L. Toeplitz de Grand Roy, previously co-managing director of London Film Productions, Ltd., is already busy on the details of its first production, "The Dictator," for which Clive Brook has been signed.

The 18th century court of Christian VII of Denmark will provide the setting, with Brook playing the historical role of Struensee, a country doctor who became the favorite of Queen Caroline and the virtual ruler of the country.

Associated Completes Reorganization

Approximately 95 per cent of the shareholders of Association British Cinemas, Ltd., and of British Instructional Films (Proprietors), Ltd., accepted the offer of Associated British Picture Corporation, Ltd., for acquisition of the shares of the other two companies. The purchase now becomes compulsory as regards the small minority of dissenting shareholders.

Allotment of new shares to complete these transactions brings the A. B. C. capital to £2,933,557 (over $14,600,000) consisting of 1,383,557 first cumulative 6 per cent £1 ($5) preference shares, out of 1,750,000 authorized 6,200,000 5/- ($1) ordinaries, out of 6,200,000 authorized. This completes the consolidation under one title of the "Maxwell group," comprising the A. B. C. circuit of 200 theatres; British International Pictures, Ltd., the Elstree producing unit; British Instructional Films, Ltd., of Welwyn; Pathe Pictures, Ltd., distributors and newsreel producers, and Wardour Films, Ltd., distributors of B. Shock

Drama

A story of the war, a victim of shell-shock and its aftermath, this picture offers a rather time-worn story, and something of a problem for the exhibitor. There are virtually two phases to that selling problem, one, and perhaps the primary consideration, to judge by various reports of the larger body of exhibitors in smaller situations, is the pronounced King's English accent of all of the players. The individual exhibitor will be best able to judge the probable reaction to that situation on the part of the majority of his patronage, and govern himself accordingly. That accent, however, is wholly in keeping with the setting of the story, its locale divided between London and the front line trenches.

The other half of the problem is the absence of outstanding selling cast names and the somewhat elderly story, in point of development. Ralph Forbes is the leading player, and opposite is Gwenllian Gill, borrowed from Paramount, recently given a contract by that company, and a newcomer to the American screen. The future appearance angle may make a build-up of her name worth while. The other players are either slightly familiar or unknown.

The story has a certain amount of action in the trenches, but for the most part is along the lines of a stage production transplanted to the screen. One good bit of action pictures a fight between an English and a German plane. Up to a certain point the film gives some indication of tending in the direction of another "Journey's End," but that does not materialize. The story veers sharply, and results in a situation which finds a shell-shock victim falling in love with his wife all over again, without knowing her as his wife, and at the same time becoming furiously jealous of the woman's missing husband, who is himself. That indicates a thought for copy lines.

Forbes, young British officer on leave, marries Miss Gill, whom he has known but a short time, and who, it is understood, has been loved by Monroe Owsley, fellow-officer. Owsley's younger brother, who idolizes Forbes, is the only witness to the wedding. The two return to the trenches, and the youngster, Douglas Walton, is ordered out with a scouting party. Afraid, he commits suicide, and Owsley and Forbes put his body across the parapet to make it appear the boy was killed in action. Forbes takes his place with the scouting party, is shell-shocked, reported missing, and wakes in a London hospital, his mind completely blank.

Miss Gill continues to hope, despite Owsley's efforts to make her forget her husband. Forbes, released from the hospital with a different name, is assigned to a non-fighting unit, is seen in the street by Owsley, and Owsley assumes the failure to recognize him is deliberate evasion. He warns Miss Gill of the disgrace which will come to her if her husband is found. Forbes is transferred and is finally discharged at the end of the war as a major. His subordinate in the flying corps, with whom he crashes, is Miss Gill's sister, and he visits her, not recognizing her as his wife. He attempts to help her, promises to assist her to find her husband, and finally, falling in love with Miss Gill, becomes bitterly resentful and jealous of her missing husband. Eventually, after a quarrelsome conversation with Owsley, his memory is suddenly restored, he remembers the past, and is reunited with his wife.—Aaronson, New York.

Produced and distributed by Monogram. Direction and story by Roy J. Pomeroy. Screen play by Madeline Ruthven. Film editor, Jack Ogilvie. Sound, John A. Stransky, Jr. Release date, July 20, 1934. Running time, 69 minutes.

Comedy-Drama

Name power, plus a story with definite entertainment and exploitation values, jumps this one into the category of a showman's show. Putting reverse English on the familiar Cinderella theme, the story involves a rich man's daughter, Janet Gaynor, who, fed up with the butterfly activities of the social set, casts her fortune as a hireling in the kitchens of the wealthy. Light story treatment makes comedy the predominant factor. Sweden is the novel locale. Clean and thoroughly entertaining, this production has mass appeal.

An important addition to the film, which was not in the preview showing, is a novelty Walt Disney color dream sequence.

The story opens with Miss Gaynor and her fiance, G. P. Huntley, Jr., in a dilemma on the subject of their honeymoon. As they've seen everything, the beauty spots of Europe take on a dull hue. Walter Connolly, wealthy father of the girl, gets bad news at the critical moment, which seems to settle ideas of a honeymoon of any sort. Undaunted, the two decide to promote themselves jobs and work out their own salvation, the agreement being made for three months until they can get on their feet. Connolly protests the move as unnecessary, but the lovers are enthusiastic over the idea as a lark.

After wearing out much shoe leather, the girl finally lands a job as a maid and cook in the household of Ned Sparks, a calamity howler who eternally visions an early grave just around the corner. There follows a particularly amusing comedy scene in which Miss Gaynor does a walkout.

The yarn gains momentum when she lines up with a wealthy but homely Swedish family, the master of the house portrayed by Siegfried Rumann. A harmless, strained relationship springs up between the girl and the chauffeur, Lew Ayres, who is also an inventive genius. Things are finally smoothed over and romance blossoms, which turns into a love triangle when the beautiful daughter of their employer goes after Ayres in search of a thrill.

A particularly noisy incident evolving from the love triangle causes Miss Gaynor and Ayres to lose their jobs and Ayres to realize he is in love with Miss Gaynor.

The conclusion finds the two splitting up over the girl's fiance, whom Miss Gaynor later finds in the arms of a rich widow. Ayres and Miss Gaynor lose each other but are ultimately united when Connolly advertises in the paper for a chauffeur with Ayres' particular brand of inventive genius. Connolly is so impressed with Ayres' invention of a low cost speedboat that he consents to provide the backing.

This is entertainment for everyone. It's entirely up to the showman to take advantage of the wealth of exploitation possibilities, star names and lilting humor.—Watt, Hollywood.

Straight Is The Way

(MGM)

Romantic Drama

Showmanship assets of this production are a careful combination of cast names and a blend of heart interest drama. Laughs and sobs intermingle.

Being a story built for emotional responses, it conflicts a boy just out of prison returning home to feel the urge of the old life and the pull of an underworld flame, against the love of a girl who loves him more than he does her. The film skirts the gangster angle completely, deviating thereby from the play, "Four Walls," from which it was adapted.

Franchot Tone, home from jail, is met by his mother, May Robson, and a friend of his lonesome mamma, Karen Morley. Tone decides to go straight, but Gladys George insinuates herself again into his life much to the chagrin of Jack LaRue, leader of the mob formerly ruled over by Tone.

In a jealous rage, LaRue comes upon George and Tone on the tenement house roof. In the scuffle, LaRue falls off the roof. Tone is cross-examined by detective C. Henry Gordon, and with the forces of the law about to close in on Tone again, and Morley bereft at her possible loss, a plausible denouement keeps everything happy.

Human interest being the predominating element, the East Side background teeming with vivid highlights of tenement house people is fit setting for the heart throbs evolved.

Suspense marks the dramatic conflict with an exciting tempo maintained throughout.

Tone, with his romantic draw, and May Robson as a lovely pathetic mother, offer showmen names and characters to play up, together with Jack LaRue for menace and Gladys George for eye appeal.

Direction is in the mood of stirring heart

Here's what happened at the Preview!

(SUBJECT: Confidential Preview Report)

Twenty-three hundred people in San Diego are talking about one thing today —and that is HAROLD LLOYD'S new picture, THE CAT'S PAW, which was previewed here last night for the first time.

The story (and when I say story, I mean story) did not drag in a single spot, and the surprise finish sent patrons away with something to talk about for weeks to come.

The audience sat spellbound—they were seeing Lloyd in a picture entirely devoid of excess slapstick and hokum, and yet a picture beaming with clean humor and wholesome laughter. There isn't a let-up of action from the beginning to the hilarious surprise finish.

Furthermore, the picture will be received with open arms by those various groups which at this time are insisting on "family entertainment." Every exhibitor who plays Fox product next year will thank you for this one. Let me be the first to extend my congratulations.

Their Big Moment

Comedy-Mystery

The comedy draw names of Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville, combined with the title, indicate the showman's approach. It's comedy-mystery which holds attention and abounds in typical laugh-provoking situations. Dealing with the exposé of a fake spirit medium by a stage magician and his accomplices, the story offers a novel plot for the screen team.

Miss Pitts and Summerville are plants for the Great La Salle, a stage magician, played by William Gaxton. The socially prominent Farringtons, portrayed by Kay Johnson and Huntly Gordon, are trying to get rid of Ralph Morgan, the bogus doctor and medium, who fakes spirit messages to Julie Haydon, supposedly from her dead husband. Morgan's idea is to hypnotize his subject into signing over her bankroll. Bruce Cabot hires the Great LaSalle and his gang to show up the doctor, but the troupe is handicapped by the last minute walkout of their medium, Tamara Geva. Miss Pitts is elected to substitute, aided and abetted by the pickpocket activities of Summerville.

The first seance at the Farrington homes goes off with a bang, with Pitts actually going into a trance and putting several members of the group on the spot. Gaxton sees his plans go haywire but decides to follow through on the tips supplied by Miss Pitts during her seance.

The romantic thread is carried by Miss Pitts and Summerville, who decide to make it a two-some at the fadeout.—WATT, Hollywood.

Housewife

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

There is nothing new in this picture, which is obviously a refurbishing of the old domestic triangle formulae, but the film is marked by good performance and succeeded in holding interest at the previewing. The story tells of an ordinary hosewife who turns out to be the brains of the family. Slaving to promote her husband into the big money class, she is almost robbed of happiness by another woman in the midst of success. The picture has definite appeal for women and is ripe for heavy exploitation.

Striking a familiar note in almost any modern American home, the story gets off with George Brent and Ann Dvorak portraying an average married couple. Brent is strapped down to an office manager's desk in an advertising firm, where every stroke of individuality is throttled by the big boss almost before it is born. His wife has her hands full at home with domestic duties and the care of the youngster, played by Ronnie Cosby.

The arrival of Bette Davis, former school chum of the couple and now a high salaried ad copy writer, serves as a stimulus for their sleeping ambitions. Joining the ad firm, she remembers to reflect on Brent's former football activities and potential capabilities, in the presence of both. This spurs Miss Dvorak to get after Brent and urge him either to express some individual ideas at the office or get out and start his own business. He tries the first, is told to get out and tend to his own business, and finally walks off the job.

His wife has saved enough to start his own advertising firm and he does, but for six months there is no business. Finally she gets him tipsy and with new self-confidence he lands a big account.

Brent hires Miss Davis to write the copy, and the firm moves up into the money.

Climaxing hard-earned success, Brent starts playing around with Miss Davis, resulting in his wife suing for divorce. Meanwhile, John Halliday, one of Brent's clients, has realized his love for Miss Dvorak, and proposes marriage.

The divorce trial is the comedy high spot. Ignoring all rules and regulations of the court, the two principals in the case indulge in ridiculous banter across the room. As Brent rushes up to the witness stand pleading to call the whole thing off, the judge checks the case off the calendar.

Comedy and drama are the chief elements for showmen to plug, with particular attention to the feminine contingent.—WATT, Hollywood.

The Notorious Sophie Lang

(Paramount)

Melodrama

A fast-paced melodramatic film story of a notorious feminine thief, with a particular leaning toward jewels of value and importance, this has the elements of engaging and entertaining picture fare, requiring no unusual concentration, no unusual deductive power, but providing a merry chase and a game of hide-and-go-seek between the "notorious Sophie Lang" and the police department, ostensibly of New York City. The feminine Raffles in the case is an appealing young woman who has her wits about her.

The film is saved from the onus of having a crook besting the police, current conditions being what they are, by the fact that London police are warned that she and her co-worker are on the way, leaving the story with the implication that their escape is a matter only of the moment. In addition considerable comedy studs the rapidly-moving play of events in the life of the dashing Sophie, who goes so far from her intended way as to fall completely in love with her only rival, another "notorious" from overseas.

The film in no instance is to be taken too seriously as drama, but rather emerges as an entertaining comedy-melodrama. The cast names are not of unusual drawing power, with Gertrude Michael successful as Sophie, Paul Cavanagh as the rival crook, Arthur Byron as the police inspector and Leon Errol and Alison Skipworth excellent in comedy roles. It would perhaps be well, in selling the title, that the exhibitor confine himself to the comedy-melodramatic elements of the story.

The inspector, Byron, is disturbed to learn that Sophie Lang, who never has been seen, is on the rampage again, with various jewelry establishments as the object of her attention. Visited by Sir Nigel, whom he recognizes as a famous international crook (Cavanagh), Byron permits Cavanagh to go free without indicating he knows him, hoping Cavanagh eventually will lead him to Sophie Lang. Errol, detective, trails Cavanagh. Miss Michael, with her faithful, and amusing companion, Miss Skipworth, sets a romantic trap for Cavanagh, and he falls in, head-over-heels. Her comedy turns serious when she realizes she loves him.

They both, separately, go after a certain famous pearl necklace. Sophie wins, but at their dinner engagement next day, Cavanagh steals them, not knowing which they are, or the true identity of his companion. The police arrest Cavanagh with the pearls, Miss Michael steals them from the inspector, and the chase is on. She flees through and about the hotel, and Cavanagh, overpowering and impersonating a visiting foreign officer in the hotel, makes good his escape in the officer's resplendent uniform. Miss Michael rushes to the car, jumps in with Cavanagh and the pair drive off with an escort of motorcycle policemen. Safely they make an outgoing steamer, set sail for Europe, as the inspector, mollified by the return of much of the jewelry the two had stolen individually, cables foreign police to watch for the romantic—and criminal—couple.

The film is an adult attraction; should be found satisfactory in a mid-week position, and can be sold as engaging comedy-melodrama.—AARONSON, New York.

Brides of Sulu

(Exploration Pictures)

Adventure

The outstanding merit of this film lies in the photography by Harry Anderson and its unique setting on the Islands of Jolo and Mindanao in the Philippine Archipelago. Up until this time the locale has been virgin territory for the camera. Although the picture is mounted on the thin threads of a story involving native love and religion, it never becomes more than a travelogue, which in itself is continually marred by self-conscious portrayals on the part of the native cast and uneven sound recording. Inasmuch as narration is employed above the native background sound, the best showman's line for this one is as a travelogue.

The story involves the love of Kapura, willful daughter of the Sultan of Sulu, for Arsan, a Christian believer. The Sultan promises his daughter to one of his own faith but the two elope to an adjacent island. The Sultan's followers, aroused by the disgrace brought on their people through the elopement of a Mohammedan believer and a Christian, follow them to the island and return them for subsequent punishment.

The weak climax and fadeout find the Sultan relenting to Kapura's entreaties to marry the one she loves and promising to let her go ahead with her plans providing Arsan becomes of their faith.

A good musical score adds to the color of natives dances and scenery. The manner in which the film is sold will depend largely on the territory and house location.—WATT, Hollywood.

Musical Romance

This ambitious British musical production offers many and valuable angles for showmanship and salesmanship. Primarily, there's the fact that the leading role is taken by Richard Tauber, most famous tenor in the world. Then too there is the scale and high artistic merit of the production, and the fact that the story pictures the love story of Franz Schubert, greatest of all the musicians who have come from Vienna, and reproduces many of the loveliest of his songs. The atmosphere of the Vienna of tradition is successfully reproduced. The sentiment and whimsicality of the episode gives the production, in an eighteenth century dress, something of the charm of Dresden china.

It is as good a piece of work as has yet come from a British studio, its obvious box office values backed by real artistry of direction and acting.

Tauber, a tenor almost in the Caruso class as a selling value to the musical public, is most happily cast as Franz Schubert. He acts attractively and subtly, sings "Hark, Hark the Lark!" "Impatience," "Red Roses" and "Faith in Spring," and is presented as a suitor who sacrifices his own happiness in order that the girl may marry her noble officer-sweetheart.

The story is told by Paul Stein, a director who believes in half-tones but also uses vivid splashes of color and incident. Schubert is seen as the absent-minded, unworldly musician lodging with a Viennese dancing master and in love with his daughter, Vicki. The Archduchess of Austria is a lady who loves dancing; her Guard officers are paraded in a long line in the ballroom and each in turn must dance with her. Lieutenant Rudi, before he faces the ordeal, comes for a hasty lesson from Vicki's father, Wimpassenger. Vicki is his partner, Schubert the accompanist. Rudi makes a rendezvous with Vicki. Unfortunately he dances so well that the Archduchess takes him into her personal suite and plans to marry him to a Baroness.

Schubert makes shy love to Vicki, but will not speak until after a concert of his works, which he expects to establish his fame. He misreads her replies to his hints and thinks she will welcome his declaration. The concert is held; the tenor falls ill but Schubert takes his place, sings the songs himself and is famous in a night. Then he learns that Vicki loves Rudi and that Rudi dare not marry her for fear of the Archduchess. So he writes a lampoon on the autocrat, is arrested and carried to her cabinet, and there so successfully pleads the cause of the lovers that an immediate marriage is ordered. While the ceremony proceeds, Schubert, in the midst of his choir-boys, leads the Ave Maria.

The settings, whether studio or exteriors, are admirable; there are big scenes in the ballroom and wedding episodes, charming fantasy in such episodes as that in which Schubert leads his class of boys singing through the meadows in blossom time.

Other names besides that of Tauber are Jane Baxter as a charming Vicki, Athene Seyler in a mordantly humorous study of the Archduchess, and a very amusing picture of a worldly wise dance master by Paul Graetz.—ALLAN, London.

Lost in the Legion

(B.I.P.-British)

Extravaganza

This picture is a typical example of a brand of British stage and screen production paralleling roughly the kind of entertainment purveyed by Joe E. Brown in American terms. Salesmanship methods are indicated by this classification; it is burlesque of the broadest, with some musical trimmings. A lot depends on how the distinctive personal methods of Leslie Fuller go down with American audiences. He is good box office in England.

The story is that of a ship's cook on a transport carrying French Foreign Legion troops to Algiers. He falls afoul of a bullying sergeant, who promises to make his life hell if ever he joins the Legion. Involved in a fight with the retainers of a local sheik, who are abducting two pretty English dancers for the harem, the cook and his mate are captured, escape by a ruse and then fall into the grip of a Legion troop and are forcibly enlisted. The cook encounters the sergeant, but gallantry in action wins his release and discharge, in custody of the dance girls.

The story matters less than the effective absurdity of incident. Typical are the scenes in which the cooks play "strip poker" with their gaolers, leaving the guards naked in the cells, and their masquerade as harem beauties, embarrassed by the fact that the sheik likes his dancing girls to strip. There is a good scene, too, in which the Legion Colonel, haranguing his troops, steps backwards into the tunnel which the escaping prisoners have dug from their cells—to the parade ground!

The best exploitation angle for this is probably to be found in the fact that it pokes fun at the Foreign Legion, about which so many serious and blood-curdling films have been written. There is good material also in the hamen scenes, and the spectacle of the fat cook asked to perform an "unveiling" dance. The cast has some very good British names in addition to Fuller, including Renee Houston, the vaudeville star, and Bromley Davenport, one of the best known actors on the West End stage. —ALLAN, London.

Unusual Color Subject

Currently ready for release by Radio is a short subject, produced by Kenneth Macgowan and Pioneer Pictures, of which John Hay Whitney is president, which features a new technique in the use of color and achieves what may readily be termed the best that color has yet offered. A slight dramatic story has been developed in the setting of a Mexican cantina, for which the artist, Robert Edmund Jones, designed both settings and costumes. Featured are Steffi Duna, singer and dancer in the cantina; Don Alvarado, dancer, and Paul Porcasi, Mexico City impresario. Jealousy, a lovers' quarrel, engaging comedy are blended in a skillfuly made short subject. The title song is a particularly attractive melody. But more important is the effect which has been attained in what is actually an experimental subject with a new Technicolor development. The setting and situation have afforded an opportunity for brilliant colors, and their reproduction has been accomplished with remarkable softness and well-nigh perfect blending. No matter what the theatre situation, the subject, by virtue of its expert use of color alone, has the stuff that makes unusual attractiveness. The exhibitor should sell it as a worthwhile subject. Running time, 20 minutes.—C. S. A.

Goofy Movies

(MGM)

Laugh-Provoker

At a New York neighborhood theatre, which might be considered typical, one of this series aroused the audience to successive outbursts of laughter. Combining the Goofy Newsreel, with its nonsensical burleque of the straight reel, and an equally ridiculous play on a melodrama of the screen's early days, plus the bright patter of Pete Smith, the subject unquestionably satisfied the audience in question.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Screen Snapshots

For the Fans

The fans among the audience should find a certain amount of interest in this number of the Snapshots series, in which the personalities of the screen are seen in odd moments off the set in Hollywood. Moving from golf links to the exclusive Mayfair club, the camera picks up shots of Randy Scott, Guy Kibbee, W. C. Fields, Johnny Weissmuller, Lupe Velez, Jimmy Durante, Al Jolson, Marion Davies and numerous others.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Mysterious Kiss

(Vitaphone)

Fair

A fair number of the Broadway Brevities series, this subject features Jeanne Aubert, vocalist, who renders a few numbers in fairly effective fashion. At a country house party Miss Aubert is mysteriously kissed, as she had never been kissed before, during a masquerade ball, by a masked man. She institutes a hunt for the "thief," which necessitates her testing the ability of all the men present. Eventually, to her surprise, she discovers the guilty gentleman to have been her husband. The subject has a girl and boy dance number or two and is fairly entertaining.—Running time, 21 minutes.

How Do I Know It's Sunday?

(Vitaphone)

Entertaining

One of the Merrie Melodies numbers, this is reasonably entertaining and an amusing cartoon subject which should be especially pleasing for the youngsters, and perhaps equally enjoyable for the elders in the audience.—Running time, 7 minutes.

52 FEATURES GIVEN CERTIFICATES
SHOWMANSHIP AND A DICKENS FILM
33 FEATURES FILMING, 8 SHORTS

By VICTOR SHAPIRO
Hollywood Correspondent

EVERYONE in the production division, from the property boy up to the highest executive, focused attention this week in carrying out the requirements of the Production Code.

As evidence of the producers' willingness to keep the screen clean, 56 features, 48 shorts and four serials have received the certificate of approval from the Hays office since the ruling went into effect July 15. A small percentage of finished product is being turned back for minor changes, but this is expected to be further decreased by having scripts vised before being placed before the cameras.

The Screen Writers' Guild and the Writers' Branch of the Academy stepped into the arena and the limelight last week. The Guild delivered itself of a long statement on the movement to clean up the screen, while the Academy announced the support of seven major studios for its Writer-Producer code adopted two years ago.

An official bulletin of authorship records has been established at Academy headquarters.

The Code of the Screen Writers' Guild, now being drawn up under the industry's Code of the Five-Five Committee, has not yet been published.

Eddie Grainger and Dickens

Dickens' works being the production rage of the monent, Eddie Grainger, Universal producer, posed himself a knotty problem by tackling the filming of the "Mystery of Edwin Drood," the one work Sir Charles left uncompleted when he died.

Bradley King and Leopold Atlas were assigned to do the screen play, with instructions not to write a finish. Then Mr. Grainger sent out an SOS to all Dickensian Societies asking them to suggest a proper Dickens solution in the mood, spirit and flavor of the revered novelist.

Deluged with responses, he called in Miss Ida Moore, vice-president of the local Dickens Club, to act as sort of technical advisor.

Sifting all the material brought forth a solution which King and Atlas tacked onto their uncompleted scrip.

An all-English cast will enact the roles, and maybe the Dickens Clubs will have something to do with exploiting the production when it's completed, although they may not know how it all came about.

Theatre Guild Looks Studio-ward

Leading lights of New York's Theatre Guild, once cool to the lowly films, are invading Hollywood.

Theresa Helburn, one of the Guild's founders and for years on the steering committee, is now in Hollywood with Columbia, reading scripts, absorbing film technique and intricacies, as a prep school course which may lead to directing and supervising.

Another Guild convert is Philip Moeller, stage director of some of the Guilds' biggest successes, an erudite and scholarly gentleman, who has just completed his first directorial work for Radio, "Age of Innocence."

33 Features in Production

Production activity last week perked up slightly with a total of 33 features and 8 shorts in actual production, as against 32 and 7 the preceding week. The same period last year showed only 29 features in work.

Ten new features were started last week against 8 finished. Among those placed before the cameras was MGM's "Death on the Diamond," featuring Robert Young and Madge Evans.

Fox started "Marie Galante" with Spencer Tracy and Ketti Gallian.

"Just Out of College," with Jean Muir and Allen Jenkins, is Warners'.

Ben Lyon and Sari Maritza are featured in Mascot's "Crimson Romance."

"Rocky Rhodes," with Buck Jones and Sheila Terry, was put into production by Universal.

Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea are featured in "The Richest Girl in the World" for RKO.

"The Red Head," with Bruce Cabot and Grace Bradley, and "The Successful Failure," with William Collier, Sr., and Lucille Gleason went into production at Monogram.

"A Girl Must Live," with Dorothy Wilson and Charles Starrett, for Invincible, and "Wagon Wheels," with Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick, Raymond Hatton and Monte Blue for Paramount, completed the list.

Pictures finished included "The Hide-Out," MGM; "Big Hearted Herbert," Warner; "The Human Side," Universal; "The Fountain," RKO; "The Girl of the Limberlost" and "King Kelly of U. S. A.," Monogram; "Peck's Bad Boy," Principal, and "The Merry Widow," MGM.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion at the studios as seen by Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

THE HUMAN SIDE

This picture should be particularly appealing to women. It involves a wife's devotion and sacrifice for a butterfly stage producer. It's the human side of professional dramatic life. It's new and is suggestive of a definite brand of showmanship. The film is adapted from a play by Christine Ames, which was purchased by Universal after a Hollywood preview. Frank Craven, author of "The First Year," and Ernest Pascal collaborated on the screen play. Direction and adaptation are by Eddie Buzzell, who directed "Cross Country Cruise."

The cast is better than average, listing Adolphe Menjou in the lead role. Doris Kenyon, who last appeared in "Counsellor At Law," is the feminine lead. These names are strengthened by Charlotte Henry, known for her role in "Alice in Wonderland," and scheduled for a featured part in "Babes in Toyland" for Hal Roach. Others are Dickie Moore, Reginald Owen, who was prominent in "Countess of Monte Cristo," Joseph Cawthorn and Jack Mulhall.

The story is keyed to modern times and fits in well with the present clean pictures program. It is apparently good propaganda in defense of the home. Menjou is a stage producer who stages one flop after another. He chisels the do-re-mi from wealthy ladies, who angel his productions in return for his personal companionship. His wife, portrayed by Miss Kenyon, sticks by him and they finally work out a box office knockout together.

As a theatrical yarn, shorn of the usual glittering tinsel and synthetic fol-de-rol, the film has the potentialities of bringing a human element sock right into the home of the feminine contingent. The nature of the production also carries a suggestion to showmen of a generous portion of mass appeal.—WATT.

SERENADE

Fox

Based on an incident in the brief but productive life of the composer Franz Schubert, this is a love story intended to show Schubert for the first time as a romanticist. The locale is Vienna in the nineteenth century and is adapted to the particular period when the musical genius produced such classics as "Serenade," "Moment Musical," "Who is Sylvia," "Impatience." These numbers are heard as an incidental part of the background and are suggestive of numerous tieups for showmen. The story is an original by Richard Carroll, former editor of Liberty Magazine. William Counselman and Henry Johnson did the screen play; Lynn Starling and Sally Sandlin the adaptation. Direction is by James Tinling, whose last effort was the recently released "Call It Luck."

The romantic interest centers on Pat Patterson, English screen actress, who made her American debut in "Bottoms Up," and Nils Asther, of "Crime Doctor" and "Madame Spy," who portrays Schubert. Herbert Mundin, Fox's perennial butler, Harry Green, featured in "Wild Gold" and James Burke, remembered for "College Humor," are teamed for comedy interest. Additional names of prominence are Albert Conti, Georgia Kane and Henry B. Walthall.

Romance blossoms after a casual meeting of a royal-blooded princess with Schubert at the composer's lonely forest hideout on the outskirts of Vienna. Suspense centers on the intervention of royal interests, with the princess willing to forsake throne and all for an obscure life with Schubert.

The colorful Viennese background, charged with romantic flavor and a story dealing with an actual vivid personality in the world of art, point to a strong showman's approach. The famous compositions of Schubert to be heard in the film suggest a wealth of profitable tieups.—WATT.

PECK'S BAD BOY

Principal - Sol Lesser

The theme of this story points to the showmanship possibilities. It's human interest stuff, a dramatic chronicle of a real boy and the malicious contrivings of two relatives to split the closely knit pal-ship of the boy and his foster father. The story, by George W. Peck, is well known to American readers and was filmed several years ago with Jackie Coogan in the lead role. The screen play is by Marguerite Roberts and Bernard Schubert. The last-named just completed the screen play for MGM'S "Straight Is the Way." Eddie Kline is the director.

The names of Jackie Cooper and Thomas Meighan offer a pleasing father and son combination. Here is opportunity for timely showmanship as follow-up on "Treasure Island," which young Cooper just completed. The other important players are Dorothy Peterson, who portrayed featured roles in "Treasure Island," "Men in White," and "As the Earth Turns," Jackie Searle, another well known child actor recently seen in "Murder on the Blackboard," for RKO and "She Was a Lady" for Fox, and O. P. Heggie, portrayer of numerous featured character roles.

The familiar story deals with a lad who is not really bad, but earns a murky reputation through the unceasing efforts of his Aunt Lily and her boy Horace. From the same source he discovers one day that he is not the real son of Peck, but was adopted from an orphanage. He runs away but the love of father and son is finally renewed and they are united through the efforts of a friend.

The nature of the story, familiarity with the title and the featured cast names offer sufficient indication of the showmanship possibilities therein and the class of patrons to aim at.—WATT.

MILLION DOLLAR RANSOM

Universal

Author, title and story indicate showman's values. It's an adaptation of the Damon Runyon story, "Ransom $1,000,000," which recently ran serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine. Apparently the film is hectic action-packed comedy smacking of typical Runyon satire. As in other yarns by this author, the story fringes lightly with gangsterism, this time featuring a former bootlegger who tries to quit the game but becomes involved in trying to prevent his friend's mother from marrying a gigolo. William R. Lipman penned the screen play. Ben Ryan is credited with the dialogue. The director is Murray Roth, whose most recent efforts are "Harold Teen" and "Don't Bet On Love."

The cast names are familiar. Phillips Holmes, who last appeared in "Storm At Daybreak," shares the top spot with Edward Arnold, most recently in "Sadie McKee," "Thirty-Day Princess," "Madame Spy" and numerous others. Mary Carlisle, seen in "Palooka," "Murder in the Private Car" and "Handy Andy," has the feminine lead. Additional names of importance are Andy Devine, most recently in "Stingaree" with Richard Dix, Wini Shaw, New York musical comedy actress who makes her screen debut here, Marjorie Gateson and Robert Gleckler.

Marked by Runyon's characteristic tongue in the cheek humor, the story gets off to a riproaring start centering on a guy who has just finished a term up the river for income tax evasion. He reluctantly jumps into the kidnap racket on a deal with a rich chap, who figures that if he arranges for himself to be kidnapped, his mother will postpone her trip to Europe, where she is slated to marry a gigolo. The scheme works but the ex-prisoner gets himself in bad with his former gang for not cutting them in, with serious results. The usual satirical twist finds romance, comedy and gun-fire blending into a hilarious whole.—WATT.

YOU BELONG TO ME

Paramount

Here is straight drama loaded with heart throbs, played against a small town vaudeville background and featuring Lee Tracy in a role that is a departure from his usual fast talking characterization. As a rundown vaudeville cartoonist doing small time and hitting the bottle too often, Tracy's work suggests smart showmanship. Alfred Werker, director of "House of Rothschild," handles the directorial reins. The story is an adaptation of Elizabeth Alexander's original, "52 Weeks for Fleurette," by Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt, who did the script of "One Sunday Afternoon." Lynn Starling and Harry Ruskin teamed on the screen play.

Helen Mack, one of the leads in "All of Me" and "Kiss and Makeup" with Cary Grant, has the top feminine role. Helen Morgan, well known New York stage actress, appears as the estranged wife of Tracy. David Holt, who was the subject of an eight weeks' search by Paramount, plays the son of Miss Mack. Arthur Pierson, former Fox contract player, and Lynne Overman, known for his portrayal of "Regret" in "Little Miss Marker" and currently working in Frank Capra's "Broadway Bill," are featured. Rev. Neal Dodd of the Episcopal church also has a role.

Playing to the sympathetic emotions, the story revolves around the activities of Tracy, who tries to promote a decent break for Miss Mack, a widow. He gets her a spot doing her single act in a beer garden, where she meets Pierson, marries him and is subsequently jilted. She is killed later in a trapeze act. This serves to reunite Tracy and Miss Morgan, who adopt the child, telling him his mother is doing fifty-two weeks abroad.

Incidental music, including two songs which Miss Morgan sings, were written by Sam Coslow and Arthur Johnston, who also teamed on the music of "Murder at the Vanities," with its "Cocktail for Two." The story is a new theatrical yarn and rates real campaigning.—M. W.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 233.—(A) The line voltage is 220. We must have 70 amperes at a 55-volt arc. Any number of 110-volt, 40-ampere fixed resistance rheostats such as are ordinarily used for controlling projection current are available. Disregarding variation in such instruments due to age, etc., would it be possible so to connect any number of these rheostats, without making any alteration in their resistance, as to secure the required 40 amperes? Line voltage 220, remember. (B) Would you connect two 110-volt rheostats such as are ordinarily used for projection work in series to control an arc taking current from a 220-volt line? Suppose we connect two 110-volt fixed resistance rheostats in series and two more in series and then connect the two series in parallel to an arc taking current from a 220-volt line. What amperage would result? Out of kindness I warn you to watch your step!

Answer to Question No. 227

Bluebook School Question No. 227 was: (A) What in your opinion should be the scope of an examining board's questions? (B) What is meant by absorption of light? By Actinic Ray? By angle of reflection and angle of projection? (C) Just what is meant by foot candle or candle foot? (D) What is a "standard candle"?

The following managed to get by, some of them with much credit: G. E. Doe; S. Evans and C. Rau; J. Wentworth; D. Danielson; T. Van Vaulkenburg; A. F. Sprafke; R. DeTotto; H. Edwards; C. Oldham; J. R. Walker; L. Crimikoski; R. J. Arntson; L. J. O'Melia; J. Richmond; D. Emmerson; D. Singleton and J. B. Buckley; D. L. Sinklow; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; A. Breaston and D. Haber; O. L. Evans; L. Hutch and D. Goldberg; L. F. Evans; D. Little and J. H. Rathburn; B. Jones; D. R. Peters and D. Holler; P. T. Zann, L. Grant and R. Geddings; D. T. Arlen and M. Spencer; M. Simms and O. L. Daris; F. F. Franks; B. L. Blinkendorfer; R. Wheeler and R. Suler; S. D. and W. Love; D. L. Danielson and H. Pilson; T. Kelley and L. C. Cummings; H. True; D. U. Grange; L. B. Rubin and L. Hendershot; H. Rogers; L. and F. H. Klar; P. Itt; O. Allbright; L. R. Doty; B. R. Walker; S. Carberry; L. N. and C. B. Traxler; T. L. Turk and O. Davis; F. H., S. and D. Dalbey; N. L. Tomlinson and G. Lathrope; C. Umphrey; M. and J. Devoy; N. Bagley and L. D. Richardson; F. Y. Gradley and B. L. Donald; P. L. Dodson; G. Johnson and L. R. Spooner; K. Y. Spencer; G. Thompson; L. D. Dahl; M. and S. T. Gibson; D. L. Lode, B. H. Sanders and J. Jensen; L. Grant and R. Geddings; B. W. Williams and L. H. Daniels; B. R. Mills and R. Prane; H. F. Menefee.

I have selected for publication the excellent answer to section A made by J. R. Walker. He says:

"The examination should include (a) knowledge of projection room planning and construction, considered from the viewpoints of safety and convenience in the work. (b) Of electrical action in general. (c) Knowledge of amperage capacity of conductors. (d) Type of insulation to be used under various conditions. (e) Various effects of overload as applies to wires, insulation, etc. (f) Effects of multiple and series operated arcs and resistances. (g) Principles of transformers, dimmers, rheostats and magnetic contacters. (h) Knowledge of fusing circuits; fusing port fire shutters, including types and location of fuses. (i) Knowledge of motors and generators, care of commutators, working in new brushes and testing for faults. (j) Use of test lamps, battery and buzzer and magneto. (k) Testing for blown fuse. (l) Testing for shorts and grounds. (m) General knowledge of projector mechanism, effect of worn sprockets, proper adjustment of sprocket idlers to avoid film damage. (n) How to make correct film splice. (o) How to set or "time" rotating shutter. (p) Film storage in projection room. (q) Correct rewinding of film, including speed. (r) Effect of different screen surfaces in diffusion of light. (s) Correct picture dimensions under different conditions. (t) Vacuum tube action, half and full wave rectifiers, push and pull amplification, resistance coupling, transformer coupling, phasing speakers."

The answer of L. N. and C. B. Traxler is exceptionally good. They say:

"First of all, an examining board should determine the knowledge of the applicant for license as to all matters having to do with safety to theatre patrons, which will of course cover (1) handling and storage of films, (2) projector automatic fire shutter, (3) fire and sound proof construction of projection room, (4) means of preventing fire or smoke from reaching the auditorium, or theatre patrons catching sight of same. This last would include hanging and fusing port fire shutters, removal of smoke as fast as formed, and means for preventing smoke getting into the auditorium when the projectionist opens the door to leave.

"The Board should ascertain the knowledge of applicants as to all those various things that have to do with excellence of what is purveyed to theatre patrons in both screen image and sound. It also has to do with safety to theatre patrons other than by fire risk. Bodily injury may be done by other things than fire. Eye strain is in its way 'bodily injury' and audiences should be guarded against it so far as possible. Whether or not poor sound would cause ear strain I am not prepared to say. I believe, however, it would. Certainly it causes annoyance and therefore injury to the tempers.

"Broadly I would say the following should be covered more or less thoroughly: Electrical action in wire systems, in transformers, motors, generators and batteries, including ability to calculate losses caused by various wire loads, and limits of permissible temperatures in electrical equipment; knowledge of effect of series and parallel hook-ups, both in arc lamps and rheostats; knowledge in a general way of the various equipments the applicant may be expected to handle, mechanically, electrically, optically and acoustically.

"In fact, one might go a long way without reaching the limit of knowledge the projectionist should possess to be a competent man, and that, rightly considered, is what an examining board should be expected to do. Most of those I have had experience with, and I have been 'examined' by several boards, impressed me as failing to the point of absurdity. The only examination I would honor by saying it was of any very real value was taken in Canada. It was not very complete, but what there was of it—well, one just had to understand his vegetables to get past."

(B) A. F. Sprafke says:

"Absorption of light is the retention of some portion of the rays or light energy when passing through an imperfectly transparent body. If all light be absorbed the substance would be black. If none be absorbed it would be white. When some are absorbed and other reflected the substance then appears as of color.

"Actinic Ray: Rays capable of producing chemical decomposition or change. All ether waves from all sources and of all length may be considered as actinic, some substances being decomposed by certain wave lengths and other by waves of different length. It is actinism which fades colors, bleaches linen, rots fabrics, tans the human skin and performs operations in photography."

Later, I wrote the Eastman Kodak Physics Department asking whether the Actinic Ray definition was or was not exactly correct. Here is the reply:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: "While the 'Bluebook' definition of Actinic Ray is for the most part correct, the following is a better explanation of the real meaning of the term:

"Actinic Ray: A ray capable of producing a chemical change—said especially of the rays

of shorter wave length visual radiation, of the ultra-violet, and of x-rays. Broadly speaking, all wave lengths including the infra-red and shorter may be considered to be actinic. It is actinism which fades colors, tans the human skin, and produces photographic exposure.

"Certainly some rays cause deterioration of some fabrics, notably ultra-violet and certain cellulose materials. It is pretty far-fetched to say that an actinic ray will put out a fire, though the statement might possibly be justified. I do not think it is correct to say that 'all other waves from all sources and of all lengths may be considered actinic.' I have never heard the radio waves spoken of as 'actinic' and know of no instance where such long waves can produce a chemical change."

Resuming Sprafke's reply to Question B:

"Angle of Reflection: The change of direction experienced by a ray of light upon striking a reflecting surface. The angle of reflection is equal to the angle of incidence, hence both are equidistant from a plane or line that is perpendicular to the reflecting surface.

"Angle of Projection: The angle of the axis of the projected beam to the screen surface.

"The unit of illumination is the candle foot. Its value is the amount of light falling upon a surface at a distance of one foot from a source of light one candle-power in value. The law of inverse squares, namely, that the illumination from a given light source varies inversely with the square of the distance from the source, shows that the illumination at a distance of two feet from a one-candle source would be 0.25 of a candle foot."

(D) Gosh! Sprafke again! Got to hand it to that boy this week. He says:

"The standard candle is based on the standard English candle. It is made of spermaceti extracted from crude sperm oil, with the addition of a small quantity of beeswax to reduce the brittleness. Its length is 10 inches, and its diameter .9 inch at the bottom and .8 inch at the top, and its weight is one-sixth of a pound. Great care is taken in the preparation of the wick and spermaceti. This candle burns with a normal height of flame of 45 millimeters and consumes 120 grains per hour when burning in dry air at normal atmospheric pressure. Under these conditions, the light given by a single candle is one candle power. The sort of lamp forms merely a reference standard, but in all photometers, an incandescent lamp is generally used as the working standard."

Paper Value of Stocks In Amusements Is Lower

The paper valuation of all amusement stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange was $151,462,110 on July 1, which compares with $165,014,143 on June 1, according to official exchange records. The decrease indicated amounts to $13,552,033.

Liberty Completing Distribution Plans

Budd Rogers, general sales manager of Liberty Pictures, has closed with Jack K. Adams, president of Adams Film Exchanges, Inc., to handle the Liberty product in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, giving Liberty almost 100 per cent distribution for the 1934-35 season.

Negotiations also are being conducted with representatives of foreign distributors, Mr. Rogers said.

"An important announcement shortly will be made which will assure complete distribution for Liberty Pictures both here and abroad," he said. "The rapidity with which negotiations have been concluded in each case further justifies our belief that, in presenting a completed program of features for the present season, Liberty is offering the type of independent product that every showman will be proud to play."

$61,999,195 Earned by A. T. and T. in Six Months

American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which controls Western Electric and its subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, Inc., earned $61,999,195 in the first six months of 1934. This does not reflect the current deficit of Western Electric.

The figure represents $3.32 a share for the first six months and compares with $2.40 a share for the same period last year.

Plans have been drawn for a new 1,400-seat theatre to be erected at 95th Street and Ashland Avenue by Ashland-95th Street Properties, Inc., and to be leased by Warner Brothers over the next 15 years. Work will start about August 1 with completion expected Christmas time. The house will be called the Beverly and will be one the few new theatres built in Chicago in recent years.

Wording of the city code and licenses is said to be a point of difference in the whole situation as affecting give-aways, especially premiums. Lieut. Samuelson May Decline New Jersey Presidency

Sidney Samuelson, because of the burden of work attached to his position as president of Allied States Association, may decline to run again as president of the New Jersey Allied unit, which will hold its annual convention August 22-24 in Atlantic City.

In the event that he does not run, it is considered likely that Julius Charnow, now vice-president, will be named president.

Leaders of eastern Allied are to meet soon on call of Walter B. Littlefield.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

St. Joseph, Missouri

DEAR HERALD:

An Open Letter to the Legion of Decency:

It may, or it may not interest you to learn of the attitude of the exhibitors toward the action you are taking against dirty and suggestive pictures. We have covered a part of Nebraska, a little of Iowa and considerable of Missouri within the past few weeks and have met and talked with a great many exhibitors and we have endeavored to get their viewpoint on this matter so that we could represent them correctly. For that purpose we have put this question to them in substantially these words: "What effect, if any, will it have on your business if the Legion of Decency boycotts dirty and indecent pictures?" To this question we have received almost this universal reply: "If the Legion of Decency will boycott only the dirty and indecent pictures and not extend their boycott to the entire industry, I believe it will be universally beneficial." We don't mean to say that this was the reply of all of them; some there were who held to a different view, but they were largely in the minority. We are not expressing our own individual opinion, but are giving you the views of others as we have met up with them.

Through the Pocketbook

Our personal opinion is that if the Legion of Decency wants to impress upon Hollywood its desire for clean entertainment it can best be done by wholehearted support of good pictures as well as boycotting the bad ones. As we have said before in this colyum, if you want to reach the producers you can best do it through the pocketbook rather than the head, for the pocketbook is a tender spot with all of us. Too often our actions are governed largely by that tender spot. We tried to persuade a farmer once to let us shoot quail on his farm, but he wouldn't listen to us until we flashed a five-dollar bill on him, and after that we could have had his farm. Money talks, and sometimes it talks louder than a politician. You can get things done with money when you can't with reason, and that's why we say that if the Legion of Decency will support good pictures with their influence and patronage it will take the route via the Hollywood pocketbook and get results, for Hollywood likes money the same as the rest of us do, and Hollywood will make good pictures if they will get more money than bad ones.

Theatreman Not Responsible

We hope that the members of the Legion will remember that the theatreman is not responsible for unclean pictures. He doesn't make them and he is compelled to buy them in blocks, or the entire group that any company makes. He can't buy them separately, and block booking was instituted to force him to take the bad ones as well as the good ones, and that's just what it does, and he has to pay for the entire block even though he does not run the bad ones, so he should not be held to blame for unclean pictures.

That old threadbare alibi that they put smut and filth in pictures because the public demands it, is an insult to American intelligence and decency and it is generally used by the "yes men" who know nothing of the American people outside their own ward. They can't prove that all the melons in the patch are ripe by eating a green one, and green ones often give one the cholera morbus, and this business has had altogether too many green ones and we have been compelled to take quinine to ward off the cholera morbus, and many of us don't like quinine. It won't hurt you people to think this over.

Very truly yours.

Main Street Still Open

Contrary to the accepted view of Hollywood, "Main Street" is still open and that thoroughfare is pretty well crowded with people who are not looking to Hollywood to direct the traffic, and it now begins to look like the Legion of Decency was going to sort out the apples, but we hope they won't reject the whole barrel.

Mr. Sol Lesser, one of Hollywood's most prominent producers, is reported to have said to the women's organization, "It is more difficult to make a clean picture than a salacious one, for a socalled dirty picture need not be intelligent in order to win a certain kind of patronage, but a clean picture has got to be clever."

There is this about Mr. Lesser that we will all have to admit: he is frank, if nothing else, and he has a reputation for telling the truth, and we congratulate him, but he simply voiced what has been on the public mind for several years when he said that "socalled dirty pictures need not be intelligent in order to win a certain kind of patronage, but a clean picture has got to be clever."

It would seem that certain producers overlook the American public to make pictures for "a certain kind of patronage" and our observation has been that "a certain kind of patronage" is generally made up of the lipstick variety of the adolescent age. If Mr. Lesser would look around a little our firm belief is that he would find that there is still some "intelligence" in these United States of America.

A Chip on Our Shoulder

The other morning our slumber was disturbed by the exploding of firecrackers and we woke up to remember that it was the 4th day of July, 1934. We also recalled that it is generally the Irish who start things, and that on or near this same day in 1776 Patrick Henry blew up the works when he shouted, "But as for me, give me liberty or give me death," and from then on we have had a chip on our shoulder.

It also reminded us of the days back in Indiana when it was our job to recite the Declaration of Independence and "Darius Green and His Flying Machine." And we also remembered that that rumpus in 1776 was brought about because of "taxation without representation," and that the codfish in Boston harbor held pink tea parties without inquiring the price of tea. Remembering all this we wondered what our great grandchildren would think of their forebears when they realized that they have been saddled with a debt that they had no part in making. "Taxation without representation" was all wrong in 1776 but we've changed since then. We hope our progeny won't learn how to spell the word "repudiation."

It has been proved pretty conclusively that our knowledge of history and geography is somewhat out of plumb. Some time ago we told you that Columbia City was on the Indiana and Ohio state line. Brother Hancock of Columbia City comes back at us and says we are crazier than a hoot owl, that Columbia City is seventy-five miles from the Ohio line and that we were thinking of Union City. There is positive proof that a Hoosier will sometimes tell the truth, and we will have to admit it.

Important Indian History

Then our old friend William Freise of the Tivoli theatre at La Crosse, Wisconsin, writes to inquire if somebody had hit us on the gourd with a ball bat which inclined us to say that Jeff Davis was located at Portage, Wisconsin, during the Indian war before the rebellion. He says, in substance, that what we don't know about the matter would make a large volume, that Jeff Davis was located at Prairie du Chien when he eloped with Colonel Taylor's daughter and kicked up a row in the Taylor household. He gave us a lot of other important Indian history of that country in the early days, the most of which was in and around La Crosse. It is interesting, and we wish we had room to print it.

Mr. Freise tells us about Old Chief Black Hawk and the early Indian wars of that country. Had the Indians had an opportunity to see "Follow Thru," "So This Is Africa," "Her Wedding Night," "The Royal Bed," "The Million Dollar Legs" and others, the chances are that there would have been no war, for they would have all been "Good Indians."

There is one reason why a colyum writer is never hanged or shot at sunrise, and that is that whenever it appears to be becoming dangerous he can cut his colyum short, but that ought not to save some of us.

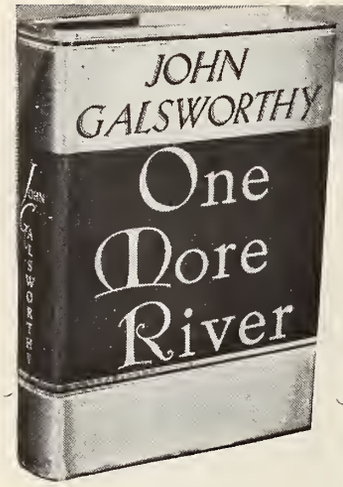
Fox West Coast Sale On Foreclosure Delayed

The foreclosure sale of Fox West Coast, tentatively slated to come up in U. S. district court, Los Angeles, last week, was delayed until later in the month due to the many details which must be considered.



A reorganization plan which will call for a new holding company to replace Wesco, with Sidney R. Kent at the head of it, will be submitted at the same time for court approval.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended July 21, 1934, from 92 houses in 18 major cities of the country, reached $798,232, a decrease of $118,394 from the total for the preceding calendar week, ended July 14, when 98 theatres in 19 cities reported an aggregate gross of $916,626. Because of the general strike, which closed all theatres for several days, the San Francisco report is not listed in this issue.

A Highlight in a Campaign of Confidence

There Are Two Basic Obligations Involved In The Selling of Pictures: The Obligation of Delivery and that of Acceptance. Underlying Both Is A Sentiment That Extends Beyond The Written Contract - - - - -

CONFIDENCE

COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION is proud to announce that arrangements have been completed whereby its feature pictures for the year 1934-1935 will be played on

The LOEW CIRCUIT

Slightly amplifying this cold statement in type there is the larger meaning that COLUMBIA PICTURES will be playing the finest theatres in the United States. The creation of such a situation carries with it the definite implication of confidence. Such confidence on the part of LOEW'S could only be based on the past performances of COLUMBIA and the place COLUMBIA is taking in the motion picture industry.

Such confidence as COLUMBIA has in LOEW'S can only be based on the time-honored position LOEW'S occupies not only as regards its theatres and its aggressive showmanship but on its universally accepted standard for fair play and fair dealing.

Columbia Marches On Through 1934-1935

Looking 'em over

No! this does not refer to the selection of a Ziegfeld chorus.

But it does refer to the Motion Picture Daily's celebrated system of reviewing pictures in Hollywood months before they are trade-shown in New York.

Today, Motion Picture Daily reviews 90% of each season's product right in the Hollywood cutting rooms.

Reviews are wired in immediately to New York and are published the next day.

No longer are exhibitors compelled to wait until just before release date for an appraisal of product. Smart showmen follow Motion Picture Daily and spot play dates carefully far in advance for maximum exploitation at the box office.

This is only a small part of the service Motion Picture Daily renders exhibitors every business day of the year.

MAN'S LAND, A: Hoot Gibson—Who said westerns were dead? Here is the same old story done a hundred times before, but still they liked it, and it did a big business. Hoot Gibson is still popular and deserves some good stories. I made more money on this western than I have on many of the big specials from the leading companies. This is my first western in a long time, but I was surprised to find a big demand for these outdoor pictures. Try them and let your audience get away from sex, gangsters and musicals for a little while. More power to you, Hoot. Get some good stories for yourself, make better pictures and you will find the exhibitors will be glad to buy them and pay what they are worth.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

Columbia

BLACK MOON: Jack Holt—This is absolutely the world's worst picture. I cannot see why a company with Columbia's reputation would release a picture as poor as this one. It had no story, no direction, rotten sound, terrible photography. Jack Holt was a good drawing card up to this one, but he won't get a dime in this town on his next picture, no matter how good it is. I had more walkouts and refunds on it than I have ever had on any one picture in my 22 years in the picture business. Had it booked for two days, pulled it the first day and Columbia sent me a replacement, and it was about as rotten as "Black Moon." The two days were a total loss. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 5.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

CRIME OF HELEN STANLEY, THE: Ralph Bellamy, Shirley Grey—A fair little detective story. Interesting and plenty active. Running time, 70 minutes.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town patronage.

HELL CAT, THE: Robert Armstrong, Ann Sothern—Nice little program picture with plenty of action and one of the best fights in weeks. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 6-7.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—One swell show. A very good story and a masterpiece in direction. Gable and Colbert the best they have ever been. The secret of the success of the thing is that it gets down to earth where shows for a small town belong. Just the story of a runaway heiress and a reporter aboard a cross-country bus, but so ably acted and directed that there is not a dull moment and the audience goes out smiling and saying that it is the best ever. This Capra should start a school for directors on how to take two people and a little money and make world beaters (most of them need lessons). Good and clean all the way through. Played June 24.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: William Janney—A good western that is different to the extent that the story is built around a horse but will please any audience that likes westerns a little better than the average. Clean show. Played June 14.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: Rex, William Janney, Dorothy Appleby—A good Saturday bill. It has some rather cruel scenes in it. Played June 15-16.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Ann Sothern, Edmund Lowe—A nice little musical that is good for Sunday. Very good acting and a nice story with some sweet music. Clean show. Played June 10.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and country patronage.

NINTH GUEST, THE: Donald Cook—This is a murder mystery that had them all sitting on the edge of the seat. Slim midweek business. Played July 10-11.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

NO GREATER GLORY: Frankie Darro, Lois Wilson—Really an exceptionally good picture of the heavy type but hard to get them in due to the fact that there are no star names to sell. Clean and gives them something to think about. Shows the futility of war and played by children fighting over a vacant lot. Get it in a day early and show it to the boy scouts, ministers and some of the thinking parents, and it will do business. Played June 3.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NO GREATER GLORY: Frankie Darro—This is a great boy's picture. From beginning to end it has boy appeal. A heart throbbing story with dozens of juveniles performing in a big way. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 6.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town patronage.

ONE IS GUILTY: Ralph Bellamy—Bellamy the whole show in this mystery story. A good one-day picture, not good for Saturday in small town. Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 13.—Garnett Stancil, Opera House, Ft. Payne, Ala. Small town patronage.

PARTY'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Ann Sothern—Good little program picture. Recording good. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SPEED WINGS: Tim McCoy—Good air action. Country folks liked it very much; plenty of thrills; must have collected some of the flying scenes from newsreels. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 3.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

TWENTIETH CENTURY: John Barrymore, Carole Lombard—I must be wrong. Fan magazines give this the highest ratings but I cannot see it for a small town. Marvelous acting by the two leads. Can't be beat but they yell all the time. The story of an eccentric producer and a more-so star who cannot seem to talk to anyone without flying into a tantrum and screaming insults at everyone. Too much repetition as they yell, yell, yell their way through nine reels. The show is supposed to be riotously funny but the comedy is not in the lines but supposed to be in the actions of the principals. The first fifteen minutes are, but after the repetition of the same thing causes it to be disgusting and makes you want to wring their necks. Well-acted, but I do not think it is a small town picture. Many who I think were hypnotized by Barrymore's popularity thought it good but the majority did not care for it. Its one redeeming feature is that it is clean all the way through and that's a lot since the public has said "either you play pictures without wise-cracks or we'll stay home and read our whiz-bang." Played July 8.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WHIRLPOOL: Jack Holt—Good and different crook type picture with a "Stella Dallas" touch to it. Holt always good. Would like to see him in a good western once more. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 10.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Rural patronage.

First National

CIRCUS CLOWN: Joe E. Brown—What a swell little number. Joe can keep on bringing them in for us with this kind of stuff. The trapeze and tumbling acts in the circus are great, best I ever saw. Running time, 63 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

CIRCUS CLOWN: Joe E. Brown—After reading a couple of very unfavorable reviews on this one, I was a bit leery of it. However, it proved to be just what the doctor ordered for us on the weekend. Joe is one of our best bets and in this he gave them just what they wanted. Gross somewhat under his previous efforts but that can be attributed to local conditions. Our business has been feeble for the last five or six weeks. Played July 6-7.—William Con, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

DARK HAZARD: Edward Robinson—Just fair. Business below average. Played July 5-6.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

JOURNAL OF A CRIME: Ruth Chatterton—Nothing wrong with this picture but for some reason failed to draw. Grossed below average. Running time, 68 minutes.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

JOURNAL OF A CRIME: Ruth Chatterton—More domestic drama. However, pictures of this type click here. Fair entertainment; would not play on Sunday. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 12.—Garnett Stancil, Opera House, Ft. Payne, Ala. Small town patronage.

MANDALAY: Kay Francis—A good picture, though not exactly within the straight and narrow, but it drew well and had no complaint. Receipts slightly above normal. Running time, 65 minutes.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

MERRY FRINKS, THE: Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee—This is a noisy, loud-talking and sometimes shouting story of the Frink family. Borders on comedy but is sometimes disgustingly silly. No box office power. People walked away in droves after looking at the silly stuff on the paper. Running time, 68 minutes.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

Fox

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—Fair entertainment. Story weak but stars well liked. This team should be kept together. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 4-5.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

COMING OUT PARTY: Frances Dee—Contrary to most reports, my patrons were well pleased. However, just a fair program picture of New York's social 400. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 11.—Garnett Stancil, Opera House, Ft. Payne, Ala. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—As our town does not celebrate the 4th I booked this picture hoping there would come enough to pay film rental but had a good house all three nights. Rogers is great and pleased young and old alike. The horse race sequence is especially good. An excellent picture in every way. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 3-4-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: George O'Brien, Irene Bentley—Better than the average western, and certainly a second Mae West in Ruth Gillette.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: George O'Brien, Irene Bentley—A very good western that pleased not only the western fans but the patrons who do not especially care for westerns. Ruth Gillette as the saloon keeper was especially good and furnished most of the laughs. Just an all-round good show that pleased. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 27-28.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NOW I'LL TELL: Spencer Tracy, Helen Twelvetrees, Alice Faye—Saga of a big shot gambler. Rather slow in spots and too long. Probably please the average customers, but not a show the folks will write home about. Played July 7.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory—Different and well liked Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 3.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory—An excellent western. Why can't we have more of these? Played July 6-7.—Albert Harman, Elgin Theatre, Elgin, Oregon. General patronage.

SPRINGTIME FOR HENRY: Nancy Carroll, Otto Kruger—Just a waste of film. O. K. for England, but we don't care to sleep in our theatres. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 27-28.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: All star—An extra good musical, different from the rest. James Dunn and little Shirley Temple do a tap dance that's a riot. Stepin Fetchit steals the show. All in all, it was a good show, but the hot weather kept them from seeing it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

SUCH WOMEN ARE DANGEROUS: Warner Baxter—Very good society type but not the kind my folks like Baxter in. It had no comedy whatever. Just women on the make for Baxter. Why don't some smart producer grab Wesley Barry and make some clean juvenile picture, using Baxter and Barry or another "Cisco Kid," with Baxter, but give us Barry, too. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 12.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. Rural patronage.

MGM

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—Just a fair program picture. Failed to draw any extra business on Bargain Day. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 20.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

LAZY RIVER: Jean Parker, Robert Young—Excellent entertainment for small town patronage. Average business. Played July 1-2-3.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, William Powell—Good. Dramatic and entertaining but Gable's part is not true to life and consequently the ending is weak. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 8-10.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—This is a good program picture but I fail to see just why Metro rates it as a super special. Most of the customers agreed that it was good but were disappointed when it failed to come up to their expectations. The entire cast was good but what a pity that the show fails to please. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 9-10.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—A wonderful picture that pleased 100 per cent. Clark Gable's best performance, while Myrna Loy and Elizabeth Allen are both good but Jean Hersholt steals the show. I rank this as one of the best shows of the year as far as entertainment value goes. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

OPERATOR THIRTEEN: Marion Davies, Gary Cooper—Fair entertainment. Not as convincing as it might be, and Gary Cooper miscast. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 6-7.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery—What a comedown from "Smilin' Thru." Montgomery is the only one that could be understood all the time. The others all talk with a very decided London accent. Good acting and gorgeous clothes and settings but I over-advertised this one and my patrons were disappointed the first night and Sunday attendance took a nose dive. O. K. for a city but no good for the small town. Pleased about thirty per cent. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—An excellent production. Joan Crawford at her best with an entire cast that is good. Struck two of the hottest days of the year so not so good at the box office but was not the fault of the picture for it pleased all who came. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 7-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford—Great story, great acting, good sound, good picture. Everyone pleased including my box-office, my banker, my patrons and myself. It's a pleasure to run pictures of this kind and a pleasure to recommend it to my friends.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery, Fay Wray—In my opinion, the Mexican "Birth of a Nation." Strong, virile, colorful picture, well acted and directed. Doubt seriously if there is another character in Hollywood who could have handled the part of Villa as capably as did Wallace Beery. Walthall also entitled to a great deal of credit; in fact, all the performers did exceedingly well in their respective parts. Patrons pleased and business satisfactory. Played June 28-29-30.—William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery—From every angle of production this is a masterpiece. Go the limit to get them in and it won't disappoint but a few who just refuse to be pleased. Rough in spots but a vivid portrayal of a rough character. Played July 8-9-10.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery—Absolutely the greatest picture of its kind since "The Birth of a Nation." Anyone who does not appreciate a great picture of this kind is hopeless. It did a swell business for three days, with MGM checker on the door, and it's a pleasure to pay on such attractions as this. Beery is perfect, and while the story changes Villa from a bandit to a hero, I think there is much truth in presenting Villa as a real patriot of Mexico. There was plenty of money spent on this film, and anyone with eyes and ears can testify to that. Run it, boys, and advertise it for all you are worth. If anyone says it isn't a good show put them in the insane asylum. Congratulations, MGM, here's your big 1934 special.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

Monogram

CITY LIMITS: Ray Walker, Sally Blane—It may have been Friday the thirteenth that kept the customers away from here for this picture, but I think it was that the picture lacked drawing power. Very good action picture, even if it was about a newspaper reporter, but I don't see where the title came from. The action took place all over the state. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 13.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MAN FROM UTAH, THE: John Wayne—Sixty minutes of fast action with a good love angle. The kids went for it in a big way and it pleased the grownups, too. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 30.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

WEST OF THE DIVIDE: John Wayne—A mighty good western. It works up some real human interest and makes it seem real. Business average three days last part of week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

BOLERO: George Raft—Not a bad picture for any date. Some good music. Raft as "the love 'em and leave 'em dancer" pretty good. Sally Rand act pretty short and too far away to be much good. Played June 7.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and country patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March—Much more intelligence was used in making and executing this picture than is displayed in most offerings. Fredric March along with everyone else connected with the making of this production was responsible for the final delivery of what is possibly the most extraordinary picture made in several years. It shows that the scope of the photoplay is wide and much more intelligence may be shown than with mere words. It is doubtful if it will have box-office appeal but it is well worth while.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March—It was a pleasure to watch March's acting in this one. A fine piece of entertainment but it must have been too high hat; I couldn't get them in to see it. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 28-29.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March—A very fine production that did a little better than average weekend business. Played July 1-2.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE DOOR: Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Mary Morris—Rather heavy melodrama for Saturday crowd, but it held interest and seemed to satisfy. Clean. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 6-7.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott—These Zane Grey westerns are all good and never fail to draw. This picture is especially good and drew above average. Running time, 65 minutes.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Barbara Fritchie—One of Zane Grey's best. This western drew better than nine-tenths of the big specials and it was kept clean. This goes to show that the public is fed up on sex and smut in pictures. What the public wants is clean, wholesome pictures. Why don't these producers cater to the better class of people and keep the smut out of all pictures? Recording good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Adolphe Menjou—Swell show for the masses. The whole cast is good and of course Shirley Temple is the talk of all who see her. Played July 1-2.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Adolphe Menjou, Shirley Temple—This is a grand little number. Business above average and everyone satisfied. Give it your best playing time. It will do the rest for you. Running time, 70 minutes.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. mSall town and rural patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—Charlie Ruggles saved this one from being a total loss. Some very beautiful scenes but that's about all. We just did get film rental.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland—A darn good show. Clean and clever with good music and good comedy. This man Ross is going places and has it all over Crosby, though he takes the same kind of roles. He can sing like nobody's business and has a wonderful personality. Played June 17.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronge.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—Very good comedy with songs. However, don't predict this fellow Ross as popular in the movies as he is on the radio. Played July 8.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Jack Oakie, Carl Brisson, Victor McLaglen—Good little mystery story. Georgeous settings and I thought a good show up until the last scene, which wasn't needed. Some of the musical scenes would have been wonderful in color, but they are beautiful anyway. Pleased our customers. Played July 5-6.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes—Although this is a very good picture, it failed to bring out the crowds in the one day we played it. The title does not have much drawing power. A very interesting murder mystery with excellent comedy interwoven. I will admit that this is an age-old theme but this one is very interesting. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 11.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Phillips Holmes, Mary Brian—Used this for holiday and it drew and it pleased. Is a mystery-comedy, with Ned Sparks the comedy element. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 4. —P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Ben Bernie and his Gang, Jack Oakie—This is just another show. Too much mixture to be good. People here do not like Jack Oakie. Running time, 80 minutes.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland —A fair comedy program for Saturday dates. Fields good but Burns and Allen tiresome. Played May 31.— B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant—This picture pleased most of the women that saw it. Sylvia Sidney was the cause of that. Played one day to only fair business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 12.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott—Good like all the other Zane Greys. Drew the best house of the month. Running time, 65 minutes.— J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columhia, N. C. Rural patronage.

TO THE LAST MAN: Randolph Scott, Esther Ralston—A very good western. "To the Last Man" is the right title for this. Every one is killed. The producers at least so far have kept smut out of the westerns. Recording good. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields—A side splitting comedy knockout with W. C. at his best. Everyone enjoyed it and wanted to know when we were going to have another Fields. Paramount should feature Fields, he is the best comedian on the screen. Played June 30.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

RKO

COCKEYED CAVALIERS: Wheeler and Woolsey —The song "The Big Bad Wolf Is Dead" is good but the picture itself is not up to the Wheeler and Woolsey type. If RKO don't give these two people a good story to work on they will be no good at the box office. I think they carry everything too far. It is out of reason. Played July 8-9.—Albert Harman, Elgin Theatre, Elgin, Oregon. General patronage.

COCKEYED CAVALIERS: Wheeler and Woolsey, Dorothy Lee—Best of these stars for two years, we thought, and patrons seemed to agree. Straight fun, and these three can deliver. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 8-9.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

CRIME DOCTOR: Nils Asther, Otto Kruger, Karen Morley—Very good murder mystery drama. Recording fair. Running time, 74 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Roger Pryor, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire—We played this excellent feature rather late to merely moderate business. However, it gave excellent satisfaction. Played July 4-5.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, New York. Family patronage.

FOUR SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

Added this week to the list of contributors to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department are four exhibitors, representative of the South and Northwest. Their first reports appearing in this issue, they are:

Garnett Stancil, Opera House, Ft. Payne, Ala.

Albert Harman, Elgin Theatre, Elgin, Ore.

J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C.

William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C.

GOODBYE LOVE: Charlie Ruggles—A fair comedy with some very raw dialogue. Played June 24.— Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY!: Wheeler and Woolsey— This is a very fine picture. Ruth Etting should have sung more.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

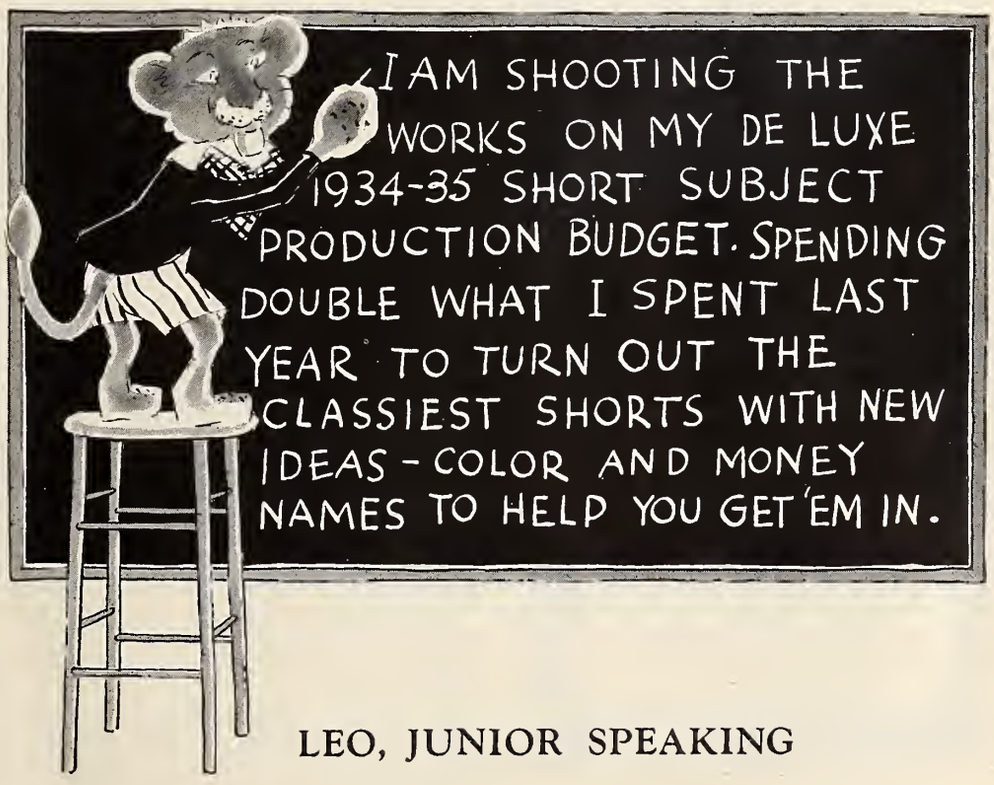
KEEP 'EM ROLLING: Walter Huston, Frances Dee—An uninspired picture, very slow and draggy. The usual dames and things that usually go with a navy or army picture. There is some pathos with Huston and the horse Rodney. This undoubtedly will have the endorsement of the League of Purity but not of the average audience. If this kind is the answer to their prayers for clean pictures, Heaven help the movie audience; they will need it. Producers and exhibitors will both be on the spot in this campaign and make no mistake about that. "Cat and the Fiddle" on the black list and my audience gave it the runaround the second day because it lacked zip, or that is the reason they gave.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LOST PATROL, THE: Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff—Good desert play featuring what the British patrols went through during the World War. Victor McLaglen was the main star and when he stars the play is always good. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 23-24.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Zasu Pitts— Fair comedy drama; not much draw to it. Played June 29.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK: Bruce Cabot—Excellent picture that drew well in spite of the absence of better known stars. Average receipts.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

RIGHT TO ROMANCE, THE: Ann Harding— Very good work by Harding, but not a particularly pleasing story. No business on this picture. Played July 8-9.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.



SING AND LIKE IT: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, Edward Everett Horton—A good comedy that is above the average for its type. A poor actress makes a hit with a tough gangster who puts her on the big time and makes the world sit up and clap whether they like it or not. Good acting and a lot of laughs for the type of crowd who come to shows on weekend in small towns. Clean show. Played July 5.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SON OF KONG: Robert Armstrong—I don't know how they have the nerve to call this a special. It's a ridiculous anti-climax, following "King Kong." No business Sunday and on Monday. I can hardly wait till next year when I understand they are coming out with "Grandpappy Kong's Second Childhood." Played July 15-16.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STINGAREE: Richard Dix, Irene Dunne—Richard Dix in a sort of Robin Hood role. Irene Dunne capable as always. Picture pleased and drew a little extra business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 1-2.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TWO ALONE: Jean Parker, Tom Brown—Not bad. Jean Parker is a very appealing little girl. Tom Brown handles a pitchfork like a street sweeper. The picture barely got by on a midweek date. Played July 3-4.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—This proved to be the best of its kind which we have offered our patrons. Business moderate as is usual at this time of year. Played July 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, New York. Family patronage.

State Rights

DANCING MAN: Judith Allen—Play it if you must; better to pay than to play it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 1.—Garnett Stancil, Opera House, Ft. Payne, Ala. Small town patronage.

WINE, WOMEN AND SONG: Lilyan Tashman, Lew Cody—Just galloping celluloid. The same old bunk. Not worth the express. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 7-8.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

Tiffany

RIDING FOOL: Bob Steele—Very good western with plenty of comedy, action and a good fight, but the print was very bad. Running time, 55 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

United Artists

KID FROM SPAIN, THE: Eddie Cantor—This is old but it sure draws the crowds.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

BELOVED: John Boles—A good picture of the "three generation" type. Pretty heavy but has some good music on the heavy side. Repetition causes it to drag somewhat as do all shows of this type. Played July 1.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW: John Barrymore—This is a fine production but it didn't do business. Played June 19-20.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GLAMOUR: Paul Lukas, Constance Cummings—Have observed this one carefully, and while there has been some evidence that an attempt was made to make this a tremendous production, somehow it falls short of good entertainment. It held up four days to average business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

UNITED AIR LINES

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—Just a western. Fair Saturday business. Played June 22.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—We think Lee Tracy outdid himself in this interesting newspaper story. Our patrons were exceptionally well pleased. Business fair. Played July 14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, New York. Family patronage.

KING FOR A NIGHT: Chester Morris, Helen Twelvetrees—A very good picture, with one of the most unusual endings I have ever seen, although a very unhappy one.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Virginia. General patronage.

KING FOR A NIGHT: Chester Morris—Played on return engagement. Picture is good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LET'S BE RITZY: Lew Ayres, Patricia Ellis—A pleasing comedy-drama that drew fair business. Played July 11-12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, New York. Family patronage.

LET'S BE RITZY: Lew Ayres—O. K. program picture. Played July 3-4.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

LET'S TALK IT OVER: Chester Morris, Mae Clarke—A stereotyped picture. Hero Morris saves the girl, crashes her party, gets drunk. Hero pursues his devious way after the heroine, finds her a play girl, tells her she is spoiled. Hero drunk again, renounces girl. Comes the inevitable accident and reconciliation. Now I ask you how many times has this type of picture been done with a different cast? The brilliant young producer has not been so hot this season. He has missed fire on a lot of pictures that we have run from them. Morris is aping Bill Haines in this one, the smart elec stuff and he don't get away with it. No action, no comedy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LOVE BIRDS, THE: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—Rather thin story; good Saturday business. Played July 6-7.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LOVE BIRDS, THE: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—Here's one without a laugh in a carload. Uncle Carl, your young Jack Moffit sure wrecked your studio, better hire him back, as you sure can't dish 'em out now. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 6.—A J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—Drew good and pleased.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomation, Ala. General patronage.

WHEELS OF DESTINY: Ken Maynard—Fairly good western. Saturday business just so-so. Played July 13-14.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

AS THE EARTH TURNS: Jean Muir—One of these good, clean pictures that failed to draw the second night. Jean Muir exceptionally good. Receipts way below average. Running time, 73 minutes.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

AS THE EARTH TURNS: Jean Muir—Newspaper headlines are screaming "clean up the movies"; here's the answer to clean movies. I saw a preview on this picture. I thought that it was one of the best and cleanest pictures ever made. I tied up with a church, let the ladies' bible class sell tickets, advertised the cleanest picture to ever come out of Hollywood. What was the result? Two days of the poorest business in the past two years. I'll take the ones that the churches turn down. After all they are the ones that the public wants. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 21-22.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis—One of the best pictures of the month. A delicate theme but handled in the right way so as not to offend anybody. Running time, 53 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis—This was so short it really had to be seen twice to get any value out of it. What there is of it is surely great. Good old Kay. She can bring them in for me every time. Running time, 53 minutes.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

EVER IN MY HEART: Barbara Stanwyck, Ralph Bellamy—A very sweet picture with a very tragic ending. It did not please so well, but had some mighty fine acting in it. A Warner musical comedy helped to lighten the heavy drama.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

HAROLD TEEN: Hal LeRoy—A splendid comedy feature enjoyed by everybody. Receipts above average. Good for any day. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 10.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

HEAT LIGHTNING: Aline MacMahon, Preston Foster—Personally I thought it was a fairly good picture. It pleased some; others it didn't. An excellent cast and Miss MacMahon is a wonderful actress.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Virginia. General patronage.

HE WAS HER MAN: James Cagney, Joan Blondell—Very weak affair for Cagney. Picture just limped around and got nowhere. General comment was, nothing to it. Our people expect Cagney to give them comedy and action, but in this they got neither. First day's business was fair because of holiday but the next could have been a holiday, too, insofar as myself and staff were concerned. Understand the next Cagney is a honey. Let us hope so. Played July 4-5.—William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

HE WAS HER MAN: James Cagney, Joan Blondell—A very good little picture, but not the type of story for these two stars. Our patrons want plenty of comedy and action with Cagney-Blondell, and were a little disappointed in this drama. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 4-5.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

HOUSE ON 56TH STREET, THE: Kay Francis—Very good entertainment. Kay Francis at her best. Business about average. Played July 4.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

JIMMY THE GENT: James Cagney—Cagney always draws with us and this picture is no exception. Good with plenty comedy and action. Receipts slightly below normal. Running time, 67 minutes.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Rural patronage.

KEY, THE: Very good drama, but that's about all. Not the kind of story for the good old U. S. A. The whole affair takes place during a revolution in Ireland. Just another turkey if your customers like action. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

PERSONALITY KID: Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell—This is only a fair program picture. It would be best on bargain show or double bill. Some very phony prize fighting scenes which almost spoil the picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 4.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson—Produced in a big way, but it lacked something. It failed to get the business and we lost plenty. The public is getting tired of musicals. Guess we will have to go back to the gangster type again. Played July 2-3.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

EXPECTANT FATHER, THE: Ernest Truex—

Very good comedy with some comical moments.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

EXPECTANT FATHER, THE: Ernest Truex—Just what the title says. The customers thought it funny so that's that.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOOD SCOUT, A: Tom Howard—A very good slapstick comedy. It's all foolishness, but who cares if it makes you laugh. Running time, 18 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

LOST RACE, THE: Romantic Journeys—One of the most beautiful shorts which I have ever seen. It is filmed in color around the Zion National Park. Play it by all means. Running time, nine minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

NO SLEEP ON THE DEEP: Harry Langdon—Fair comedy. Drawing room stuff. Running time, 21 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

SLOW BUT SURE: Terry-Toons—Very good cartoon. The peppiest one in weeks. Running time, six minutes. Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

MGM

CARETAKER'S DAUGHTER: All-Star Comedies—Metro had material for a real good comedy, but it turned out to be a silly thing, which has a laugh. Running time, 17 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

DAVY JONES' LOCKER: Willie Whopper—This is the second in the series of these cartoons that we have shown. Both of them have failed to please. Not half as good as most cartoon comedies. Running time, seven minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DAVY JONES' LOCKER: Willie Whopper—Excellent cartoon in color. Under-the-ocean shots especially good.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DIRTY WORK: Laurel and Hardy—The best from this pair in many a long time. This one got more laughs than their last three comedies put together.—Robert K. Yancey, Paradise Theatre, Cotter, Ark General patronage.

DUKE FOR A DAY, A: Musical Comedies—One of the old type slapstick comedies dressed up with a little music. O. K. for a slapstick comedy.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HELL'S FIRE: Willie Whopper—Ordinary. Color poor and music ordinary. Running time, seven minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BETTY BOOP'S RISE TO FAME: Betty Boop—One of her best.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE (No. 10): These are okay, especially this one. A good advance ad on "Murder at the Vanities." Running time, nine minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

GOLD NUGGETS: Walter Catlett—Good slapstick. Pleased. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

JUST AN ECHO: Bing Crosby—This is a very good comedy featuring that famous crooner of the radio at his best. In addition to the singing and good music, the beautiful scenery and good story add much to the entertainment. This deserves extra billing and extra business as a result. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

NO MORE BRIDGE: Leon Errol—This is the best comedy of Errol that we have shown here. The rest of the producers should notice this type of two-reel comedy as there should be more. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

OIL'S WELL: Chic Sale—We thought this was above average. Our audience surely enjoyed it. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL (NO. 9): Good short anywhere you can use a one-reeler.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

SING, BABIES, SING: Baby Rose Marie—A wonderful one-reeler featuring Baby Rose Marie singing two popular selections and an excellent cartoon comedy in conncction. WRONG DIRECTION: Edgar Kennedy—Very good comedy all about Edgar as a ham movie director and the truble his talkative wife and family make for him. Running time, 20 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

Universal

BORN APRIL FIRST: Sterling Holloway—Comedy, save the name! What they perpetrate on the public in the name of comedy. Never have we gone through a season with so many poor productions that have traveled under that name. The batting average has been about 40 per cent that got any laughs. When sound came in evidently the producers lost all touch with what it takes for laughs. And you can't give the public all cartoons as there is a sameness there, so what the answer is I don't know, but I do know that the average comedy is not getting any reaction except from the kids.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FIVE AND TEN: Oswald Cartoons—Nice little cartoon.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

FULL COVERAGE: Henry Armetta—A funny comedy. Running time, two reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HEARTBURN: Sterling Holloway—We like Sterling Holloway, but this is not a very good comedy. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MEETING MAZIE: Sterling Holloway—Holloway is one of the silliest things on the screen, but he makes one laugh.—J. C. Dart, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

PALSIE WALSIE: Henry Armetta—This two-reel slapstick pleased. Running time, 20 minutes.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BUDDY OF THE APES: Looney Tunes—This is a very good cartoon comedy burlesque of Tarzan. One of the best of this series and pleased both young and old. Many came back to see it over and we had many comments on this. Especially good for the kids. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

ISHAM JONES: Melody Master—This is a very good musical one-reeler featuring Isham Jones and his orchestra playing several popular selections and it is good entertainment for the whole family. We need more of these. This kind of enetertainment always pleases and let's have more. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MOROCCO NIGHTS: Broadway Brevities—Only fairly good. Running time, two reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RAMBLING ROUND RADIO ROW, NO. 6: Pepper Pot—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Good entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

'TIS SPRING: Patricia Ellis, Frank Albertson—Cast excellent, colors beautiful, dances extraordinary, music perfect. What more could one ask for than a comedy like this one?—J. C. Dart, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MYSTERY SQUADRON, THE: Bob Steele—This is a good serial. Has held up well for eleven chapters.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LOST JUNGLE, THE: Clyde Beatty—A good serial, but not worth a big raise in price.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PERILS OF PAULINE: Evalyn Knapp, Robert Allen—It might have been good in the silent days, but it's no good now. No extra business, in fact, kiddies didn't like it.—M. D. Utterback, Lyric Theatre, Wellington, Kan. General patronage.

PIRATE TREASURE: Richard Talmadge, Lucille Lund—This story of pirates and pirate gold is very good material to make a very interesting serial. As usual Talmadge is at his best keeping the audience in great suspense with his daredevil stunts. This serial has done much in increasing the demand for better and for exciting serials.—Oze Tessier, Jr., Baylies Square Theatre, New Bedford, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

PIRATE TREASURE: Richard Talmadge, Lucille Lund—It's the way serials should be made, with a star that knows how to do it. On chapter two and it has already had enough action for 12 chapters. Customers even gasp for breath at the daredevil stunts.—M. D. Utterback, Lyric Theatre, Wellington, Kan. General patronage.

BOB OUELLETTE ANSWERS M. MELZ

Mr. M. Melz
Melz-Arcade Theatre
Ferriday, La.

Dear Sir:

Thanks for the tip in the June 23rd issue, "What the Picture Did for Me." I tried "Dr. Bull" and now my blood pressure is back to normal, but I wonder if you can remember the time about eight years ago, when I am sure your blood pressure went up a few points. It was in your theatre, the house was full, Reginald Denny was just going into a hot love scene clinch, and the boy down at the mechanical Music Box put on the roll, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight"? I never will forget it; and, say, has the levee broke yet, and how's my old friend, Capt. Cofree at Melville? Respectfully yours,

Bob Ouellette,
The Dixie Theatre,
Brooksville, Fla.

BOSS Your Sound Equipment

Too many managers and projectionists take their sound equipment for granted. Today you are its master—everything is under control—suddenly tomorrow—in the middle of the show—plop—it stops! MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

RE: FAN MAGAZINES

The fan magazines hurt grosses by unfair criticisms, by printing too much baloney and too little truth, by giving away the plots of pictures. The publishing of malicious gossip and unpleasant details of stars' lives has removed lots of the glamour surrounding the industry. Sensational expose stuff has brought more harm than good and has helped to encourage the current drive for censorship.

On the other hand, fan magazines build up box office interest in new stars and coming pictures. Theatres owe much to the influence of these publications which are partly responsible for the growth of the motion picture.

Producers and theatremen should make every effort to cooperate closely with these magazines to increase the profits and prestige of the screen. Then again, a hands-off policy should be adopted as cooperation may weaken the value of criticisms and reviews.

The above are some of the reactions published in the Round Table pages during the discussion started by Charley Bassin's suggestion that showmen work hand in hand with the fan magazines to increase circulation for the purpose of promoting better theatre attendance.

A resume of the managers' opinions printed during the past six weeks discloses that while the majority does not endorse the plan offered by Bassin, there is indicated some sentiment in favor of a mutual arrangement under certain conditions.

There are long established film publications that maintain more than a passable standard of publishing ethics. They have been invaluable in building up the newer stars and coming attractions. Unfortunately, others are not so concerned with the welfare of the industry, and there is small doubt but that their policies have not only been damaging to the box office but have also furnished ammunition to the forces in favor of censorship.

The many press book tieins arranged by the home office advertising men and the following up of these suggestions by showmen and newsdealers in the field are reason enough to believe that such cooperation is helpful to both sides.

However, we fear that even were Bassin's plan given some official impetus, the general Hollywood situation would discourage any workable plan aimed to separate the wheat from the chaff. There are too many apparent difficulties to be overcome before studios and publishers can be made to see eye to eye.

A few weeks ago, Walter Morris remarked that while cooperation is to be recommended when mutually beneficial, he nevertheless advised managers not to take the fan magazines too seriously.

Well, mebbe that's the right answer.

DUBIOUS BARGAINS

The announced launching by Warner Brothers of what is intended to be a nationwide campaign to increase admission prices has our hearty approval. It is about time the industry realized that good pictures are being penalized at the expense of poor product the public will not buy even at the socalled bargain prices.

In too many quarters the belief surprisingly still exists that patrons will accept indifferent picture fare if admissions are reduced. Although this unsound surmise has invariably proven disastrous, there are recent cases to hand where exhibitors have resorted to this policy, and are suffering thereby.

And this suffering unfortunately extends all along the line, most acutely among the theatre personnel. The general depression has taken most of the blame for cut salaries, but the fact nevertheless remains that theatremen today are working for a bare existence because of this unwise policy.

Patrons willingly will pay a fair price for good entertainment. The solution to a number of vital theatre problems therefore lies in the continued betterment of product, and scaling admissions accordingly, rather than an abortive attempt to turn the business into a cheap bargain counter.

"START FIRING, MEN"

Going through United Artists' press book on "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," these startled eyes beheld a self-addressed postcard questionnaire, copy requesting theatremen to jot down their reactions to the exploitation, ads, stories, etc.

Well, well, well. How times have changed.

Since pictures began, the lowly press book has been the butt of most advertising squawks. Managers have experienced incipient apoplexy and alarming blood pressure increase in describing press sheet failings. Replying, Hal Horne now says, in effect, "so what?"

O.K., men. Here is that big opportunity to tell at least one home office just what you want. Start firing! Horne is sincere about this and with the proper cooperation from the field, mayhap some good will come of the idea.

It may even spread to other companies, and real press books may be forthcoming on every picture. Aw, shucks—there goes that damned alarm clock.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!

Showmen Promote Bargain Festival

The famed "Georgia Minstrels" came to Superior, Wis., to play a date at the Palace Theatre. Appreciating the draw possibilities of this well known troupe, Harvey Buchanan and Gus Carlson, partner and manager respectively, of the Palace, sold to the merchants of their city the idea of a two-day bargain carnival reported by Charlie Winchell, Minnesota Amusement ad chief, to be one of the most successful put on in that section.

Fine cooperation was obtained from the local press which in addition to many ads and build-up stories, ran a special eight-page full-color section on the event, thousands of extra copies being distributed over the entire trading area. Further interest was created with a classified hookup and a slogan contest also clicked wherein 35 of the entries were selected for guest tickets to the theatre.

Merchants Contribute 100 Prizes

The featured prize idea was the awarding of over 100 gifts in a drawing contest held on the stage, gifts including radios, electric clocks, silver, dishes, etc. To insure full coverage, heralds were distributed house to house by a group of local news boys carrying theatre ad upon their backs (see photo) and wearing minstrel hats.

Elaborate street parades were put on daily by the minstrels in advance and as it so happened that two members of the troupe were engaged to be married, Buchanan and Carlson persuaded them to tie the knot on the stage during their stay. This, of course, made for further front-page publicity, and merchants also cooperated by supplying the wedding outfits, including rings, flowers, etc.

Local transportation company was promoted to furnish free rides daily from 9 to 11 in the morning and from 3 to 7 in the evening, and to shoppers in nearby Duluth, across the river, further inducement was made by offers of free bridge toll.

Local College Plugs Event

Many other ideas were put over to publicize the event, including extra posting and window cards in every section of trading area, as well as copies to all high school graduates of important local teachers' college weekly, which strongly publicized the bargain days.

Winchell states that this proved to be one of the most successful small-town campaigns he has yet reported and recommends its adaptation in conjunction with any strong stage attraction that can be tied up in a like manner.

Don Nichols Lands Editorial on "Man"

For pictures receiving out of the ordinary endorsement and praise from local reviewers and leading citizens, the usual procedure is to use these for lobby display. However, Don Nichols was successful in promoting an editorial in one of his papers on "Little Man, What Now?" at the Broadway, Charlotte, N. C., and wisely planted this unusual puff in a regular display ad, which he reports helped to hold up business during the last days of the run.

Don still finds effective a classified hookup in which theatre tickets are given to readers inserting want ads, plus 10 cents, paper coming in with a number of sizeable free display ads and other mentions. Cooperation with the Junior Page of another paper also returned similar plugging. Coast-to-coast broadcast from Hollywood a few days ahead in which the picture was dramatized built up additional interest and a radio program sponsored by the local Better Films committee was given over to the merits of the picture.

Miniature Exhibit Sells "Clown" Date

A miniature circus consisting of over 30,000 hand carved pieces was the feature around which Manager Carl Krueger, Fisher Theatre, Detroit, Mich., built his campaign on "Circus Clown." Occupying a space of 10 by 24 feet and consisting of the regulation three rings with all the auxiliary side shows (see photo) and exhibits, the miniature was placed in the theatre lounge on a specially built platform backed by a giant easel containing picture copy and giant head of Joe Brown.

The creator of the exhibit, Jean Le Roy, a local resident and former circus clown, was on hand in clown costume to explain the various items reported to have taken him eight years to construct. Newsreel shots were taken and shown in other theatres of the circuit, which helped to bring crowds to the lounge a week ahead and also during the run. Although the exhibit was planned originally to be shown only in advance, its success caused a hold-over during the engagement.

Mary Carries "Clown" Banner

The M-G-M Traveling "Tarzan" bally arrived in town the day before opening and Krueger was able to promote this as an added feature to his advance to the extent of bannering Mary, the rhinoceros, with "Circus Clown" copy. Also attracting attention was a stiltwalker who covered the downtown section.

Radio was used extensively and newspapers were reported to have accorded out of the ordinary space to the miniature exhibit. Prominent window displays were spotted about town and Krueger put over a number of other practical ideas which helped to round out this well devised campaign.

McGinnis Sells Full Page Cool Co-op Ad

R. V. McGinnis, owner-manager of the New Theatre in Russellville, Ark., promoted the merchants of his town on a full-page "cool" cooperative ad. Theatre ad in center of page stressed the cool comfort at the house and only merchants whose wares carried out the theme of the ad were invited to participate.

Refrigerators, electric fans, ice cream company, cafe and a men's haberdasher calling attention to coolness of linen suits were a few of those contributing. All copy also included plug of theatre cooling plant.

Paramount Ad Truck On Tour of Country

Containing complete sound and projection equipment and a specially shaded day-time screen permitting clear visibility during the day as well as at night, an elaborate advertising truck (see photo) has left the Paramount Hollywood studios for a six-months tour of the country to advertise the important productions to be released by that company.

A crew of four is being carried and in addition to the posters carried on each side and copy in rear, 20-minute trailers containing excerpts from "Cleopatra," "Mrs. Wiggs," "Scarlet Empress," "She Loves Me Not" and other coming attractions will be shown.

The bally will hit all the large key cities and plans are being made to have it stop in every town of over 5,000 population during the cross country tour.

Highlights of Opening "Bulldog Drummond" Dates

World premiering "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" at the Apollo, Atlantic City, P. M. Lewis and M. Weilland pulled a boardwalk gag that neatly circumvented the local ordinance against advertising on that famous thoroughfare. Theatre ads and dates were lettered on front pages of local dailies and six girls were transported up and down the boardwalk in wheel chairs, each girl holding paper as though she were reading the back page, front page with ad thus being easily discernible.

In Boston—

Manager Joe Brennan, Loew's State, aided by Al Selig, U. A. exploiteer, tied in the Boston Traveler to a bulldog contest, the paper going for reams of copy and a flock of photos on the stunt ahead of the date. The first prize was a loving cup donated by Ronald Colman, and other awards were cash and guest tickets to the picture.

Contest was open to boys up to the age of 16, and the streets around the theatre were filled with contestants and their dogs. Judges, besides Joe and Al, included prominent veterinarians and dog fanciers.

And In Memphis

Many hookups were put on by Manager Cecil Vogel, at Loew's Palace, including classified tiein and cooperation with leading department stores that brought mention of date in newspaper ads, standout being Cinema Shop tieup on Loretta Young gowns.

AUGUST MARKS EIGHTH AWARD

Showmen Planning Quigley Campaigns for Next Month of Competition; July Deadline Is Sunday, August 5

by A-MIKE VOGEL

And now for August as the spotlight swings to the eighth month of the Quigley Awards competition that has aroused worldwide interest wherever showmen are putting over the big campaigns on their product, major or independent, domestic or foreign. Faster and faster grows the pace as talented theatremen vie for the plaques that are bringing international prominence to the winners.

The Quigley Awards have steadily developed in significance to the point where it is now agreed universally that this project has been established as the most definite contribution to the encouragement of showmanship in the history of the industry. Confirming this is the high quality of exploitation displayed in the many entries already received for the July Award.

Read This!

A QUIGLEY AWARD — a silver plaque—is presented each month during 1934 for the theatre campaign selected by the judges as possessing the highest merit of all those submitted to the Managers' Round Table, on pictures played between the first and last days of that month. . . .

THE QUIGLEY GRAND AWARD will be given for the campaign submitted during the entire year of 1934, selected by the judges as possessing the highest merit. . . .

CAMPAIGNS may be forwarded after the last day of the month but must be on pictures played during that month. This includes pictures played on the last days of one month and the first days of the following. . . .

THEATRE MANAGERS everywhere in the world are eligible . . . every campaign must contain proof of everything done . . . equal consideration will be given every entry . . . remember, "it's not how much but how good" . . .

Forward Entries To QUIGLEY AWARDS COMMITTEE
1790 Broadway, New York

The deadline for July has been set for midnight of Sunday, August 5, and it is expected that the judges, to be announced in next week's issue, will convene shortly after so that the winner for July can be broadcast in the issue of August 11.

It is therefore advised that theatremen who expect to participate in the competition for this month and who have not as yet forwarded their entries, keep the deadline in mind, as campaigns to be considered must reach Quigley Committee headquarters no later than the time designated in the paragraph above.

In line with our procedure of publishing some of the rules for the guidance of entrants at frequent intervals, in the column to left is the necessary information regarding the Quigley Awards. There is nothing onerous in these qualifications. Theatremen in every part of the world are invited to participate.

"CIRCUS CLOWN" CAMPAIGNS ELIGIBLE FOR AWARD

In cooperation with the Warner Brothers exploitation contest on "Circus Clown," the Quigley Awards Committee announces that campaigns entered for the Warner prizes may also be presented for July award consideration. Managers desiring to take advantage of this may send their entries to Quigley headquarters, where, after being judged, they will be forwarded to the Warner office.

And now, let's have some real action to finish up in July, a month that invites a lot of effective showmanship. There is still a big week to get those prize winning campaigns into headquarters. Don't delay.

Rosenfield Ties In with Bird Men for "Mystery"

Joe Rosenfield, Modjeska Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., tied up with the Wisconsin News Jr. Birdmen for his showing of "The Mystery Squadron," arranging to admit all members of the club on the opening day, for which the newspapers gave him plenty of free publicity.

As an added display, Joe promoted a unique airplane motor from the Midwest Airways which had cost the company $5,000. The motor had a special electrical hookup which, when set in motion, enabled patrons to see the "workings." Company also loaned expert mechanic to explain the motor (see photo) which was on display in the lobby. We have a hunch the gentleman kneeling is Joe, who also adds that it was the first time the display had ever been seen in Milwaukee.

During show hours, the doorman wore the flying suit, and while the serial was playing it was used in front for a bally.

Shaffer Organizes Sane Fourth for Children

Tying in with the Warner circuit-wide drive for a safe and sane Fourth, Manager Frank Shaffer, Warner Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va., put on a free children show that brought the house plenty of praise. Local civic leaders organized a parade, headed by the American Legion color guard, Boys' Band and the kids themselves, who marched through the main streets (see photo). An American flag was given to each marcher by Shaffer.

No adults were admitted to the theatre and the program was designed for juvenile appreciation. After the children were assembled and seated, the Mayor delivered an address on Independence Day.

Schanberger Exploits Poe Kin on "Black Cat"

Baltimore boasts several descendants of Edgar Allan Poe, the author of the story, and these were invited together with members of the Poe Society, to see "Black Cat" as the theatre's guests, by J. Lawrence Schanberger, at Keiths, Baltimore. Naturally, this stunt netted much extra publicity. Another gag that culled some extra newspaper space was the awarding of Black Cat prizes at a local Kiwanis affair.

A cat noise record with talk on the picture interspersed was used out front. On the street Schanberger used two boys in cat costumes as a ballyhoo. He also enlisted cooperation of a local radio station for mention of the picture between programs.

Threes, twenty-fours, window cards and heralds, together with a special lobby display consisting of 40 x 60 panels and a giant cat with blinking green eyes. A large banner, hung across the street at the city's most important intersection also gave advance announcement of the engagement. Albert S. Nathan, Universal exploiteer, assisted the campaign.

Gus Lampe, at the Eckel Theatre in Syracuse, N. Y., for a street bally used a girl carrying a large basket of flowers to plug the showing of "Little Man, What Now?" Tied to flowers was large address tag indicating that the basket was being delivered to Margaret Sullavan at the theatre. Gus reports the stunt drew attention.

An eighteen-foot lobby display was made up of fourteen stills, lobby cards and gigantic title (see photo), planted out front two weeks prior to opening. Hollow back permitted illumination. Reproduction shows side panels, which were made in book shape with transparent lettering. Flasher lights in back made this an eye-catcher day and night.

Tie-up cards were planted on newsstands and colored photos of Sullavan were distributed. Local Hollywood Cinema Fashion Store created a Margaret Sullavan dress which was played up in ads, publicity and on circulars inserted in store packages.

Lamm Promotes Phone Company Ad on "Number"

Wide coverage was effected by Manager Louis Lamm on his "Wild Cargo" date at the Capitol, Elyria, Ohio. Besides distributing programs house to house and in eight schools, he also planted cards in all prominent windows. Special advance ad was carried in a neighborhood shopping news journal, bannered busses further plugging the feature. Lobby flash, including stuffed monkey, alligator skin, palm trees, grass rug, etc., stressed the background of this picture.

On "I've Got Your Number," Louis succeeded in promoting his local telephone company for a three-column, ten-inch display ad.

Lamm also sends along some of his weekly programs, containing snappy copy on coming attractions and many merchant ads which go a long way toward defraying the publishing expense.

Santa Visits Theatre To Plug Cool Plant

Among the many gags used by Jack Lykes to sell the cooling plant at the Stillman, Cleveland, was a life-size cutout of Santa Claus in front lobby (see photo) with copy reading "Santa Claus in midsummer brings cool comfort from the frozen North to Loew's Stillman."

One sheet with thermometer readings of heat records around Cleveland was used in lobby and proved a real eye-arrester, Jack says, and as passersby stopped many of them were attracted by the cool air coming from the theatre, inducing them to buy tickets.

A group of newsboys were taken on an inspection tour of the cooling plant, photos taken and planted in the newspapers. Jack's catch line on all copy is "cooled to comfort."

Post Endorsements on "Little Man" Preview

Charlie Wuertz, manager and Hal Neides, publicity manager, of the Orpheum in San Francisco, opened their campaign for "Little Man, What Now?" with an advance preview to which they invited dramatic critics, newspaper men, book editors, officers of literary clubs and important citizens, many of whom responded with letters of endorsement. Some of the outstanding letters were rigged up on a panel with production stills and displayed in the lobby.

Another smart panel was prepared by using the numerous publicity breaks received by Margaret Sullavan in national fan magazines. Large compo-board books with blow ups of Sullavan and Montgomery were made for both sides of the marquee (see photo). Wuertz and Neides also cashed in on the fashion, book and shirt tie-ups netting extra windows and free newspaper ad space.

Carnera's Sister Takes Bow for Fred Naify

Hooking into some fast exploitation on the Baer-Carnera pictures, Fred Naify, at the Senator Theatre in Chico, Cal., rigged up a street bally on which two boys were engaged in a mock fight (see photo). Truck toured congested sections, causing much merriment and word-of-mouth comment.

Taking advantage of the fact that Carnera's sister was in the audience, Fred called on her to come up to the stage and say a few words to which she agreed, much to the enjoyment of the patrons. Carnera's mother and sister live a short distance from Naify's theatre.

Patrons Sign "Hotel" Register for Mailing List

Constructing a replica of a hotel lobby was part of Spyros Cardas' campaign for "Merry Wives of Reno," at the Fox Belmont, Los Angeles, Cal. An attractive young lady who was in charge of the "office" (see photo) invited patrons to sign a regular hotel book and as they did so, she gave them a sales talk and handed out heralds. Incidentally, this was a smart way to increase Cardas' mailing list.

On "Viva Villa," Spyros promoted a Mexican orchestra from a nearby cafe, the outfit playing in the lobby a week prior to opening, and a special Spanish night was sponsored by the local Mexican-Spanish Society. As atmosphere for his trailer, Cardas arranged a complete blackout of house lights during which gun shots were fired in front of the screen, followed by the teaser trailer and the lights slowly coming up on the dimmers.

For his Kiddie Klub, Spyros made a swimming pool tie-up whereby free tickets were given with each paid Saturday theatre admission. Another hook-in with a local dairy resulted in free ice cream to each child attending the first Saturday show of each month. On their birthdays the company sent a quart of cream, together with a pass from the theatre entitling members to bring parents to the show any time during the week. Cardas says that has proved to be a great box-office stimulant.

Miskell Digs Up Shivers On Terror "Cat" Campaign

Billy says it was a great stunt, offering a reward to some brave local who would view a screening of "The Black Cat" at the Orpheum, Omaha, alone at midnight in the unlighted auditorium, seated in a casket. It seems that someone did go for it, but fell down at the last moment, after being examined by a physician, etc., etc.

The gag was put on the night before opening, and on entering the house, Miskell had the "subject" walk under a ladder, break a mirror, hold a horse shoe over his head, etc. Then the brave bucko was seated in the casket and wheeled down the aisle—but that's as far as he got.

Gross Gets Ace Breaks On Sally Rand Date

Complete coverage was secured by Manager Mickey Gross, in Sioux City, Iowa, for the date on Sally Rand at the Orpheum, with a strong line-up of breaks in advance and effective exploitation that continued during the engagement.

In addition to the stories planted ahead, all papers interviewed the dancer on her arrival and ran action photos of the star. Leading stores took co-op display ads, one going for half page to tie in personal appearance of Rand. Mickey also used radio extensively, having star interviewed over leading stations.

Gross also tied in with local railroads on excursion idea, heralds on the date being distributed at all stations within a radius of 200 miles. Another effective idea was promoting Sally as the mascot of a local ball team with attendant publicity, and as a topper to his campaign, Mickey staged a parade the night before opening, marchers carrying large cutout figures of the star.

First Local Co-op Page Landed by Eichenberg

Colorado Springs is noted for being a very tough newspaper town and thus Manager A. H. Eichenberg's success in landing a co-op page on "Murder at the Vanities" at the Rialto, brought more than average attention to the date. The page consisted of 26 two-column ads of equal size and a four-column theatre display atop the page headed by a streamer.

Each ad contained only the merchants' phone number and slogan, and guest tickets were given to readers sending in the correct list of merchants' names which were to be brought or mailed to the theatre. As a further aid, the daily ran extra stories and art on the picture.

Additional advertising and window cooperation was secured from stores tying in stockings to the famous Carroll girls, the hookin also being plugged with booklets printed and distributed by stores. News flashes were placed in prominent windows and hotel key boxes were stuffed. Music stores were tied in on the song hits which were also broadcast as was the radio transcription.

Eichenberg's lobby (see photo), he reports helped to bring extra attention to the date, and as a result of the campaign, said to be one of the biggest staged locally, the picture was held over for three days.

THE LAST OF THE "FAN" LETTERS

LEO ROSEN, Manager Troy, Troy, N. Y.

Charles S. Bassin's idea of closer cooperation between the theatre and fan magazines is both educational and practical.

Practical experience and personal contact between the potential patron and myself necessitates my favoring Bassin's request for closer cooperation between the theatre and the fan magazines. Contact with the patron has proven to me that at least 40 per cent of my patrons are more familiar with the pictures that I am about to play than I am myself. This is a result of fan magazines. Forty per cent of all the ballyhoo, tieups, etc., go to inform the fan magazine reader that we are about to show something that the fan magazine has made him anxious to see.

Not only should the average showman familiarize himself with trade magazines, but he should also be somewhat familiar with the average fan publications. . . .

JOHN W. CREAMER, Manager Waldo, Kansas City, Mo.

A year or so ago, in an article for the Herald I spoke of my feeling of opposition to fan magazines, and the reading of the article by Mr. Bassin has not changed my attitude. I still maintain that these magazines are a detriment to our business and they will be as long as they try to set themselves up as an authority on telling people what they should see and what they should not see. . . .

The publishing of the periodicals is too large an industry for the film people to try to make over, and Bassin admits that they are in the wrong in assuming that we should cooperate with them to overcome their wrecking our receipts on certain pictures. All that these publishing companies are interested in is the printing and selling of their magazines, and not in our box office receipts, and I doubt if the day will ever come when they are. They realize that our industry has millions of followers, and they are interested only in capitalizing on our investments; if we had no investments, they would have no circulation. Mr. Bassin admits this in his statement—"True, the fan mags are more dependent upon us than we are upon them."

Is Against Circulation Idea

As to the idea of trying to increase the fan magazines' circulations, I am against it because these circulations have increased by leaps and bounds and the woods are full of "mushroom growth" magazines, and how many of our exhibitors' box office receipts have increased in proportion? Isn't it true that we are all grossing less than we did five or six years ago when there were far fewer fan magazines and those with a much less circulation?

Next, the selling of fan magazines in our theatres: I think our Fox theatres found that out to our sorrow with the trying to sell "Screen Mirrors." Just ask any Fox manager about how he liked the idea. Also it is suggested that a list of fan magazines should be placed in our house organs. Okay as long as you know thoroughly that all of these magazines contain favorable reactions to our business.

Summing it all up, we can never hope to convince all of the fan magazines that they should label every film okay, because every magazine or paper believes it is its inherent right to give John K. Public information or news, and no one not connected with the film industry will ever favor our side of the question. Why should we support or even encourage any fan magazine or paper as long as that periodical cuts our throats with their reviews?

THIS FINISHES THE PRO AND THE CON

With the expressions printed on this page, the fan magazine subject in the Round Table section comes to a close, after a number of weeks of meaty discussion by the members.

Quite a number of managers have been heard from who have spoken their minds pro and con on the idea first broached by Charley Bassin. The atmosphere is a bit cleared, and we thank all who have helped to clear it.

V. TOUCHETT, Manager Fond du Lac, Fond du Lac, Wis.

It is my humble opinion that to tie in with fan mags would by all means invite "foreign entanglements." Could we help them all? (Would you endorse every movie magazine published today?) And, if we didn't, how would those left out react toward us?

The contents of these magazines are publicity, good or bad to us, but to the magazine editor it's news, as that is what Mr. Public pays for. Does the public regard anything as news that is prepared, distributed or sponsored by any theatre?

Could movie magazine publisher accept the kind of cooperation suggested by Mr. Bassin without sacrificing a certain amount of his independence, his privilege of panning? If so, he would perhaps suffer a loss in circulation, due to the depreciated confidence of his readers, in excess of the increase derived from our cooperation. If not, just how long would his benefactors, we, resist demanding "breaks"?

All I can visualize from such a plan is a conglomeration of arguments. Movie magazines must, in the main, be independent of our industry to operate successfully, honestly and to the satisfaction of the public. Occasional cooperation on feature articles, contests, etc., yes, but further than that it would mean "foreign entanglements"—you can bet your hat. . . .

AL ZIMBALIST, Pub. Dir. St. Louis Amusement Co.

Fan magazines do more than good, but—the material released to these periodicals with a total command of millions of readers should be carefully planned by the distributing organizations.

Generally, the expose angle of a star or producing organization tends to bring more harm than good. The people in the field are more or less picayune and devour the bad portion of an article, readying it for the next bridge party or neighborly conversation. Since word-of-mouth advertising is the most powerful, you can readily see the results. This is one phase of propaganda that has caused "censorship" in movies.

Theatre operators in Chicago have the right idea. They have fought for and obtained from the newspapers there a new plan of picture reviewing. "Review the pictures as spectators and not as critics, tearing every element of the screen play apart beyond box office recognition." The same plan should be forced upon fan magazines.

Of their own volition, pictures must please the tastes of the magazine reviewer in order to receive a justifiable rating. I doubt, personally, whether any of these reviewers have seen more than five years of experience in the motion picture field. If this is true, then they have no business whatever of judging a piece of merchandise which costs the producer hundreds of thousands of dollars. . . .

I would also give careful consideration to studio stories ready for newspaper and magazine release.

Barnum never showed the public what he had on the inside. He teased it, his press agents wrote about it, unbelievable stories were printed. But you had to get inside to find out what it was all about. Yet, the build up proved an incentive for better business.

Resents Studio Publicity

Studios should keep from the public the mysteries of producing a picture. Or even how a studio operates. If all of this were left to the public's imagination, the unraveling of each impossible bit of business would bring about more interest for pictures. Films at one time were a mystery, an unbelievable, powerful medium of entertainment. And theatres once did a capacity business. Remember?

Charlie Bassin says that publishers and producers should buy radio time. I think this is ridiculous and is absolutely the surest way to keep patrons away from the box office. To date, the radio is putting a big dent into box office receipts. For this reason, producers should keep their stars off the air! They are actually killing their own business by definitely making radio direct competition to theatres.

And before closing, I'd like to add that fan magazines should be placed under a strict censorship via the Hays office, since they are an important cog in the motion picture wheel.

Bronx Baby Parade Builds Up "Marker"

Through the efforts of Gene Myers, district manager, Perry Spencer, Bronx publicity director, and Manager Dave Schiller, Loew's Grand, New York, and with the cooperation of many neighborhood merchants, what was reported to be the first annual baby parade in that section was put on as part of the campaign on "Little Miss Marker."

Over 500 contestants were entered, parading in decorated baby carriages, floats, etc. (see photo). Music was supplied by the Bronx Catholic Boys' band, Boy Scouts' fife and drum corps and American Legion, others in line including Boy and Girl Scout troops and Camp Fire Girls.

Other participants included entries from many local dancing schools whose pupils appeared in costume. Merchants also entered floats and a number of clowns were used to supply comic relief. Traffic was reported to have been stopped for two hours and at the judges' stand, M-G-M cameramen filmed the event.

Among the judges were many leading borough personalities, and after the winners had been selected the specially promoted prizes, over 50 in number, were awarded on the stage of the theatre during the evening show. All stores carried window strips plugging the event, copy including attraction and theatre. The Loew-ites put on a strong advance campaign, entries being available at stores of participating merchants as well as at the theatre.

Merchant Tieups Build Up Flex' "Trouble" Campaign

Jack Flex' campaign on "Looking for Trouble" at the Palace in Indianapolis, Ind., featured plenty of tie-ups, among which was a hook-in with the Bell Telephone Company, who devoted an entire window to a display on the picture and placed posters throughout building plugging engagement.

Liggetts used a window on Jontel articles tying up scene stills of Cummings and Judge. Another drug store chain got out an Oakie "nut" sundae and placed streamers in twenty-two of their stores. A gown tie-up using stills of Constance Cummings resulted in a department store window display. A hardware store got up a window of tools in which cut-outs of Tracy and Oakie were the dominating figures. Kresge's got out paper bags with theatre imprint and all waste paper receptacles on street intersections were plastered with stickers.

"FREE LIST MAKES ENEMIES"

So Says "Jaysee" Who Accepts Invitation to Present His Views On the Subject of the Pass Evil

by COL. J. C. JENKINS

The information I have gathered by my associations with theatremen I think would warrant me in saying that the pass evil is one among the many things that theatremen have to contend with. This question has two sides, a right side and a wrong side, and I have found that most exhibitors are on the right side, although there are some who believe that a few free passes are beneficial to the theatre.

My experience with the theatre-going public has taught me that the man or woman who hollers the loudest against the programs or the convenience of the theatre is one who goes in on a free pass.

I never could see why a person was entitled to a pass to a theatre unless he had done something of benefit to the theatre's interest. It is all right to give a free pass for newspaper space, posting paper, distributing bills or other like service to the theatre, but when they give a pass to Sally Jones because her husband's cousin runs a theatre in Montana, it is all wrong.

Urges Discretion

The surest way to make an enemy to the theatre is via the free list route. The common rule is that when they once put a person on the free list or the "courtesy of the house" list, they must keep him there for all time or they have made an enemy to the house of him for the balance of his life.

It would take a lot of nerve to go into a meat market and ask the proprietor for a pass to come in each day and get 25 cents worth of gratis steak, and yet taking a pass from a theatreman is no different from that; the service he gets in each case costs money and a free pass doesn't pay any part of it.

There are times when giving a free pass is beneficial to the interest of the house. It can't always well be avoided. But if you think that the giving of a pass to Mrs. Greenbaum, because she gave a lecture to the high school class, is going to add any prestige to your theatre, you are just wetter than a bullfrog and you might as well have stayed in the river, for Mrs. Greenbaum let it be known publicly that she had been extended the courtesy of the theatre and that made the public sore at the house because they hadn't received such courtesy.

Theatre Rates Equal Break

As I see it, the best way to operate a theatre is upon the principle that it is one of the business institutions of the community, the same that a bank, a drygoods store, a drug store or any other business is. A theatre should have a business standing in the community the same as any other institution that depends upon the patronage of the public.

Years ago, our legislator used to get me a free pass from the railroad company upon the assumption that I had some political influence in the locality. That legislator and the railroad company were full of dried apples. My political influence extended as far as the cabbage patch and there it stopped, but I got a free pass just the same as though I amounted to something, but that free pass didn't do the railroad company any good.

There is no use of dwelling on this matter any further, for what I might have to say wouldn't influence a theatreman a particle for he would fill his theatre with free passes if he wanted to, which would be perfectly all right with me so long as I am not buying the pictures.

OBSERVATIONS

¶ Save, save, save—a strange new cry in theatre operation today. The pendulum has swung to the other extreme from the mad days before the depression. How much can you save? That seems to be the measure of ability, capacity and usefulness in all phases of theatre management. And what does "saving" mean when compared to savings resulting from economic planning and economic balance, or compared to savings created by an ingenuous solution to a problem or set of conditions?

Are "savings," calculated on whatever basis you please, a sales argument for more people to come into the theatres of this country? Do not "savings," carried to extreme, cheapen our entertainment, our theatres, our service and, in fact, the entire industry in the eyes of the theatre-going public?

All of these questions when carefully considered and intelligently answered, will shed an entirely different light on the present conception of the "created" savings now overemphasized.

¶ Our real effort should be to eliminate waste and unnecessary expenditures—this is only common business sense. But when the conception of savings is carried beyond this point it is definitely bad management. The creating of savings, and at the same time the lowering of standards, is not truly "saving" in the real sense of the word. It is just producing a cheaper product for a lower price, and the new low price for the cheaper product is very likely to be much less attractive to the prospective buyer!

In the wild effort to create savings in theatre operation, standards of operation have declined much further than savings have increased, indicating very definitely a bad economic balance. Showmanship cannot be measured in savings! Entertainment values cannot be measured in savings! A badly kept, uninviting theatre cannot be explained satisfactorily to the theatre-goer by telling him how much money is being saved per week, month or year. We hate to wear shabby clothes, we don't enjoy driving in a dented up, battered, ill-kept car, and people don't enjoy attending badly kept, shabby theatres.

The ability to operate cheaply and to create savings is no sales argument that can or will build up the box office. People expect that savings resulting from cheap operation shall be passed on to them in lower admission prices. When this is done the standard of the theatre has been lowered, and the measure of savings cannot be considered without due weight being given to the fact that the theatre has descended, very definitely, to a lower class than that it occupied before.

¶ We said as much to Mr. J. T. Knight, Jr., whose ideals as well as training in the affairs of the motion picture theatre we respect so much, and asked, "What does such perverted economy mean if continued?"

"If we don't take care of those things which we have been neglecting during the past few years? Simply this: We must resign ourselves to the operation of cheap, casual amusement places without any class. What that would do to the motion picture is plain."

It is—and the motion picture industry has never resigned itself to anything so dismal without a fight. It is hard to believe that it will now substitute superficial savings for showmanship—for good business!

The immediate future must be one of spending to reestablish the theatres of this country. The spending must be planned . . . carefully considered . . . judiciously regulated. But spend we must or suffer the consequences of cheap standards of operation, dilapidated properties, high insurance rates and loss of prestige.

¶ We can sympathize with those who see their investments facing jeopardy in the prospect of new competition, but except in the field of those public services which, from social necessity, deserve monopoly, we cannot appreciate the justice of attempts by established interests to prohibit others from entering their field.

This is what the Allied States units in Minneapolis and St. Paul are endeavoring to do. Exhibitors there have asked the local authorities to desist from issuing any more permits for theatre building. The exhibitors' petition was based, of course, on their contention that the local area is overseated.

Their contention may be entirely correct. But were no new theatres to be allowed because a community already had enough to serve it, enterprise would be confined, progress would be impeded, and established interests would be given a virtual monopoly.—G. S.

CHANGING A BANK INTO A THEATRE

THE SUTTON, a 600-seat motion picture theatre in the heart of midtown New York, represents the remodeling of commercial space which has been occupied by a bank. Ben Schlanger, New York architect, planned the revision, which applies to a reduced degree the Schlanger parabolic reversed floor plan. William A. Hoffberg was engineer. Total cost of the remodeling architecturally and exclusive of equipment and furnishings, was $26,000.

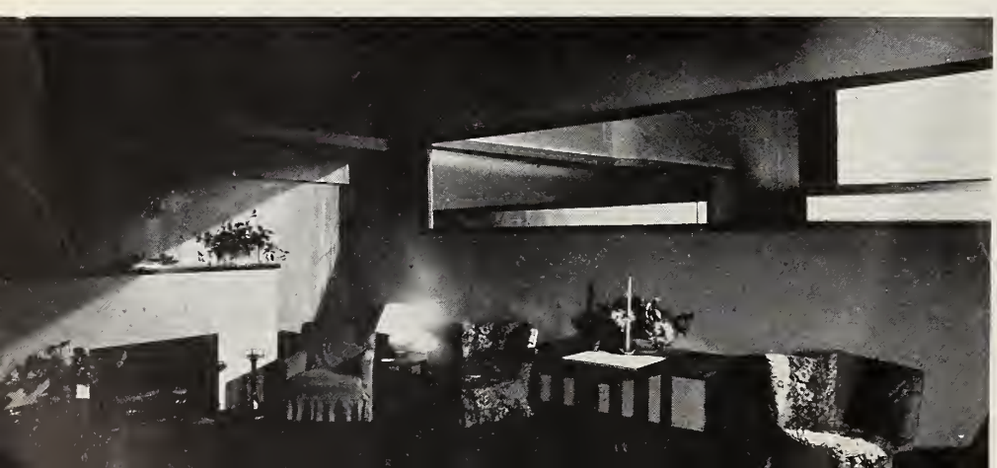
Originally this building was a theatre used for stage performances only. It was then extensively altered for bank use. While the bank made considerable alterations, the main structural parts of the original theatre building remained. A full size stage occupied a sizable portion of the property, leaving room only for about 300 seats in the old theatre.

For motion picture exhibition in this neighborhood, however, it was necessary to have at least 600 seats. The heavy masonry proscenium walls of the original theatre, marking the stage, and some interior roof supporting columns were retained in the subsequent bank plan, with no serious harm for the functioning of the bank. However, since the newly altered structure was to be used for motion picture exhibition only, no stage was necessary. The old proscenium walls and interior columns were removed (see plan), and the roof construction was shored up and left unchanged except for the use of new clear span steel girders where columns and brick wall supports had been removed. This left a maximum area for seat locations having an unobstructed view of the screen. The bank vaults had been located at what is now the screen end of the auditorium.

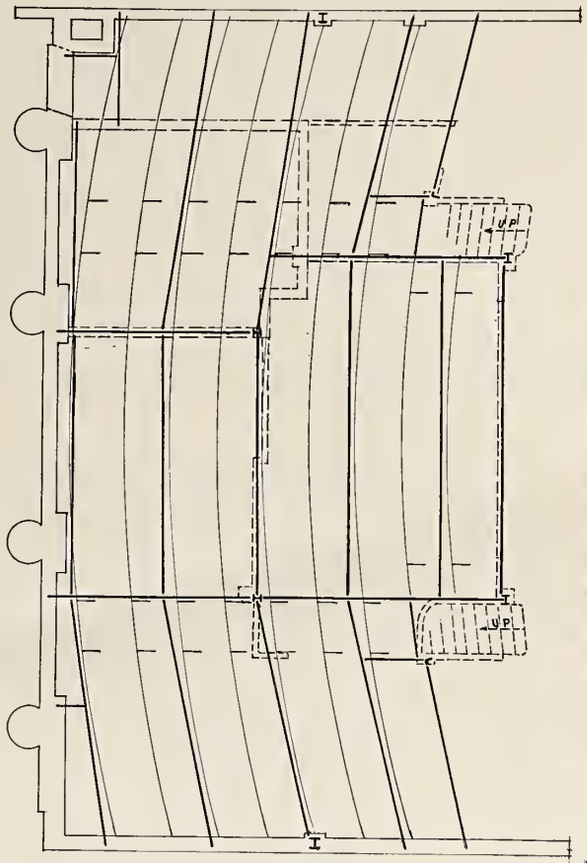
At the street end of the building a mezzanine level of seating was newly constructed over a new store, lobby, foyer and lounge. This not only helped to obtain a maximum number of seats, but also made possible the lounge room and store space. A lounge and store space introduced into a scheme with a single floor seating plan would have eaten into and decreased the seating capacity. This upper level of seating did not necessitate the raising of the existing roof level for its accommodation, as would ordinarily have been the case with the low head room (22 feet, 6 inches) which was found here. The retaining of the old roof construction was made possible by the use of the reversed floor slope plan.

The thickness of the mezzanine floor construction was also reduced to a minimum by an unusual design of shallow steel column sections, instead of I beams. To avoid projected beams, the shallow steel shapes were inserted in the thickest portion of the concrete mezzanine steps. Usual structural framing would in such a case have caused poor head room conditions for the spaces under the mezzanine, due to deep projection of steel members. (See mezzanine steel framing plan, page 7.)

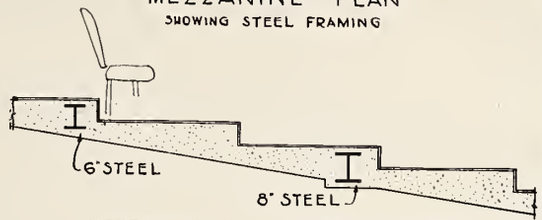
The lighting of the auditorium is entirely indirect. A trough of strip lighting about nine feet above the orchestra floor extends along the side walls. This light is thrown upward through a narrow 2-inch continuous slit. Footlights in front of the screen are also used. To give the plaster a sufficient time to dry properly, the owner decided to leave the auditorium unpainted for the first year. The monotony of the white plaster, however, is offset by the colored lighting trough.



The acoustic treatment of the auditorium consists in fabric placed over one inch thick rock wool on the rear wall surfaces parallel to the screen and on part of the side walls of the mezzanine. The chair backs are fully upholstered.



Above and below, two views of the auditorium, showing upward slope of forward seating.



Below, corner of the lounge, with screen visible through a narrow glazed port.

HEATING THE THEATRE ECONOMICALLY

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

How to select your equipment and fuel and supervise operation to get the most for your money

IN SPITE of the high temperatures from which most of us have been suffering, it yet is time to give some thought to the theatre heating plant in preparation for the coming winter.

All heating plants are composed of a boiler, piping and radiators, or other equipment for transferring the heat from the steam or hot water to the air in the theatre. Besides these three principal divisions of the heating plant, there are of course numerous traps, valves, gauges, pumps, etc.

BOILER DESIGN AND OPERATION

BOILERS MAY be classified as to form, as horizontal or vertical. Most every theatre installation that I have seen has been of the horizontal type. As to construction, boilers are shell, flue, sectional, fire-tube or water-tube; 85% of theatre installations are cast-iron sectional boilers. According to use, boilers are referred to as stationary, locomotive or marine. Of course all theatre boilers are stationary.

Cast-iron sectional boilers are suitable only for low pressure heating operations. These boilers are assembled section by section. I have seen as many as 18 sections, and as few as 8, constituting a boiler. The fire box is incorporated right in the sections and is surrounded by the hollow iron casting, so that the fire is literally surrounded by the water in the boiler. Some of these boilers are so designed that the hot gases of combustion pass from the rear to the front, turn and pass back to the rear and into the stack, through flues especially planned to increase the boiler heating surface that is in contact with the hot gases.

The design of any boiler is greatly influenced by the type and kind of fuel that it is to burn, hence it becomes very important to select and use the right fuel. The efficiency of the average theatre heating plant is not very high. I hazard the statement that few theatre plants operate with as great an efficiency as 50%. In using the word efficiency here I mean that few theatres really get 50% of the heat value contained in the coal or oil transferred to the water in the boiler. There are positive heat losses between the boiler and the radiators, so consequently my guess is that you are getting, in useful heat in your theatre, about 35% of the heat you are paying for in the coal or oil that you buy. I give the following reasons for this very low efficiency:

1. Improper care and cleaning of boiler.
2. Improper care of piping, valves and traps.
3. Improper selection of fuel.
4. Not enough attention given to the method of firing.
5. General lack of interest and knowledge on the part of the manager and boiler room attendants in the maintenance and operation of the heating plant.

With reference to the care and cleaning of the boiler, and in order to save repetition here, you might take out of your files the August 26, 1933, issue of BETTER THEATRES and read the article, "Preparing the Theatre for Winter."

PIPING, VALVES AND TRAPS

IN MANY operations one might be lead to believe that the manager, engineer or boiler room attendant did not consider that the piping, valves and traps were even a part of the heating system. Judging from actual experience these parts of the heating plant are not appreciated and generally sadly neglected. Piping of heating systems are of three general types: First, one-pipe system; second, two-pipe system; third, vacuum systems.

ONE-PIPE SYSTEM

The simplest, and the one that gives the manager most trouble, is the single-pipe system. In this system only one pipe enters the radiator. One main riser from the boiler extends to the ceiling and spreads out with horizontal branch pipes; from these branch pipes there is a vertical riser to each radiator or group of radiators. After the steam transfers its heat to the radiator it cools to the point of condensing; the condensation (water) returns to the boiler through the same pipe that delivers steam, and it returns by gravity (flows down hill).

It is obvious that the pipes in this system must be of large diameter and that they must always pitch toward the boiler, or else the water wont return to the boiler. Such systems are usually very noisy, especially when the plant is started up, or when the valve of a cold radiator is opened up. Sometimes pipe lines sag sufficiently so that instead of pitching toward the boiler they slant in the opposite direction, and condensation gradually forms a water pocket. In this case steam can't get through until sufficient pressure has been built up to overcome the back pressure of the water. When the steam does go through, the noise is generally like so many pistol shots.

If this condition exists, especially in a very large pipe that would be expensive to rehang, it can in most every instance be corrected by tapping into the pipe at the low point with a ⅜-inch or ½-inch pipe, and running that pipe into one of the vertical returns nearer the boiler. All radiators on the one-pipe system must be equipped with the automatic air valves that release air from the system as the system fills with steam. These air valves require attention; sometimes you will find them spouting steam or dripping water, either one of which might do a great deal of damage.

If you have a single pipe system that has been giving plenty of trouble, it would be well to have a steam fitter, or your engineer, disconnect one of the horizontal runs of pipe. You will probably find the deposits and scale of years accumulated there to such an extent that the 2-inch pipe might only be the equivalent of a ½-inch or ¾-inch pipe. I have seen old pipe taken out of such systems completely blocked up. Under such circumstances, replace the horizontal runs of pipe with new pipe—you will save the cost in one heating season and probably get satisfactory results from a plant that you felt was hopeless.

TWO-PIPE SYSTEM

The two-pipe system is an improvement over the single pipe. It is of course more costly to install, but it overcomes the objections in the single-type systems. In the two-pipe system there is one set of pipes that delivers the steam to the radiators and another set of pipes that carries the condensation (water) back to the boiler, and the air in the system is discharged at one point, generally located in the basement. The pipe that supplies the steam to the radiator enters at the top of the radiator, generally through a hand-operated valve. The condensation or return pipes leave from the bottom of the radiator through a fitting known as a trap. This trap—correctly called a thermostatic trap—permits air and water, but not steam, to pass.

When steam at 212° Fahrenheit strikes the trap, it causes a metallic bellows to expand and close the opening to the return pipe. When the steam condenses to water with temperature less than 212° Fahrenheit, the bellows contracts, opens the outlet to the return pipe and permits the water to return to the boiler. When you have leaky traps in the system it means that they are passing steam, which in turn means that the steam is not doing its job of heating the radiators. Leaky traps are an indication of bad, uneconomical operation. An 18-inch wrench and someone interested and energetic enough, is all that is necessary to inspect the traps to determine their condition. The name of the manufacturer is right on the trap, the bellows or diaphragms can be bought separately, and range in price (depending upon the make) from 65 cents to about $1.20 each. They can be installed by anybody of average intelligence. Sometimes the valve seat portion of the trap is corroded or eaten away in such a manner as to require a completely new trap. New traps may cost from $3.50 to $6.00, depending upon the make. Don't be fooled—nothing is saved by not having traps in good condition.

In this system—and as a matter of fact, in all systems— piping is of prime importance. It is obvious that a leaky joint or a cracked fitting should be repaired immediately, but what is the condition inside the pipe? Are you really getting the quantity of steam to the radiators that the pipe sizes indicate you should get, or are the pipes all clogged up with scale, sediment and deposits? This is for you to determine. If steam can't get to the radiators, the radiators can't heat the air. The only way I know of to determine the condition of the pipes inside is to disconnect them in a number of places and look inside. This is a few hours' work for a couple of men with wrenches. Horizontal pipes, and the bottom of vertical pipes where an ell occurs, will be the proper places to inspect.

VACUUM SYSTEMS

Vacuum systems are two-pipe systems with a vacuum pump connected into the return pipe line. This pump keeps a partial vacuum on the return line equivalent generally to about 10 inches of mercury below atmospheric pressure. This vacuum tends to suck every bit of condensation (water) and air from the system, and it speeds up and greatly improves circulation; in addition, it has another important advantage over the other two systems where the return is by gravity: a vacuum system can operate with radiators located below the boiler line, an impossibility with either the single- or two-pipe system. The vacuum pump returns the water of condensation either directly to the boiler or to a tank that feeds the boiler.

This space has been devoted to pipes in order to impress upon you that the piping in your theatre is of equal importance as your boiler. Wherever the word radiator appears in the foregoing, the word heating coils may be applied, because they are in reality only a special form of radiator.

KINDS OF FUEL AND THEIR USE

COAL MAY BE classified with reference to volatile matter and fixed carbon, as anthracite, semi-bituminous and bituminous. In volatile matter, anthracite may run as high as 7½%, semi-bituminous as high as 13%, and bituminous as high as 35%. These coals may have fixed carbon in the following percentage: anthracite 95%, semi-bituminous 85%, and bituminous 65%. Anthracite has about 15,000 B.t.u. (British Thermal Units) per pound, semi-bituminous about 15,500, and bituminous about 15,800 B.t.u. per pound.

Anthracite coal burns without smoke, is clean to handle, and maintains a very steady fire when infrequently attended, but its cost is high, and many times it runs high in ash content.

Semi-bituminous coal burns with some slight smoke, it is not so clean to handle as anthracite, but it costs somewhat less to use than anthracite.

Bituminous coal is the cheapest type of coal. It generally burns with soot and smoke and is dirty to handle. Besides, it clinkers in the grate, therefore requiring more attention in firing.

GRADES OF COAL

Anthracite coal is further classified as to size: Large egg, lumps that wont pass through 2¾-inch mesh. Egg, lumps that wont pass through 1¾-inch mesh. Stove or range that wont pass through 1¼-inch mesh. Chestnut, that wont pass through ¾-inch mesh. Pea, that wont pass through ½-inch mesh. Buckwheat, that wont pass through ¼-inch mesh. And rice, that wont pass through ⅛-inch mesh. With these many sizes of anthracite coal, if you burn anthracite coal, the size of the openings between the grate bars is important. The CLEANING FLOORS: To clean very rough floors, particularly badly pitted marble or terrazzo floors, where it's impossible to reach the dirt deposited in the holes with a brush or mop, use a detergent with a high percentage of soap. Or add liquid or jelly soap to the mild cleaner that you now use. This extra soap decreases the surface tension of the dirt and allows it to be floated to the surface. The excess soap accomplishes the cleaning and is carried forward with the squeegee, that remaining in the indentations is below the walking surface of the floor and does not contribute to the slipperiness of it.

CLEANING BELTS: Leather belts on fans or compressors should be cleaned regularly. Light dust and dirt can be removed with a piece of heavy cloth. Where the dust or dirt is caked on the belt dressing regularly, but not too much of pine wood. Don't ever use a knife, screw driver or chisel. Oil can be removed with carbon tetrachloride. Use belt, scrape it off with the square edge at any one time. Don't have the belt too tight, but on the other hand it must not be too loose or slipping. Take a look at the lacing and see that it is strong, tight and flat, also that the lacing is not putting an uneven tension on the belt.

AVOID FLIES: During fly season, spray toilet rooms at least once each day and twice if necessary, with insect spray. Flies about a rest room are equally as objectionable as odors. Hot weather makes such conditions seem worse.

SEAT "BLEEDING" (answering A. A. B. and A. E. S.): Both you men are having the same trouble with your seats, i. e., "Bleeding" when moist clothes come in contact with them during warm weather. There is only one sure correction that I know for this condition. I am assuming that both of you have stained wood veneer seats. The following suggestions apply only to the wood portions of the chairs. Buy a good grade of furniture varnish, one that drys in, say, 4 hours, and varnish all surfaces of the wood portions of the chairs that might come in contact with the damp clothing of the patrons. The grade of varnish that I have reference to may cost from $5 to $7 a gallon. I know it's a lot of money, but in the long run it's cheaper than having patrons' dresses and suits cleaned or buying new ones for them. Don't use a cheap varnish. Cheap varnishes contain rosin instead of more expensive hard elastic gums. They dry with a hard, brittle finish, but have poor lasting qualities. Should you use them on your chairs, they will soften in warm weather and retain the impression of whatever fabric that may be pressed against it. If the imitation leather on theatre chairs is bleeding, don't use varnish on it—that's another problem.

WHAT MR. YANCEY CREATED WITH $3,500

THE PARADISE theatre represents the ingenuity of a show-wise young man who was not deterred by limited capital from realizing the means of providing himself with a business that has a chance to give him a good enough livelihood, and providing the town he has chosen with a theatre adequate to its immediate requirements. This two-fold plan of Robert K. Yancey, owner and manager of the Paradise theatre in Cotter, Ark., has resulted in a motion picture theatre planned by himself, and to a large extent built by himself.

In bringing it to the attention of these pages, Mr. Yancey wrote, "You once published a page entitled, 'What Mr. Jefferis got for his $5,000,' therefore I thought you might be interested in what I got for my $3,500."

The theatre Mr. Yancey referred to is one created by A. B. Jefferis and his wife in Piedmont, Mo., a town of about 1,000 population, and similar in size to Cotter.

The Piedmont theatre is of brick, 24 feet wide and 70 feet long. Seating is in two banks with a wide center aisle. On each side wall of the auditorium are two panels, each 100 x 72 inches, while two panels of the same size are on the rear wall. In addition to these two rear panels is one, measuring 50 x 72 inches, which is laid with felt for sound absorption and covered with rust-colored damask.

And now the Paradise theatre, which Mr. Yancey describes, beginning with the next paragraph, in his own words.

I AM 27 years of age and in my tenth year in the show business, having run a theatre in Mansfield, Mo., for seven years before I moved to Cotter, Ark., where I am now located.

My house was built to be used as a theater or to be converted into a store should there be a desire to do so. The building is 75 feet long, 26 feet wide and 16 feet high. It was built without a front or plastering—no partitions, no elevated floor, etc.—and this was how it was when I started to make a theatre out of it. Yet I have furnished and equipped this for about $3,500.

The three views of the Paradise show the entrance (upper left), the auditorium (upper right), and the decorative display treatment at one end of the lobby (above).

The equipment (except for a few accessories) cost about $2,500, while the changes to the building cost in the neighborhood of $1,000. The actual items included in the total cost of $3,500 are plaster, floor, lobby, projection room, doors, marquee, stage and furnishings, wiring, painting, screen, projectors, sound equipment, chairs, non-sync equipment, lighting fixtures, display and lobby fixtures.

Cotter has a population of a little over 1,000 and is a division point on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, which employs about 400 persons.

The front of the building is done in light brown stucco. The marquee and advertising frames are in light pea green sponged with a dark green, red and yellow. The doors are dark green. The name sign is stained black with white and red letters.

The lobby is 26 x 24 feet and is finished off in decorative plaster, the walls in gray, green and gold, while the ceiling is done in brown mixed with a green tint at the surface. Advertising boxes are dark red splashed with white, light red, yellow and light blue. The frames are red with silver tinsel. The linoleum on the floor is red, yellow, blue and gray. At the end of the lobby (which is shown in the picture) there is a little cutout on each side of a shadow box. These cutouts are illuminated with red light while the shadow box is illuminated with white light.

The seating arrangement of the auditorium is planned with two aisles, one down each side, placing all the seats in the middle. The walls are finished off in decorative plaster, the colors being red, yellow and green, blended together. There are also drapes along the side walls.

At the proscenium opening there are two shadow boxes, one on each side. These are illuminated with red lights behind statues. The stage casings are done in green and gold polychrome. The grilles on each side of the stage are painted green with a tint of gold on the surface. The front curtains are light brown with red side panels, and the stage is illuminated with red and blue lights.

The screen sets 8 feet from the front of the stage. The projection room is 9 x 14 feet and is painted brown and yellow. It is practically sound-proof. I am using two Powers 6B projectors with Mellaphone sound system, Webster amplifier and two Wright-DeCoster speakers. I also have two turntables for non-sync music during intermission and at the end of the last show.

THEATRE LAW FROM RECENT DECISIONS

By LEO T. PARKER

Analyzing higher court cases involving legal forms and rights of special interest to theatre operators

CONSIDERABLE discussion has arisen from time to time whether or not a contract is valid by the terms of which an employe agrees not to accept competitive employment for a period of one year or more after leaving employment of the present employer. Generally speaking, a contract of this nature is valid and enforceable, providing the duration is not unreasonable and the territory is clearly described.

CASE

For instance, in City v. Snell (57 S. W. [2d] 440, St. Louis, Mo.) it was disclosed that a company and an employe entered into a written contract of employment. The contract upon which the subsequent controversy arose provided that the employe would not for a period of one year after leaving the present employment, either voluntarily or otherwise, accept employment with a competitor.

After remaining in the employ of the employer for a considerable period of time the employe threatened to accept employment with a competitor. The former employer filed suit and asked the Court to grant an injunction to prevent the employe from accepting such employment. In granting this injunction, the court said:

DECISION

"The restrictions of the contract herein are limited as to time; namely, one year after the employe leaves the employment of the company. They are limited as to place, for they apply only to a particular territorial district within the city of St. Louis. . . . In so far as this contract is concerned, defendant (employe) is free to engage in any business of any character whatsoever anywhere outside of the territorial district named. Within that district he is free to engage in any business except the particular activities named. Contracts of the nature of the one here involved have been upheld by the Courts of this state in numerous cases. Attacks on such contracts have been made on various grounds, but it is now well established by the decisions of our Supreme Court and appellate courts that contracts similar to the one in this case are based upon a sufficient consideration, namely, the mutual promises of the parties, are not void for want of mutuality, are not against the public policy, and are not void on the ground of restraint of trade."

TIME LIMIT ON FIRE CLAIM

CONSIDERABLE controversy has existed over whether a provision in an insurance policy is valid by the terms of which a theatre owner is required to file suit within twelve months after a fire occurs. This point of the law was decided in the recent case of Rouse v. Old Colony Insurance Company (166 S. E. 177, Kinston, N. C.)

CASE

In this case it was shown that a property owner held a fire insurance policy. The building was destroyed by fire and the insurance company refused to pay the policy on the contention that the property had a mortgage on it, whereas such fact was not stated in the application for the policy. The property owner and an agent of the insurance company had several conferences during which it appeared to the property owner that the insurance would be paid.

For this reason suit was not filed on the policy to recover the loss until more than twelve months after the fire had occurred. The counsel for the insurance company contended that the suit should be dismissed because the policy contained a clause stating that a valid suit to recover insurance on a policy could not be filed unless brought before twelve months after the fire had occurred. In upholding this contention the court said:

DECISION

"The decisions of this Court are to the effect that the contractual limitation of twelve months in which to bring suit, inserted in an insurance policy, is valid and binding."

INJURY FROM STRUCTURE FAULT

THE COURTS in many different states have uniformly held that the standard of duty required by the law to be exercised by the owner of a theatre toward an invitee, such as a patron, employe and the like, is that of reasonable care. Also reasonable care must be exercised to have the theatre premises safely constructed. Reasonable care is care proportionate to the nature of the instrumentalities involved and the ordinary circumstances, and it is always to be proportionate to the hazards reasonably to be apprehended.

CASE

For example, the operation of an elevator involves danger, and if accident occurs, it may result in liability. Moreover, this rule is applicable to other dangerous appliances used in modern buildings, as the boiler which furnishes steam heat; the conductors through which electric light is furnished; open stairways; wrinkled and worn carpets; improperly illuminated steps; slippery floors and stairways; defective seats and hand railings; and many other instrumentalities which are likely to cause injury to theatre patrons, employes and all other persons, such as solicitors, inspectors, deliverymen, and the like, who are expressly or impliedly invited on the premises.

On the other hand, it is important to know that the courts have never attempted to impose on an owner of a theatre building any greater responsibility than that of exercising reasonable care. It is very probable that in the advance of mechanical arts many new appliances will be introduced into theatre buildings which will involve danger and yet the same rule of the law is applicable. As above indicated,

MOTOR LUBRICATION.—Correct lubrication of ball bearings is of extreme importance, if the maximum operating results are to be obtained. The main essentials of a good ball bearing grease are: It should not contain abrasive or body matter such as pumice, graphite or talc; it should have a mineral base and have a consistency stiffer than vaseline or similar to Nos. 2 or 3, as graded by manufacturers of auto greases. When the motor or generator is operated at speeds up to 1,800 rpm, one greasing should last from nine to twelve months, under normal conditions. Under practically any condition it should not be necessary to put in new grease oftener than every three months.

Write us your electrical problem. An expert reply will be promptly Electrographed.

in order that theatre owners may avoid liability for injuries, evidence must be introduced showing that they exercised reasonable and ordinary care to safeguard patrons and other persons against injury.

For illustration, in Stratton v. Newberry (169 Atl. 56, Hartford, Conn.), an injured patron sued to recover damages contending that the proprietor should have exercised a greater degree of care in the construction and operation of certain mechanical instrumentalities. Since the proprietor proved that he used ordinary care, the higher court promptly held the patron not entitled to recover for the injury and stated the following important law:

DECISION

"Indeed, to sustain the rule invoked by the appellant (patron) would result in one standard of conduct being required of the owner in respect of one instrumentality in a building and a different standard for another. . . . He is seeking entertainment, and, when invited by a manager to avail himself of the equipment provided by certain forms of amusement, he can properly ask only that he be not exposed by the carelessness of those in charge of any given instrumentality to harm preventable by care appropriate to the operation of such instrumentality."

DELIVERY OF NEGOTIABLE PAPER

BY M. MARVIN BERGER
MEMBER NEW YORK BAR

HERETOFORE, we have discussed the qualities which enable a note, dratt or check to pass from hand to hand free from the defenses available to prior parties. The present article describes the actual method by which an instrument passes from hand to hand.

The methods of transfer of a negotiable instrument from one person to another are delivery and indorsement. In either case, where the instrument is transferred from one person to another in such a manner as to make the transferee the holder, the method of transfer is known as negotiation. Negotiation is the final step necessary to make a person a holder in due course (as defined in my article of June 30), the other requirements being a properly drawn instrument and certain qualifications on the part of the transferee.

An instrument, when it is payable to bearer, is negotiated by delivery; when payable to the order of a person, it is negotiated by that person's indorsement plus delivery of the instrument by him. The indorsement takes the form of the signature of the indorser on the instrument (usually on the back) with or without additional writing. There are several forms of endorsement and an understanding of the use of each is important. They are:

1. Indorsement in Blank: This form of indorsement consists simply of the signature of a person upon the instrument. For example, upon a note payable to the the order of John Smith, the signature of John Smith on the back is a blank indorsement. By such an indorsement, the instrument is in effect made payable to bearer for the purposes of further negotiation, for it can then be transferred from one person to another by delivery alone without the necessity of further indorsement.

2. Special Indorsement: In this form of indorsement, the person to whom or to whose order the instrument is to be payable is named and it becomes necessary for that indorsee to indorse the instrument before it can be further negotiated. This form of indorsement reads: "Pay to John Brown" or "Pay to the order of John Brown," in each case followed by the indorser's signature.

3. Restrictive Indorsement: This form of indorsement is used to prevent an instrument from being further negotiated. For example, the indorsements "Pay to John Smith Only," or, where the instrument is to be given to a bank for collection, "For Deposit," or "For Collection," are restrictive indorsements and prevent further circulation of the instrument.

4. Qualified Indorsement: This form is used by the indorser to negotiate an instrument without causing the indorser to incur any liability as such. It may be made by adding after the indorser's signature, "Without Recourse," or by the use of a similar expression.

A person who becomes an indorser upon a negotiable instrument undertakes certain liabilities. For example, a person who negotiates an instrument by delivery or even by a qualified indorsement guarantees (1) that the instrument is genuine, (2) that he has good title to it, (3) that all prior parties were legally capable of making and receiving the instrument, (4) that he has no knowledge of any fact which would impair the validity of the instrument or make it valueless.

These guarantees are extended to every subsequent indorser of the instrument, except that where the negotiation is by delivery only the guarantees extend in favor of no holder other than the immediate transferee. And so where John Smith indorses an instrument in blank and delivers it to James Brown, who in turn delivers it to John Doe, Smith's guarantees run only in favor of Brown and do not extend to Doe.

In addition to the above warranties, an indorser who indorses without qualification also warrants that at the time of his indorsement the instrument was valid, and that when the instrument is duly presented, it will be accepted or paid or both as the case may be and that if it is not paid or accepted, that on being given proper notice, he will pay the amount of the instrument to the holder or to any indorser whose indorsement follows his and who has been compelled to pay it.

In other words, the indorser who does not qualify his indorsement, guarantees that if the instrument is not paid by any of the prior parties and that if he is given notice of that fact, he will make good. It is important to remember in this connection that if the holder of an instrument extends the time of payment without the consent of the indorsees, the indorsees will not be liable unless the maker expressly reserves his right against the indorsees.

STATUS OF HOLDER OF NOTE

A VERY important point of the law with respect to notes is that the holder of a negotiable note which is not due generally is not affected by any agreement made between the original holder of the note and debtor, unless the facts of this agreement are brought to the present holder's attention as by writing on the note or by verbal information given to the present holder before he acquires possession of the note.

On the other hand, various courts have held that the holder of an overdue negotiable note takes it subject to all agreements and defenses between the original holder and the debtor. In other words, the fact that a note is in circulation after its maturity is of itself sufficient to put a purchaser upon inquiry. Should he take it under such circumstances he never acquires a better title than the person from whom he purchased it, and he is not a holder "in due course" but he is subject to all defenses which may have been available against the the seller of the note.

CASE

For instance, in Amite Bank v. Standard (149 So. 532, New Orleans, La.) it was shown that a person issued a negotiable note payable six months thereafter. After the six-months period had expired another person became the holder of the note and litigation developed over the question whether the present holder of the note held it subject to private agreements between the original holder and the debtor. In holding that the last holder was not one "in due course," the court said:

DECISION

"The holder in due course, of a negotiable instrument, that is complete and regular upon its face, is one who has taken the instrument before its maturity."

TO SUPPLY TOOLS EMPLOYER'S DUTY

THE LAW is well established that a theatre owner is bound to furnish his employes with reasonably safe appliances to perform the work required of them, and also to keep such equipment in safe condition by ordinary inspection from time to time. However, this rule of the law is applicable only with respect to complicated equipment which the courts may recognize as being naturally dangerous to employes using them. In other words, a theatre owner is not bound to exercise ordinary care to maintain simple tools in safe condition.

For example, in Kelley v. Brown (247 N. W. 900, Benton Harbor, Mich.) it was shown that an employer supplied his employe with a small step-ladder. One day the ladder broke and the employe fell, seriously injuring himself. He filed suit against his employer to recover damages contending that the latter was negligent in failing to inspect and repair the ladder.

However, since a step-ladder is classified as a simple tool, the lower court refused to hold the employer liable and the higher Court sustained the verdict.

POWERS OF CORPORATION

THE COURTS take notice of the fact that a corporation receives many special privileges and franchises, and holds them subject to the laws of the state and the limitations of its charter. In other words, a corporation can make no contract not authorized by its charter. Its rights to act as a corporation are only preserved to it so long as it obeys the laws of its creation.

Another important point of the law is that the legislature may investigate contracts of a corporation and find out whether it has exceeded its powers. This is true because it would be a strange anomaly to hold that a state, having chartered a corporation to make use of certain franchises, could not, in the exercise of its sovereignty, inquire how these franchises had been employed and whether they had been abused, and demand the production of the corporate books and papers for that purpose.

Therefore, in all legal controversies involving a corporation, the state or municipal officials may demand that books of the corporation shall be delivered at a specified place for the purpose of examination. Also, a command by the proper state or municipal official that the books of the corporation shall be delivered up for inspection and examination is in effect a command to those who are officially responsible for the conduct of its affairs. Moreover, a subpoena directed to a corporation or its officers, and requiring the production of books, records, or papers of the corporation, does not, when the subpoena is suitably specific and properly limited in its scope, violate the unreasonable search and seizure provision of the Fourth Amendment to the Federal Constitution which specifies that: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue without probable cause, supported by affidavit, particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

On the other hand, a subpoena need not be obeyed unless the particular books, records, or papers to be produced shall be clearly specified. In other words, a demand in general terms for all, or even a substantial part, of the records or documents of a corporation is not sufficient and the corporation officials will not be liable for failure to obey a subpoena of this nature.

CASE

For illustration, in the recent case of People v. Reynolds (182 N. E. 754, Chicago, Ill.), it was disclosed that the Illinois state's attorney filed in the criminal court a petition in which he alleged that the grand jury was investigating the activities of the Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local No. 110; that members of the union informed him that its officers had issued many permits to non-members authorizing them to operate moving picture machines upon their promises to pay the union 10 per cent. of their weekly wages; that the money collected from the holders of such permits had not been paid to the union but had been used by the officers for their personal benefit. The state's attorney further alleged that in order fully to investigate the charges made by members of the union, it was necessary to examine the books and records of the organization, and that if the facts charged were true they showed an embezzlement of the union's funds. A subpoena was issued requiring the union to produce before the grand jury

CHECKING YOUR LIGHTING: A SERIES OF FORMS

Theatre lighting needs methodical, regular checking, at short intervals to make sure that proper functioning is maintained, and at longer periods, to determine whether the equipment is still effiicent and in keeping with high standards of appearance and safety. Forms which can be easily copied on a typewriter that not only provide space for a report, but guide the manager or person making the inspection, have been prepared by the Engineering Department of General Electric. They cover every division of the theatre. One for each will be carried in this series. The first, for the front as viewed from distant points, appears below:

FRONT

As viewed from distant points

ITEM	CONDITION FOUND	SUGGESTIONS
1. Bright Enough ?		Brightness may be increased by increasing lamp wattages or by using additional lamp displays. See No. 5.
2. Contrasts with Competing Displays?		Select some of the colors or tints different from surrounding lighting.
3. Effective Motion?		"On and off" and "flowing" border add to effectiveness and reduce cost. New G.E. Sign Controller is especially effective.
4. Letters Blurred?		Letters may be too small in size. Too high wattage in dark locations causes blurring. Letter Height (Ft.) = Maximum Viewing Distance (Ft.) / 500
5. Front Appears Inconspicuous?		The addition of luminous elements, pylons, or panels, will give the effect of increased size and add distinction.

A PROJECTION SUPPLY RECORD FORM

By AARON NADEL

A simple system devised to give the manager and projectionist accurate operating data. Form appears on page 16

ACCURATE RECORD of the performance of all replaceable parts of projection room apparatus is invaluable to any theatre as a help to economical and satisfactory purchasing. It is almost equally valuable to manufacturers who supply theatre parts, since the information it furnishes will enable them to meet the needs of the user much more closely than otherwise would be possible.

The form illustrated should give very little trouble to any projectionist. Whenever new supplies are received by the projection room, and tested and put away, suitable entries are made in the three left-hand columns of this form. These add only about a minute's work to the job of receiving, testing and storing supplies.

Whenever any part is removed from service for any reason it may be laid aside until near, or just after, the end of the show. Then one entry, referring to the new part which replaced it, is made in the "Date Installed" column. Next the data concerning the part removed is added to the six right-hand columns, a process requiring perhaps a minute for each part, and carried out with the help of a "calendar form" described below. When one page of the record form is completely filled, perhaps once in six months or once a year, the summary and averages at the bottom are figured and recorded, requiring certainly less than five minutes.

With all necessary care and attention, this form should not need more than 15 minutes of the projectionist's time for every month it is used.

A small loose-leaf folder suitable for this form, together with a supply of perforated pages, can be bought in any ten-cent store. One page should be prepared per the accompanying diagram for each item of supply in the projection room. In the case of a single theatre the manager's stenographer can type up as many forms as will normally be necessary, in half an hour's time. In the case of a chain of several theatres the real dollar-and-cents value of accurate records will far more than justify the cost of a rubber stamp made up along these lines.

At top left, "Type of Item" should be filled in with the name of the item—exciting lamp, rectifier tube, amplifier tube, B-battery, or whatever it may be, together with the manufacturer's type number. For example, "Rectifier tube, type 281."

The name of the manufacturer follows. Whenever more than one make of the same item is used a separate page is provided for each—one of the most valuable functions of a form like this is the comparison it affords between the products of different manufacturers, enabling the theatre to determine infallibly which maker gives most value per dollar. "Price of Item" is included to the right for reference of the projectionist in filling in this form, but because prices change a "Cost of Item" column is added below.

THEATRE SERIAL NUMBER

It is the practice in many theatres to add to each item of supply a small gummed label carrying some of the information which this chart calls for, but the practice has two disadvantages. One is that the labels become lost, or illegible because they discolor with heat; and the second that information scattered in that way is not readily available for statistical summaries.

For the purpose of this chart every item of supply reaching the projection room should be given a serial number. Manufacturers sometimes number their equipment serially—if they did it always, theatre numbers would not be needed, but the practice is unfortunately followed in a very haphazard way. The theatre must therefore supply its own serial numbers, by gummed label, which is uncertain, or by means of india ink, which is permanent and withstands heat. India ink can be bought in any ten-cent store.

FACTORY SERIAL NUMBER

In case claims for credit are in order because of exceptionally short life or other defect, the manufacturer before honoring such claims may want to know the serial number of the part involved, assuming he has provided a serial number. For this reason wherever a serial number exists, a record must be made of it.

TESTED O. K. BY

It is careless and dangerous to stock spare parts unless they have been tested. They may have been shipped in defective condition, or damaged in shipment. The theatre that puts parts away for future use without testing them may call on the same parts sometime in an emergency and find they are not useable. A chart showing testing methods was printed in these pages some months ago. In this present chart, the projectionist who tests a supply of spares vouches for each of the items tested with his initials.

RUNNING INVENTORY

This form provides a running inventory that tells at a glance exactly how many spares of each item are available. The running inventory is provided by the two columns to the left of the triple line.

For example, is another order of exciting lamps needed? The theatre serial number column tells how many have been received and numbered, and the test column shows how many were found fit for use. The "Date Installed" column shows how many have been put into use. The rest are available; if they aren't found in the spare parts cabinet there is a "leak" somewhere. A single glance should tell how many items are listed in column 3 but not in column 4.

To complete this running inventory, it is necessary to keep all the pages in strictly alphabetical and numerical order, according to the name of the item and the type number given to it by the manufacturer. Then, after checking one page of any item for inventory purposes, it is only necessary to turn to the following pages and see if there are any additional supplies of the same item, by a different manufacturer.

NATURE OF USE

In some sound systems the same type of tube can be used either as a rectifier or as an amplifier, and there are other examples of double use for the same piece of equipment. It is advisable to know just how any part is used; it may be found that the tube of Manufacturer A gives best service as a rectifier while the same type tube supplied by Manufacturer B is the most desirable to use as an amplifier. Moreover, information of this kind if transmitted to the manufacturer may result in improvement of his product.

REASON REMOVED

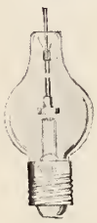
Very similar considerations apply to this column of information. Let us say a manufacturer offers to guarantee his tubes against burning out. It is not possible to determine the value of such a guarantee, or whether it has any value at all, unless the theatre knows whether such tubes do burn out, or merely become useless because they grow "weak"—loss of space current. A great many of the items of supply used in the projection room need replacement for more than one reason. The theatre that knows which type of failure is most common, in the case of any particular item, is in the best position to buy its supplies intelligently and at the lowest net cost.

HOURS USED

This is perhaps the most important single item on the chart. If you don't know how long your parts last you don't know how much you're paying for them. Price alone means nothing.

The "Hours Used" column must be filled in accurately if it is really to mean anything, but in most theatres the projectionist in charge offers a rough guess. Very often the manufacturer disputes such rough guesses, and hesitates to honor claims for credit that are based upon them. There is no necessity for any such trouble. It is extremely easy to keep a sufficiently accurate record of the number of hours any part is in actual use.

CALENDAR FORM



The only equipment needed for keeping such record is a reasonably large wall calendar, the leaves of which can be turned back rather than torn off.

On January 1, supposing the theatre will run that day for 12 hours, the chief projectionist writes in the square for January 1 the number 12. Next day the theatre is to run 8 hours, and before starting his show that day he writes in the square for January 2 the number 20—12 plus 8. Before the show starts January 3 an appropriate figure is written in the square for that day, being 20 plus whatever number of hours the theatre will operate on January 3. This takes less than one second of the projectionist's time every day of the year.

Say that on March 20, at which time the calendar reads 850 hours, an exciting lamp is removed from service. The theatre serial number written on it with India Ink is checked back against the loose-leaf page for exciting lamps in the Supply Record Form. This form shows the lamp was installed February 18th. Now the calendar shows 630 hours for February 18. Therefore this lamp was in service 850 minus 630, or 220 hours.

But this was an exciting lamp, used on one projector only. If it is the custom in that theatre to turn out one lamp while the opposite projector is running 220 must be cut in half. The lamp was used only 110 hours, and perhaps a claim should be filed against the manufacturer.

This method does not take into account those periods of preparation for changeover when both exciting lamps are lit (on some systems), and it has other small inaccuracies. But as compared with the rough guess of the projectionist, which is the only information available today in most theatres, it provides a very highly accurate check of useful life.

COST PER HOUR

This column provides the real indication of which manufacturer's wares are truly the cheapest to use. The figures set down under "Cost of Item" are divided by the figures set down under "Hours Used," and the result is the "Cost per Hour."

DOUBLE USE

Sometimes a part is removed from use temporarily, and kept in stock to be installed again later on. When this is done at all often suitable provision must be made for it in this form, if the statistics furnished are to be accurate. It is not a common practice, but those theatres that make much use of it should leave an extra line between one item and the next. Separate entries should be made for each use of the item, except in the "Cost per Hour" column, which gives the total result for the full life of the part in question.

AVERAGE HOURS LIFE

This figure is obtained by adding all the items on the page, and by adding up the "Hours Used" column. Divide the hours used by the total number of items to obtain the average life. This information is useful in dealing with manufacturers and their salesmen, and proper representations based on the information it contains may result in a better product or a lower charge.

AVERAGE COST PER HOUR

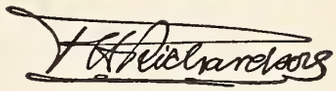
This figure is obtained by adding the "Cost per Hour" column and dividing it by the number of items. Products and prices of different suppliers must be judged in the light this information provides. No other decision is either definite or fair.

SUMMARY

The "Reason for Removal" column is summarized in this space. The importance of this information is described above. An accurate statistical summary of it enables the theatre to secure the most advantageous form of manufacturer's guarantee, as well as giving the manufacturer information that will permit better service.

PERMANENT RECORD

The binder containing these forms will normally be found in the projection room, available to the projectionist whenever supplies are received or parts changed. It can readily be sent to the manager's office to serve in conversation with salesmen, or in making out orders for supplies. When any page is filled up it may be filed.



One of these pages contains the complete record of any item of supply (except carbons) for many months at least, and in the case of a large number of items, for years. Where records over a longer period of time are desired a blank page of the same form may be used. The averages of several pages may be written in the spaces marked "Average Hours Life" and "Average Cost per Hour," with a notation in the blank body of the form that this information covers so many pages of record reaching from this to this date. The summarized "Reasons for Removal" may be treated in the same way.

Sometimes supplies are obtained under a blanket contract that provides for all replacements necessary at a fixed covering charge per week, month or year. Sometimes supplies are bought piecemeal. The record form here shown makes it possible, if each method is used for a set period of time, to determine quite accurately which of the two is the more advantageous to a theatre that is in a position to use either.

FILM DAMAGE CAUSES: SOME FACTS AND FIGURES

AMAZING FACTS very often are right in front of our eyes, but we know nothing about them until we get dallying with figures. Years ago when I was an inspector for the Nicholas Powers Company, I lived 8 miles from the factory. One morning on the way down town it occured to me that I was subwaying 16 miles, 6 days a week, or 6 times 16 equals 96 miles per week. Well, I'll be ——! Let's see: 96 times 52 equals 4,992 miles I was riding in a subway each year, just while going to and from work! To San Francisco and two-thirds of the way back in a subway every year, paying, incidentally, $31.20 for the ride. Gosh!

Recently in a conversation I got started off on another interesting string of figures. Assuming the average number of hours of operation to be 52 per theatre per week, and the average working time of each projector to be half of that, or 26 hours, and knowing film is now run at the rate of 90 feet per minute, or 90 times 60 equals 5,400 feet of film per hour, we find that an average of 5,400 times 26, or 140,000 feet of film, passes through each projector each week, or approximately 7 million feet per year, which means handling 7,000 one-thousand foot reels per year. Didn't think you were threading in and rewinding about 14,000 reels of film in your two projectors a year, did you?

And now let us get down to some even more interesting figures: If we assume that the average print gets 40 bookings, or 200 runs, it means that each projector will retire 7,000 divided by 200, or 35 prints per year, and if we put the value at $20 per print, the value of the prints so retired by each working projector would be 35 times $20, or $700. In other words, so far as the above figures may be accepted as correct, each projector, take 'em as they come, will, as its average, retire 35 prints, or $700 worth of film, each year.

Now there can be no manner of doubt that with projectors kept in first-class condition and adjustment, and with rewinder and other recognized abuses eliminated, films may be projected at least these 200 times and still be in excellent condition. This is not true of them now. It is not wear but abusive treatment that damages film. Granted there is a certain amount of normal wear, still it is too slight to be appreciable within, say, at the very least, 500 projections, if avoidable abuses be eliminated.

And what are the avoidable abuses? Well, insofar as concerns those which lower the useful life of film, they may be roughly divided into five classes, as follows:

First: Those inflicted by reason of carelessness in shipping, due to (a) overloading of reels, and (b) carelessness in packing.

Second: Abuses perpetrated at the rewinder, chiefly by high-speed rewinding with rewinder units out of line with each other, plus crooked reels.

Third: Worn projector parts, particularly as pertains to sprockets, especially the intermittent sprocket.

Fourth: Projector parts not kept in proper adjustment, especially as concerns gate and takeup tension and sprocket idlers.

Fifth: Failure of the projectionist to keep the film track through the projector clean insofar as has to do with emulsion deposits, or a laboratory treatment of the film that removes the causes of such deposits.

Considering these various items in their order, shipping damage is nearly wholly avoidable. It is due entirely to causes already named. If a reel be overloaded it may be reasonably presumed—is, in fact, almost a certainty—that damage will occur only to the footage involved in the overload. This footage will almost certainly loosen up and may, due to rough handling in transit, which there is no possible way of stopping, cause the film bands to come off and the film uncoil around the other reels, in which condition it certainly is susceptible to, and will probably receive, damage. When such damage occurs, the exchange manager has no legitimate right to offer objections except to the studio cutting and editing department for overloading the reel.

Shipping damages also occur by reason of the reels or their containers not being packed into the case solidly. There must be no chance for movement at all, since movement of the film or reel containers in the shipping case adds greatly to the possibility of the film itself becoming jarred loose and moving around, at least in its first footage, in the container; also, if the end does jar loose, the whole film roll may, and very likely will, loosen up, and the sliding of film layers upon each other will produce minute scratches, which, while small, will add materially to the rapidity with which the film will accumulate visible dirt and thereby lose its satisfactory screening condition. Moreover, if the roll becomes very loose in shipment, it is not at all unlikely that upon receipt of it the projectionist will "pull down" to tighten the roll, and we all know what that does to film in the way of scratch marks.

As to abuses perpetrated in the process of rewinding, I have set them forth so often that here they will be only briefly mentioned. First, using rewinder units out of line with each other we should all know that, especially at high rewinding speed, the film will be raised up on one side by impact with the reel edges, very often sufficiently to cause or permit the reel edge to scrape the sound track, whereupon, forever after that rewinding will be in evidence to audiences in the form of sound noise. Rewinding with too little tail reel tension results in a loose roll, which the average projectionist will "pull down," inflicting scratches a-plenty in the process.

Fast rewinding is a projectional crime. It is utterly without legitimate reason or excuse. Six minutes to the 1,000 feet should be the limit of rewinding speed permitted. Any projectionist caught with his rewinder units out of line should be reprimanded sharply for a first offense and penalized for a second.

The third item is worn projector parts, which is certainly utterly without excuse. It is amazing how many theatre managers either permit the use of worn projector parts (in this case mostly sprockets), or compel their use by refusing to provide new ones until long after those in use have passed their limit of real usefulness. This is especially injurious to film where the gate or take-up tension is excessive, which is true in amazing numbers of cases.

The fourth item is one that does a huge percentage of film damage. The intermittent sprocket must pull the film down across the aperture intermittently 24 times a second. Meaning that the film is standing dead still 24 times a second. One-fourth of this one twenty-fourth of a second the film moves one frame, or three-quarters of an inch, and then stands still the other three-quarters of a second. From a dead stop the film is put into motion at a speed rate of 4 times 90, or 360 feet per minute, and does this against the breaking pressure of the tension shoes. It requires no large mental ability to understand that amount of added strain upon the film and intermittent sprocket teeth imposed, under such a condition by each bit of unnecessary pressure exerted by the tension shoes. Yet how many projectionists make any intelligent test of the breaking power of their projector tension shoes? Common sense tells us that unnecessary tension not only adds huge strain (huge when the delicate texture of the sprocket hole edges are considered) to the edges of the sprocket holes and to the intermittent sprocket teeth. This strain is evidenced by the rapidity with which the very finest steel sprocket tooth is worn away. The injury to film is progressively bad as intermittent sprocket teeth become worn. Excessive takeup tension is very bad, especially if the holdback sprocket teeth be much worn. Too great a tension in the upper magazine will also cause the upper sprocket teeth to tear the sprocket holes and will split the sides of the film in its latter footage, especially where a reel with a 2-inch hub is used.

In addition to all this unnecessary damage caused by lack of proper adjustment of projector parts, there is the failure to keep the sprocket idlers in proper adjustment, which causes film to climb the sprocket, with resultant tooth indentations in the film, and perhaps a bad tear besides.

Damage in the form of scratch marks, caused by item No. 5, is not always avoidable when running green prints upon which the emulsion has not yet had time to dry thoroughly. There are proven laboratory treatments of new film, used by some of the producers, that prevents this damage. Where film has not been so treated by the laboratory, care in the matter of frequent inspection of the film track will prevent many long scratches in the film.

From this we see that by no manner of means all film damage has its seat in worn projector parts, but nevertheless worn projector parts unquestionably are responsible for much of it. Also, the estimate of $700 of film retirement per year can be allocated to each projector in use seems well within the facts, and most surely this film would be in much better condition were the projectors kept in good repair and in proper adjustment, and the rewinding evil eliminated, which is all very easy of accomplishment.

Film damage inflicted in shipment, which occurs mostly only to the first part of the reel, would be lowered by fully 90%, with proper reels, shipping cases and care, and films would run almost indefinitely with satisfactory screen results to audiences. This is far from the present conditions in the average subsequent-run theatre that uses film from 90 days after release to the end of the booking life of a subject.

NEW MODEL PROJECTOR

DATA HAS JUST been forwarded to me by The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company of Chicago, covering their latest development, to be known as the "Model H-U Motiograph DeLuxe Mechanism." While it is true I have not as yet been able to examine the actual development personally, I believe it quite safe to say it will, without doubt, be well up to the high mark that company has set and maintained in the past.

From the data supplied I gather that the mechanism of the new model is essentially the same as that of the Model H mechanism which has been in successful use ever since 1928. The principal feature of the new model is the fact that it is adaptable to all modern types of soundheads in that it may be installed with all of them without either any alteration of the soundhead itself, or any alteration in the method of driving the mechanism from the soundhead.

All this, the data submitted explains, is accomplished by providing a new type of mechanism base casting which same provides means by which the projector mechanism may be mounted with the different soundheads through the same mounting holes and using the same mounting screws as used for other types of mechanisms. Naturally enough, since the mechanism may be mounted with any soundhead, it will be adaptable to all types of projector stands to which the soundheads are themselves adaptable.

The method of driving the mechanism and taking care of proper gear ratio between soundhead and mechanism is handled in a rather unique manner by employing the same type of gear unit supplied by the soundhead manufacturer, and conveying the driving power from this gear unit to the mechanism through a form of silent chain which the manufacturer tells me is a new development especially designed for application to the work in hand. The manufacturer claims that the chain has a fully equal, if not indeed a longer life, than gears would have, with the added advantage of tending to absorb gear and mechanism vibrations, thus preventing them from being transmitted to the soundhead. The new model is equipped with all proper fittings and guards, so that a neat and perfect installation can be made.

In addition to thus making Motiograph available for use with all the many and various types of sound equipment, need for which I stressed in an article awhile back, I am told that several improvements have been made in the projector mechanism itself that are of particular interest to projectionists. The film gate has been equipped with a new friction device which holds the gate in open position while threading the mechanism. It consists of a slide link and tension device, so designed that while the gate is held open, it may be pulled shut when threading is finished without the slightest inconvenience. A feature of this improvement that will be appreciated by projectionists is that the tension of friction may be increased for a heavy projection angle, which of course means a heavy tilt

CORRECTION

In presenting the very helpful suggestions contributed by Richard L. Moss, under the title, "How I've Cut My Light Bills," in the June 2d issue of BETTER THEATRES *we were guilty of a typographical error which made Mr. Moss's name read Ross. to the door, with consequent increased tendency to close.

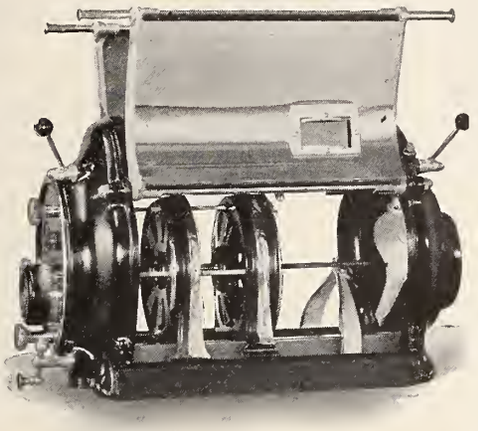
Aside from this, the improvements include extra-length replaceable shaft bearing bushings, which of course means increased length of life for both of them and the shaft; also, extra strengthening links for the toggle gear casting.

I am advised that all the basic features of the Model H mechanism have been retained. These, as you may remember, include the double-bearing intermittent movement with ball bearing end thrust, hardened and ground star and cam, and hardened intermittent sprocket; also, the micrometer lens focusing device and the improved lens holder, horizontal-cylindrical shutter, etc.

Judging from the data submitted, plus my knowledge of past performances of The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, it seems that the new model is a well designed, well constructed job, cleverly worked out to give the Motiograph mechanism the ability to hook up with all the various soundheads now on the market.

DEMANDS CHANGE IN REEL LENGTH

DANIEL S. MARKOWITZ of the Western Amusement Company of San Francisco, writes, "Your article in BETTER THEATRES, June 30 issue, prompts me to write. I have been in the theatre end of things as manager, owner and as projectionist and have through three years past tried to bring to the attention of producers the folly of retaining the old 10-inch reels, directing attention to the expense incurred in so doing. I am well pleased that at last someone else is rooting for the 2,000-foot reel, which all modern projector magazines will accommodate.



"The saving in film alone should amount to a very respectable amount per year. Then, too, there would be a very considerable saving in labor. For one thing, each exchange inspector must now handle from six to ten reels per production, whereas with the 2,000-footers, from three to five would be the limit. This saving in inconvenience and labor would be felt all the way through.

"I fully realize the cost of making the change in film vaults, shipping cases, etc., but am able to cypher out the fact that in the end the saving in labor, raw stock and time would more than offset the initial cost incident to making the change.

"I most sincerely trust that projectionists will hammer away through your department in BETTER THEATRES and in MOTION PICTURE HERALD until the change is brought about. I also hope the powers-that-be will see the light at the earliest possible moment."

Your watch, if you are like most men, has run true twenty-four hours a day for fifteen years. In that time it has been cleaned and adjusted four or five times. It probably has cost you $2.00 a year, service included.

That's the kind of service you get from Syncrofilm Sound Equipment—because it is built like a watch.

The same fine steel, bronze and brass that go into a watch go into Syncrofilm Equipment. The workmanship is equally fine. Mating parts are held to dimensions within a half-thousandth in most places; to one or two ten-thousandths where they are important.

Instead of jewels we use chrome-plated bearings, but the effect is the same; they practically never wear out and they retain their trueness all their life.

All this means freedom from trouble· the show goes on with the minimum of expense. Add that Syncrofilm Equipment is guaranteed to satisfy you, or you get your money back. Send for an illustrated bulletin.

that it is not in my place to install an intermittent sprocket. He says it is. Will you tell us?"

I hold it to be the duty of projectionists to make such repairs as they may reasonably be expected to make in the best way, though if such work must be done after regular projection hours they certainly are justly entitled to overtime for it at some reasonable rate.

Installing an intermittent sprocket, however, is a task requiring very careful and highly skillful work. It is not a job the average projectionist may reasonably be expected to accomplish in the best manner. It is a job he should not, in my opinion, undertake unless circumstances compel him to.

An intermittent sprocket is a thing that must function within at least 1/10,000 of an inch of absolutely true. If it does not, there will inevitably be movement of the picture on the screen. If it be a bit too tight and is forced on the shaft, the sprocket may and probably will be forced out of true. If it be too loose the result certainly will not be good, and it can hardly be expected that a shaft and hole made by different machines at different times and perhaps in different places will always fit to as minute a measurement as from 1/10,000 to 1/20,000 of an inch.

As a matter of fact, the fitting must usually be done by a very careful process of grinding. It therefore is my advice that each theatre carry in stock a spare intermittent movement, so that when a new sprocket is required, the spare may be installed and the one to be repaired mailed parcel post to the factory, where the job can be done right. In the end this sort of procedure will entail no very heavy expense, and too much depends upon an absolutely right intermittent for the manager to take chances.

A BAD CASE OF DISTORTION

RECENTLY during a short, very pleasant vacation in Maine, friend daughter stopped in Lewiston long enough to chat with Clarence A. Foley, projectionist at the Empire theatre of that city. Manager C. Kenneth was away that day, therefore she was unable to meet him.

The Empire is one of a chain of theatres operated by the Maine-New Hampshire Theatre Corporation. It is using two De-Forest sound equipments, 2,000 series, and two Simplex projectors equipped with Peerless light sources taking current from two rotary converters.

The projection room is of good proportions and seems well kept. The projection angle, however, is very bad. Friend daughter says she understands the projection room was on the lower balcony, but later was removed to as near Heaven as possible in order to utilize the space it had occupied for seats. It is strange that theatre managements so often do not realize the obvious fact that it is very possible by such procedure to secure a few more seats that may be filled at times, or even all the time, but also setting up a condition that keeps many other seats empty which would be filled were the screen results not so terribly distorted. Friend daughter tells me the projectors almost "stand on their noses," which of course does great damage to the beauty of the screen image, making everything not only tall in proportion to its width, but all vertical objects fantastically wide at the base. It is strange that so many managements cannot seem to realize what a grave error this is from the box office viewpoint.

It arises presumably from the fact that the income from those few seats is actually visible. It is a tangible thing that can be reckoned, whereas the loss to the box office due to damage to the picture cannot be thus actually seen. It is a matter for the application of common sense and reasoning.

PROJECTION SUGGESTIONS

GEORGE A. DELIS, managing director of the Palace theatre in Lockport, N. Y., makes the following suggestions. Some of them are not new, but at least here is a managing director who evidently realizes the value of projection and the fact that it is justly entitled to the attention of managers, and to some study as well. Mr. Delis says:

"In the matter of sound, projectionists should watch different sequences in features, short subjects and newsreels and pay close attention to places where a boost or reduction in volume might serve to improve the effect. This often occurs, as for example, where there are trains, airplanes, etc.

"The real projectionist—the man worth having on the job—will inspect all tubes and clean all lenses or reflectors daily. He will also pay very close attention to the light source, keep his batteries charged up, and in general be on the job, instead of trying to draw pay for loafing.

"The projectionist having brains and ability to use them can often add to the show by improvising effects for titles, etc. Often the effect of a fire scene may be enhanced by using red gelatine. For an air picture it is possible to work out a nice effect, provided there is an effect projector available, by cutting out a cardboard of the same diameter as the color wheel, then on its surface, tracing the outline of a tiny plane in three or four places near its outer diameter. Cut them out. In another piece of cardboard as square as the diameter of the other, cut a piece out at the top and so place it that the planes will only show at the top of the screen. Place about fifteen feet of opaque film ahead of the main title. Start projector and bring fader up to produce sound of plane while effect projector is in action. Cut the effect as the main title comes on."

ON THE A.C. EXCITER LAMP

THE FOLLOWING communication is published without comment, and I request that projectionists who have used a. c. at the exciter lamp make report as to their experience. After all, it is you men who use the lamps. If you say they give good results—results essentially equal to that of the d. c. lamps—that settles it. So come across with your verdict, please. The letter is from the S. O. S. Corporation of New York City. It reads:

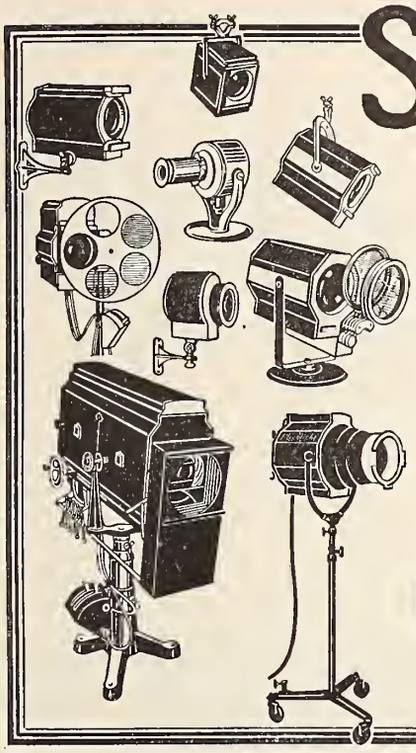
"Dear Mr. Richardson: Regarding your answer to Mr. R. J. Castelli's letter May 5 issue of BETTER THEATRES, I felt that it was about time various trade authorities like yourselves should recognize that a. c. exciter lamps have been in general use for the past three or four years with great success. As a matter of fact, every sound equipment manufacturer, except Western Electric (who have now swung to rectified d.c.), have now several or all their models arranged for a. c. exciter lamp supply. S. O. S. equipment is so designed that either one, or both, are optional. In the case of the combination a.c.-d.c., a change-over switch is so arranged that the projectionist may use either, giving him an emergency system. The following comments on your letter to Mr. Castelli from our engineering department may be of interest to your readers:

"Whether a battery charger can be made to serve for exciter supply depends largely upon the design of the charger, since most chargers are made to deliver a 'tapering charge,' which means that the output is not constant. The more nearly a given battery charger comes to approximately the design of a good full-wave Tungar type rectifier with a constant output, the better will be the results obtained.



"Your more general objection to the use of any battery substitute for exciter lamp supply is answered by the argument that the new exciter lamps are designed with such thermal lag as to allow satisfactory a. c. operation, and therefore d. c. operation (with rectified d. c.), even with some a. c. ripple present, should give even better results.

"It is true that using an a. c.-operated exciter lamp with no film in the projector will cause a 120-cycle hum in the sound system. However, during silent or low-volume portions of the sound track the film is opaque and does not pass the exciter lamp beam. Conversely, most light passes through the film at the very loudest portions of the sound track recording. Therefore, the 120-cycle note is always in such low ratio to the sound output as to be practically inaudible. A more obvious slant on this subject is that practically no new installations require battery operation of the exciter lamps."

FIGURING PROJECTION LIGHT REQUIREMENTS

FROM THE Frankel Enterprises of Cincinnati, Ohio, comes an inquiry which I believe should be answered publicly, as there seems to still be considerable lack of understanding on the points involved. Here is the matter as set before me:

projection equipment. The auditorium is 50 feet wide at the rear for a distance of 65 feet. It then broadens to 100 feet and continues 65 feet to the stage. We propose placing the screen 15 feet back from the proscenium opening, which would give a 145-foot projection distance.

"It has been recommended that we use a new style a. c. light source and a screen measuring 17x23 feet. However, some have discouraged the use of the new a. c. arc in a house this size, and advise us to install a new type d. c. lamp.

"We would appreciate your opinion as to the type of light source best fitted to our needs; also, as to the size of picture and any other helpful information you may see fit to supply."

In selecting a light source it is first necessary to fix upon the picture dimension requirements and the type of screen the conditions call for; namely, specular, semi-diffuse, or broadly diffusing, which latter has to do with shape of seating space.

Your theatre is wide at its front—much wider than can be used for seating space. A broadly diffusing screen is therefore essential to good results from the front side seats. (For detailed explanation see page 222 to 225 of the Bluebook of Projection, if you have one. It would require too much space to set it all forth here.)

As to picture size, it depends upon brilliancy of illumination and maximum viewing distance—distance from screen to rear rows of seats. Broadly, I would say that a well illuminated 18-foot picture is ample in size in any theatre having a maximum viewing distance of not more than 125 feet. If the viewing distance extends to 150 feet, then perhaps a 20-foot picture would be more desirable. Under your conditions I would not consider a 23-foot-wide picture. Even were it possibly just a little more pleasing (a matter of doubt) for those in the rear seats, it would be much less pleasing to those in the front of the house. Whoever has advised the 23-foot picture seemingly lacks competent understanding of the problems involved.

And now as to the light source: An attempt to illuminate a 23-foot picture adequately for a 100 to 125-foot viewing distance with a new type a. c. arc is absurd, as also is even the suggestion that a new type d. c. arc be installed. These light sources are both excellent in their respective fields, but not under the conditions you describe, though with picture size reduced to 18 feet the new type d. c. might be entirely successful for you. However, the advocates of the light source in question should be willing to guarantee a reading of not less than twelve foot-candles at the center of the screen. That would be none too much when we consider that screen and everything would then be new and at maximum power. Twelve foot-candles at installation would probably mean 10 or less in two months, and the reading should be made by photometer in the hands of a competent man of your own selection.

And now, going back a little, let us consider that with a light source of given power you will have a certain fixed amount of light available which light must be distributed over a certain number of square feet of screen surface. If you use a standard projector aperture and have an 18-foot wide picture, the surface to be illuminated will be 234 square feet, whereas with a picture 23 feet wide the area would be 299 square feet. It will therefore be seen that to illuminate the 23-footer equally as the 18-foot one, the light must of necessity be increased in a ratio as 234 is to 299.

In a theatre such as the one in question I personally would favor the projection of a picture certainly not to exceed 20 feet wide, and believe one 18 feet wide would really be better. Remember, visibility, within reasonable limits, is the product of size and power of illumination. A small, brilliantly illuminated picture may be much more visible as to details, and much more beautiful than a dim larger one.

I would favor the trial of one of the new type d. c. lamps with an 18-foot picture, with certain guarantees as to illumination as before suggested. If the 20-footer is preferred, then I would advocate the use of a high-power low-intensity lamp, or if brilliant illumination is demanded, perhaps a high-intensity reflector type lamp. True, such light sources are more expensive, both in first cost and cost of operation, but after all it is results that are of prime importance to the box office cash drawer, and a well illuminated screen is essential to good results, though do not indulge in over illumination. Fourteen foot-candles at screen center with new equipment and screen should result in from 10 to 12 a little later on, and that is very satisfactory.

I would appreciate comments on what has been said by both practical projectionists and lamp manufacturers. In what has been said I have "ground no man's axe," but set matters forth as I see them.

CLOSING LENS PORTS

FROM J. L. HOSKINS of St. Louis, Mo., comes this letter:

"I have four theatres in outlying small towns. Would appreciate an answer to this question: I have had a go-around with two sound engineers and want to know what is correct. I therefore apply to BETTER THEATRES, through you, for in all the years I have seldom found you to be far wrong on any point.

"The question is: Should the wall openings through which the picture is projected be covered with glass? Please supply full information, as I hope to be able to tell one of these engineer chaps where he gets off at, because he impresses me as entirely too cock-sure there is nothing he does not know."

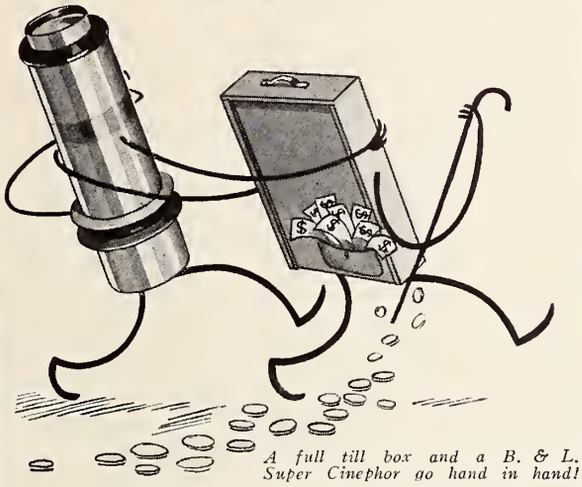
Well, Friend Hoskins, I don't know what the sound engineer has told you, but evidently whatever it is he has not done so diplomatically. In other words, his words and manner have "riled" you, just as a few of those gentlemen have ruffled my own temper occasionally. Here is the low-down as I see it:

Observation ports, being necessarily of generous dimensions, they should for best effect be completely covered with optical glass and set at a vertical angle sufficient to prevent the projectionists' view from being obstructed by reflections from the surfaces of the glass.

Lens ports, however, are different. Proper procedure involves more than one thing. In many cases the matter is treated unintelligently. First of all, in constructing a projection room the lens port wall openings should be of generous dimensions —say, 12 to 14 inches square. The projectors (motion picture or stereo) should be set as close to the wall as may be, so that the light beam will have minimum dimensions at the wall.

When the projectors have been located and permanently anchored in place, a sheet of substantial thickness of fireproof, sound-absorbing material should be set into a suitable inset prepared in the opening at the outer edge of the wall, its outer surface flush with the wall surface. Set this temporarily in place, project the light beam on it, and with a pencil trace its outline thereon. Remove the sheet and cut the opening just a trifle larger than the beam outline, and anchor the sheet permanently in place. Next, repeat the operation at the inner edge of the wall, being careful, however, in case of a stereo, to use a slide with a full-sized mat for outlining the beam.

You thus have two sheets of sound-absorbing material, with an air space between which is the proper method of stopping down a lens port. The outer sheet will act as a baffle to sound. The opening will, if the lens be fairly close to the wall, be small. Under such an arrangement, unless there be seats quite close to the opening, it is extremely doubtful that enough sound will get through into the auditorium to cause appreciable annoyance, if any at all. In any event that point will be easily determined, and the fault remedied if found necessary after careful test, by installing a sheet of optical glass over the inner openings.



There, Mr. Exhibitor, that is the low-down on the whole subject. In my opinion a very large percentage of our theatres would have no real need (whatever need imagination and sound men might invent) for glass-covered lens ports were the procedure above set forth followed.

It is true, probably, that under some circumstances lens ports should be glass-covered, but don't accept that as a foregone conclusion for all theatres merely because some bell-wether has set up the fashion. I would be very willingly to wager a substantial sum that in a very large majority of theatres glass would be totally unnecessary were lens ports properly stopped down. However, don't overlook the "properly." It is highly important.

want your opinion. The question is: I long since concluded that the placing of a metal fuse up near the ceiling upon which the automatic closing of port shutters must depend for closing is a rather idiotic procedure. Will you discuss this matter in your Comments, which are almost without exception helpful, not only to projectionists but also to exhibitors and managers. May I also ask you what, in your opinion, is the best sound equipment on the market today?"

Yes, friend, you may ask that last question, but if I answered it by naming any particular equipment, I not only might be in error, but certainly would have to face a shower of verbal cobblestones. It is not the office of my department to give such advice. It would not be fair to do it, if for no other reason than that no man on earth could be quite certain which, everything considered, is the best equipment. Moreover, what might be best for one might not be best for another. And anyhow, we have today a very fair assortment of really excellent sound equipment.

As to the metallic fuse, you are perfectly right. The metallic fuse as applied to port fire shutter suspension in many places is just plain idiotic. No more mild term would fit. In many localities the authorities specify the use of a metallic fuse for shutter release, stipulating that it shall be placed as close to the ceiling as possible, on the theory that since hot air rises, it will be most effective at that point.

Let us examine into this piece of official "reasoning."

Were an open fire the thing under consideration they would probably be correct. However, where does a film fire usually occur? At the aperture of the projector, of course. Where does it go from there? To the upper magazine, provided it is not extinguished before it gets there. Is the upper magazine open? No, and it remains closed until the fire burns out, unless the projectionist has far less sense than we give him credit for. Is there any blaze or very much heat under such a condition? No! There is very little blaze and not very much heat, but there are oodles and gobs of smoke!

What, then, is the danger to audiences, and how is the ceiling fuse going to be affected? There is no fire danger to the audience, but there is a very great peril nevertheless, since if the fire shutters do not drop quickly, some excitable squarehead in the audience is likely to get a glimpse of the great billows of smoke, yelp "Fire!" and scare a lot of other people.

Either a port shutter fuse must act immediately a fire starts, or it has to all intents and purposes no value whatever. The port shutters should all drop within one second of the start of a blaze. With a film smoldering (billowing forth oceans of smoke, meanwhile) in a closed upper magazine, the ceiling metal fuse is not worth Adam, and I don't mean perhaps maybe, either!

The film fuse (see Bluebook or Pennsylvania State law) is the only really effective fuse. Rightly installed, such a fuse will many times drop the port shutters before the projectionist even is aware a fire has occurred—before the fire has got away from the aperture at all.

ALL HONOR TO McGUIRE

SOME OF US not infrequently try to get a rise out of our good friend P. A. McGuire, general manager of the advertising department of the International Projector Corporation, because of his enthusiasm, and the fact that once launched on his favorite hobby, projection, he may confidently be expected to exude quite some few words before he has finished and done. For like myself, when Mac gets well started on the subject of projection he is unable to find any periods, hence is unable to stop.

However, make you no mistake: We all like and respect McGuire. Also, we all wish there were more like him, for he is honest and sincere. Every once in a while Mac pulls a dad-binged good one, as for example the following:

"Motion picture entertainment is not a product manufactured by any one individual or organization. The materials all pass through many hands. Any defect in either equipment manufacture, production, distribution or exhibition must inevitably show up with presentation upon the screen, which is the final delivery of the finished product of the industry to its buyer, the public."

Upon another occasion Friend McGuire delivered himself of the following:

"All the various departments of the motion picture industry are dependent upon each other. The conscientious cinematographer cannot afford to be indifferent to projection, since screen presentation constitutes the final delivery of his work to the public. To be regarded as good work requires that it have public approval, and certainly if projection be imperfect, then the work of the cinematographer must suffer.

"Any defect either in production or distribution inevitably becomes visible to the public in the process of projection, hence to some extent at least detracts from the excellence of all the work of other departments. Naturally anything that can be done to prevent defects of any sort from reaching the theatre screen will inevitably operate to raise the entertainment value of motion pictures, and thus increase box office receipts."

Every word of which is gospel truth!

In P. A. McGuire the International Projector Corporation has an executive of rare ability. He is a man with deep understanding of the best methods of getting results, and has helped his company by not always harping on "Our equipment is best."

Instead of this, he has seen fit to express thoughts of value to the entire industry, and particularly to the branch of it his company serves. In doing this he has helped everyone. He has also helped his own company, because he has impressed upon managers and exhibitors the fact that good results cannot be expected from either poorly designed or too cheaply constructed projection equipment, or from equipment in poor state of repair.

It was Mac who invented the phrase, "Better Projection Pays," the frequent use of which in his advertising certainly was a master stroke in that it automatically created in the minds of the buyers of projection equipment the idea that after all projection excellence makes itself felt at the theatre box office and that therefore it is good business to pay out a few extra dollars wherever necessary to secure maximum excellence in screen results.

McGuire considers it a part of his duty to meet and talk with practical projectionists, a large number of whom he knows personally. This acquaintanceship extends to Canada and over-seas as well as across our own land. He is a member of the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, attending almost every meeting. He is not a projectionist and makes no claim to being a technical man, but he has done much good work in the field of projection.

WHO COINED THE TITLE?

IN A RECENT issue, the American Projection Society Bulletin says, "One of our distinguished members, F. H. Richardson, coined the word projectionist, that has all but displaced the odious and obnoxious term operator."

And what a battle I had in attaining its adoption! Even my boss, then editor of the Moving Picture World, tried to squelch me, asking pointedly just who I thought I was, trying to tell men what to call themselves?—reminding me that the organization itself defined them as "moving picture machine operators."

It was at least five or six years after I began the fight for its adoption before anyone would use the term, except when in my presence. Today it is used almost everywhere. It has been adopted in England, New Zealand, Australia and elsewhere. It is incorporated in the newer dictionary, and appears in the SMPE approved nomenclature. It is in fact a fixture, many advanced men regarding it as in the nature of an affront to be termed an operator.

Some day not far distant, I have faith to believe the IATSE and MPMO will outgrow the ridiculously misleading title, "moving picture machine operator," and gratuate into International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Projectionists.

A WOMAN'S ATTITUDE IN MANAGEMENT

FROM A WOMAN theatre manager—Alice T. Waldron—who I believe to be an honor to the tribe of theatre managers, comes a letter containing the following, which may be read, read again and re-read with profit many times by some men who write "theatre manager" after their names. I would surely like to shake hands with this lady. I compliment her most sincerely upon having competent understanding of the basic groundwork of competent theatre managing.

What is that, do you ask? The answer is simple: Study all things that have to do with the theatre, especially those having to do with excellence in entertainment, the comfort of those being entertained and the efficiency with which the work is done. This lady says:

"Some while since you mentioned a list of questions possible for use in ascertaining the competency of projectionists when being examined for license. I would like very much to secure a copy of them, not merely to enable me to 'cram' on those particular questions, but to study the general trend and nature of them.

"The writer is a woman, in charge of a neighborhood theatre. It is a family proposition, out of which every person involved is just about getting a living. Nevertheless we live more closely with the theatre and probably study it more intensely than do many people with larger theatres. I personally love the business. I believe all the others feel the same.

"I have found, through experience of the past, that the manager has to know as much, or almost as much, about each particular department of the work as does the person actually doing it. Perhaps, though, that is not wholly the reason why I try to learn. I just like to know everything possible about my work or business. At any rate the projectionist and I have studied your pages in the HERALD and BETTER THEATRES and are so impressed that now we want the books."

Madam, across two thousand miles, I greet you! You are the kind this business needs. You are the kind the lack of which has put many a really good theatre "in the red." In fact, you really should be understudy to the manager of some large theatre, though it is not at all impossible that you would be less happy in such a position by reason of the added strain. But real men and women don't count that as important. They want to go ahead and up.

The books have been sent, but sending out the questions and answers was found to be too expensive. I have been punished for mentioning the matter in print by having to answer, the Creator knows how many, letters asking for them.

It is astounding how many theatre managers there are who have failed utterly and completely to grasp the idea this lady expresses so well. I have often wondered how in Heaven's name some of them managed to land in a manager's job. Apparently they study just exactly nothing at all except the possibility of getting something a bit cheaper, too often regardless of quality.

CARELESSLY WORDED EXAMINATION QUESTIONS

RECENTLY AN apprentice who had taken examination for a license and failed, sent me a list of the questions asked him, with request for opinion on them. He did not, either directly or by inference, ask for answers. I told him, after examining the questions, that most of them were very simple; that he, like many others, had only started to really study after he had failed, whereas the time for study was before making an attempt to take the examination.

However, some of the questions—only a few of them, be it noted—were really rather meaningless because of careless wording. For example:

"When compensarc or transformer is used and poor light results, how may same be increased."

In the first place, an economizer is a transformer, hence why the or, which might be fairly construed as deliberately misleading. That, however, is not serious. The real carelessness is in the "and poor light results, how would same be increased?" It would surely require the wisdom of a Solomon to answer that question correctly without much more information. If the "poor light" was the result of too little current, then, provided the economizer-transformer be not already working to its capacity, results might be improved by readjusting the economizer to supply more secondary current. But the lack might also be due to (a) wrong distance of arc from mirror or collector lens, (b) too large a spot, (c) projection lens not admitting all the light beam, (d) dirty lens surfaces causing abnormal light loss through reflection, (e) a light "ground" wasting current, (f) wrong adjustment of the carbons, (g) a poor or dirty screen surface, (h) wrong kind of diameter of carbons, plus a few other things, or to a combination of one or more of the various points named. So we see the question, as worded, is confusing.

Upon success or failure in examination a man must often depend for the right to earn a living for himself and perhaps for a family, under which condition it follows that it is very bad indeed to permit anything but plain, fairly worded questions to be asked in examinations. Many a man who knows perfectly well that "economizer" is merely the trade name of a low-voltage transformer, might be puzzled to know whether or not he should state that fact. Examiners are "funny," he reasons. Maybe there is some trap attached to that. Not serious, certainly, but unnecessary and just a bit unfair, or so it seems to me.

My way of wording such a question would be: When a projector light source is supplied current through an economizer (transformer), and the screen illumination is not sufficiently bright, would it be possible to increase the current flow supplied by the economizer? What other various things might tend to produce an insufficiently bright screen illumination?

The question might be added to legitimately by asking: Explain the process by means of which current flow is increased or decreased by moving the adjustment handle, knob or connections of an economizer. What causes the increase or decrease?

If that last be correctly answered, the examiner may conclude that the candidate pretty well understands the whys and wherefores of transformers. It is a pretty

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

NOTE:

IN THIS department Better Theatres will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary consideration involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, 1790 Broadway, New York.

The Question:

OUR THEATRE is located in a building 24 feet, 6 inches wide, 130 feet long and 14 feet high. The floor of the lobby is 14 inches above street level. A slanting floor extends from the middle of the auditorium to the back, a raise of 2 feet, 8 inches, with steps from the lobby to the raised floor. Inclosed pictures will give you some idea as to the looks of the place.

We want to build a new booth 2 feet deeper (8 feet instead of 6 feet) than the present one, and 9 inches higher. We have considered merely enlarging our present booth, or building an entirely new one next to the street, which would mean an entire new front and lobby arrangement. Any suggestions you have to offer will be appreciated.

Our auditorium is coverd with panels of masonite, 4 feet square. This is a dark brown color. We have wanted to brighten it with Moresco, but have been told that it would spoil our sound, so have not touched it. The entire ceiling is covered, and the walls have panels. The wall panels do not match, as one wall has pillars in it while the other is plain. If Moresco will not harm the acoustics, what colors would you suggest be used.—C. E. Z.

The Answer:

LOOKING OVER your sketch of the floor plan and photographs of the interior of your theatre, I am of the opinion that the best method of enlarging the projection room would be to construct an entirely new one. This can be easily supported on steel columns placed along the side walls. Build it over the space now occupied by office and ticket booth. This will give you at least 8 feet depth for the projection room.

According to the photograph you must experience a great deal of interference from daylight with projection on the screen. This may be overcome by building the projection room across the width of the auditorium and by paneling the doors between lobby and auditorium.

I certainly advise you to put in a new front. It will not be so very expensive, as all you need is two sets of doors and a few poster cabinets, and the front will then look like a theatre. This will also improve the lobby, and it is a safe bet that increased business will pay for this remodeling in a very short time, as a nice front always attracts patronage. I believe that you have been misinformed in regard to painting the walls and ceiling, as I do not think that the above named materials have enough sound-absorbing qualities to affect the acoustics of your theatre. There is now on the market a paint with acoustic qualities, but I cannot find any objections for using the paints you mentioned in your inquiry. Since the side walls of the auditorium are not the same in treatment, use a dark tone for the walls and a very light tone for the ceiling.

The Question:

I HAVE been an ardent reader of your articles in the Herald for some time and now find myself in need of some assistance in planning a house.

Would like to learn your suggestions and ideas for an arrangement of a 375-seat theatre. The dimensions of my place when completed will be 24 x 140 feet. What would you suggest for height, lobby, foyer, and dimensions of stage? Also, the size of booth, its arrangement and box office, the elevation from stage back to foyer, and decoration? What would you advise for the ceiling and walls that would be inexpensive, yet decorative and acoustical? Would you consider a center aisle better than two outside aisles?—L. H. L.

The Answer:

I DOUBT that you will be able to accommodate 375 seats in a theatre building of the dimensions stated in your inquiry. Suppose that you plan for a stage 12 feet deep and then figure for the distance between stage apron and first row of seats another 12 feet. You should plan for the width of the foyer at least 6 feet, and the lobby should not be less than 10 feet. The entrance doors should be placed 2 feet 6 inches back from the face of the building, so that they will not project too far in the street when open and if you allow 30 inches for wall thickness, there will only be left enough space for 30 rows of seats with a spacing of 30 inches from back to back.

As I never like to suggest the use of a center aisle, let us figure the use of two wall aisles with a center bank of 10 seats, 19 inches from center to center. According to this the total seating capacity will be 300, which may be increased to 330 by the use of a center aisle, if you prefer that arrangement.

Plan the box office in the form of a ticket booth to be placed between the two entrance doors. This would leave enough space on each side of the lobby to provide for men's and women's toilet rooms. These rooms should open from the foyer. The projection room should be constructed over lobby and foyer and shall be of fireproof construction. Also provide toilet room off the projection room for projectionists. This space will be large enough to provide also a small office and storage room. I suggest for the minimum ceiling height for foyer and lobby 9 feet. For the slope of the auditorium floor, you will find that the following formula will give very satisfactory results.

Divide the floor from stage to foyer wall into 15 foot sections. The first section near stage should be level, the next section should have a 9-inch incline. Increase this to 12 inches in the next section, 15 inches in the next, and so on, adding 3 inches to every previous incline. The stage floor should be from 3 feet, 4 inches to 3 feet, 6 inches above the lower part of the auditorium floor. The auditorium ceiling should be at least 17 feet above the high point of the floor. The least expensive treatment for walls and ceilings which has acoustic as well as decorative qualities, is a composition board. This product does not require decorating as it comes in varied colors. It can be applied on furring strips. Another material for walls is a wood-grained plaster board, which can be applied as described above.

I am glad to learn you have found this department interesting, and I hope advice given others has been helpful to you as well. If any further problems arise, feel free to write me.

Equipment News and Comment

LIGHT BULBS

● A type of electric lighting lamp especcially adapted to theatre use and guaranteed to burn 1,500 hours on an average, has been marketed by the Hanover Company of New York. There are two sizes, 15 and 25 watts.

White enamel or a color is baked into the glass on the inside surface of the lamp, which is of the mushroom type.

AIR CONDITIONING

● Air conditioning equipment developed by the Frigidaire Corporation incorporating mechanical refrigeration, is installed in the small auditorium of the General Motors Building at the Century of Progress in Chicago, dimensions of which are only 40 x 40 feet. For the auditorium, the refrigeration provided is 25 tons, while 7 tons more are used for the foyer. The installation is as follows:

Two 10-horse-power and two 3-horse-power condensing units are provided for the operation of 24 evaporators of a ton capacity each. Along each side of the auditorium are six air inlets, in back of each of which are two evaporators. These openings are about 2 inches from the ceiling and direct the air over the heads of patrons. Exhaust grilles are located in the ceiling and are evenly spaced for a uniform flow of exhaust air. Temperatures are thermostatically controlled.

Location of Frigidaire grilles.

The foyer is conditioned by one 7½-horse-power condensing unit operating four horizontal-type unit air conditioners and two evaporators of a ton capacity each. The horizontal-type conditioners are located on the floor of the foyer, while the two evaporators are located at a duct outlet in the wall near the ceiling.

New type rectifier developed by the Baldor Electric Company of St. Louis. Transformer is of laminated electrical sheet steel, windings of single cotton enamel magnet wire insulated from core and saturated with insulation varnish, case of heavy-gauge sheet steel mounted on short legs, panel of sheet steel. Among controls on panel is a seven-point dial which varies the amperage at arc 15 to 30 amperes.

POSTER EASELS

● A line of poster easels made from a material called Textolite has been marketed by the General Electric Company. The base is weighted, and in it is a slot adjustable by means of a concealed spring, allowing for various thicknesses of poster or sign. All models are obtainable in black, walnut and mahogany, in a modernistic design.

The material used, Textolite, is a molded plastic composition said to be unaffected by extreme changes in atmospheric conditions. The easels may be washed with soap and water.

MARKET ACTIVE

Among reports on reseating is one from the Allied Seating Company of New York, which has completed installations in the Liberty, Liberty, N. Y., the Maple, Jeffersonville, N. NEW GENERATOR

● A motor-generator developed specifically for use with the new 50-ampere, 35-volt high-intensity d. c. projection lamps, has been brought out by the Automatic Devices Company of Allentown, Pa., under the trade name of Stabilarc Unitwin.

The unit consists of two 50-ampere, 35-volt d. c. generators and a 5-horse-power a. c. motor. Each generator feeds directly

ELECTRIC SAFES

● Safes equipped with electric protection devices have been developed by the Meilink Steel Safe Company of Toledo, Ohio. Among these models is a remotely controlled cash drawer which is instantly locked when a holdup is threatened and which thereupon cannot be opened until a key, presumably to be located in some distant place, is brought. There is also a safe similarly protected for the keeping of large sums of money until taken to a bank.

SEAT REPLACEMENTS

● Spring-filled cushions like those used in the company's "Stream Ease" chair, have been made available for replacement of veneer and squab type seats by the Eastern Seating Company, New York. The seat replacements are provided with a patented one-piece hinge to make the cushion adjustable to any theatre chair. The usual specifications are required for estimates on coverings.

BY WAY OF NEWS

● The S. O. S. Corporation of New York has removed to larger quarters, having taken over the entire sixth floor at 1600 Broadway. This represents a growth from a two-man organization in 1928 to one of many employes and a number of departments, including jobbing and manufacturing divisions. The new quarters are provided with a small theatre and a recording studio.

openings in the grate bars are generally approximately 50% of the total gross area of the grate bar. Take a rule and measure them. If, for instance, they are ½-inch openings, don't try to burn anything finer than chestnut or range coal. If you do you will waste much of it.

Bituminous and semi-bituminous coals are graded as lump, nut and slack. Lump wont pass through 1¼-inch mesh, but may be as large as a good-size melon. Nut wont pass through ¾-inch mesh, while slack is what remains after the lump and nut have been screened out. Of the bituminous grades, I would recommend the use only of lump for theatre boilers.

COMPOSITION OF COAL

Coal is composed chiefly of carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, sulphur and more or less non-combustible matter; also, coal has varying amounts of moisture in it. Your coal dealer can and will furnish you an analysis of the coal that you are buying. Remember (a) the higher the percentage of fixed carbon, (b) the lower the percentage of volatile matter and ash content (the non-combustible matter), and (c) the greater the B.t.u. (British Thermal Unit) value per pound, the better the coal.

There is no question that with any grade of coal the most important consideration in arriving at the proper fuel consumption and a minimum cost of maintenance, is the method of firing and the interest taken by the manager in the details of operation of the heating plant. Before heating costs can be reduced to a minimum the theatre must be put into condition; all doors must be weatherstripped, and all gravity ventilators, air ducts and other openings effectively closed up so that there is a minimum infiltration of cold air. Leakage of cold air into the theatre causes draughts and uneven temperatures and will cause many complaints from patrons. The leakage around two normal-sized exit doors without weatherstripping equals about a hole 8 inches in diameter and of course aggravates the heating problem.

FUNCTION OF AIR

Coal is only part of the fuel burned in the boiler, air is the rest of the fuel necessary for proper combustion. I guess it's because we don't pay for the air that we give so little consideration to it. It is the carbon in the coal that gives the most heat, and in the process of burning each atom of carbon combines with one or two atoms of oxygen obtained mostly from the air, forming CO or CO_2. CO_2 represents the complete combustion of the carbon, CO the incomplete combustion; hence the measurement of the CO_2 content of the flue gases is to a degree a measure of the results you are getting from the boiler. With the newest types of mechanical stokers the percentage of CO_2 will run as high as 22%. With capable hand-firing, the percentage might range between 12% and 18%. It is a fair guess that in most theatres the CO_2 percentage in flue gases is as low as 5% to 7%, which indicates inefficient operating methods. In some theatres there are CO_2 indicators or recorders installed, but in many instances they are not kept in condition. It will be worth while to recondition the recorder if you have one. If you have not got one it might be well to consider installing one—they are not abnormally expensive.

ECONOMY IN HEATING

IT FOLLOWS from the foregoing that plenty of draught, with proper controls, is really a good fuel economizer. Faulty draught generally results from one of two conditions: First, an insufficient air supply to the boiler room, and second, insufficient height to the stack or chimney. A third cause, but one less frequently met with, is a faulty or leaky breeching, the connection that is located between the boiler and the stack.

FIRING

Another important fuel economizer is a good fireman. Don't be too easily convinced that a couple of dollars saved on the wages of boiler attendants is truly a saving. Incompetent boiler room help costs the motion picture theatres of this country many thousands of dollars every winter. The time to really save fuel is in the spring and early fall, so don't delay too long in getting the right man to attend to the boiler, and don't lay him off too early in the spring.

In every boiler the distance below the fire door and the top of the grate bars has been carefully calculated by the boiler manufacturers. This depth permits a sufficiently deep bed of coals so that the proper quantity of fuel might be burned per square foot of grate area, thereby obtaining the best results from the boiler. If a boiler is fired properly the top surface of the fire will be about level with the lower edge of the fire door, and the coal will be burning over the entire area of the fire box. When fired in this manner, the grates are shaken not only to remove ashes, but also to make room for a new charge of coal. A shallow bed of coals is not economical operation from any point of view. Such a fire burns more coal and requires more frequent attention; more unburned coal goes into the ashpit when the grates are shaken, and it's almost impossible to get a shallow bed of coals to burn uniformly over the entire fire box area.

ASHES

In mild weather let the ashes accumulate on top of the grate bars, and with this layer of ashes topped with a layer of live coals you will obtain economical control. Sometimes the bed of ashes may be 6 or 8 inches deep with possibly 8 or 10 inches of live coals on top. When the boiler must be recharged with coal, shake only sufficient ashes through to the ash pit to make room for the new charge of coal. This procedure will insure the minimum quantity of coal getting through to the ashpit unburned and will permit a far better control of the fire with the least amount of attention to firing. The relation of the thickness of ashes above the grates to the thickness of the bed of live coals above, will vary according to the weather outside. In severe weather you may not want any ashes above the grates.

INTRODUCING COAL

In charging the boiler with fresh coal, shovel it well to the back of the fire box—yes, much above the lower edge of the fire door—then let the charge of new coal taper down toward the front of the fire box. Under no circumstances cover the entire bed of hot coals with new coal. Throw open all the draughts. After about 20 or 25 minutes the new charge of coal will have ignited, much of the volatile gases will have been driven off, and a minimum of smoke will have resulted. Then rake the new charge down toward the front of the fire box and level it over the entire area. Let it burn for another five minutes, and adjust the draughts to carry the desired pressure in the boiler.

This, briefly, is a method of firing which is efficient. It will conserve coal, in the long run it requires a minimum of time, and it obtains maximum results from the boiler.

CAUTIONS

I might caution here that ashes should be removed from the ash pit at least once each day. Also, don't expect to get results from dirty boilers, or boilers with warped, cracked or broken grate bars. Efficient and satisfactory results can only be had if the boiler is in condition and kept in condition. Human beings out of condition can't accomplish their best work, and human beings are equipped with intelligence and will power, so why think, for a moment, that an inanimate assembly of cast-iron, steel plates, bolts and rivets can produce satisfactory results when not kept in proper working order?

It is unfortunate that many managers look upon the boiler room and all that goes with it as just one of the necessary evils of theatre operation. It is definitely part of the manager's job to visit the boiler room every day. There is no easier way, nor a more effective way, of arousing the boiler room attendant to a consciousness of his part and responsibility in the operation of the theatre. A good engineer, fully appreciated and enthused by the manager, will be worth several times his salary to any theatre.

Let's stop leaving undone those things which ought to have been done long ago! Let's learn boiler management and maintenance. There is something you can learn in your boiler room this winter, regardless of whether you are veteran or a recruit in the theatre business. And the new knowledge will prove of real dollar value.

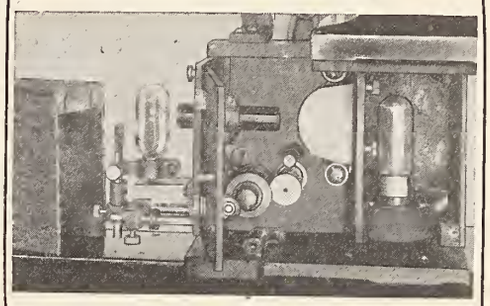
all the books, records, and correspondence showing the union's activities. The petition was signed in the name of the state's attorney by an assistant, and was verified by the latter.

An official of the corporation refused to deliver up the books and records on the contention that the subpoena was not sufficiently specific in naming the exact books which he was required to deliver to the state officials for inspection. It is interesting to observe that the higher court upheld this contention, and said:

DECISION

"Because the subpoena was too broad and sweeping in its terms respecting the union's books and records, the plaintiff (corporation official) was justified in disregarding the controlling demand made upon him . . . . This result does not preclude the initiation of a new inquiry by a subsequent grand jury, in which inquiry, if necessary, a sustainable subpoena may be issued."

The important lesson of this case is that because an improper subpoena was issued, the state's attorney was delayed in receiving and inspecting the corporation's books for a period of almost two years during which time the union was permitted to conduct its business without any control on the part of the state officials, notwithstanding the seriousness of the above mentioned allegations and charges.



DETERMINATION OF DAMAGES

THE PROPER measure of damages for breach of contract by a motion picture actor has given the courts trouble, because of the great uncertainty there is in estimating the damage. Generally speaking, a resonably certain basis must be provided for the court to determine the amount of damages.

CASE

For instance, in the late case of Western Show Company v. Mix (162 Atl. 667, Erie, Pa.), it was shown that suit was brought by the Western Show Company against Tom Mix to recover damages for breach of a contract under which he was to render personal services. The Western Show Company claimed that it and Mix entered into a contract whereby, in consideration of $10,000 a week and certain accommodations which were to be furnished to him, Mix was to appear with The 101 Ranch Real Wild West Show with his horse "Tony" in daily performances during the circus season which it was estimated would last for about twenty weeks. It was admitted that Mix did not so appear, but entered into a contract with another circus, the Sells-Floto Company, in which he exhibited himself and his horse during the time covered by his engagement with Western Show Company.

During the trial the general manager of the Western Show Company, in answer to a question as to the value of Mix's services, answered $25,000 a week. He gave no basis for his estimate, except that he said the seating capacity of the show was "around 9,000." He did not say whether the seating capacity was filled at the performances throughout the season or whether it was not, and, if not, whether in his opinion it would have been so filled if Mix had appeared.

The lower court rendered a verdict in favor of the Western Show Company and against Tom Mix for the amount of $58,000 damages. The counsel for Mix appealed to the higher court on the contention that the above mentioned testimony was not sufficient on which to base actual damages suffered by the Western Show Company. The higher court, therefore, reversed the verdict and granted a new trial stating the following important law:

"He (witness) said that he considered the seating capacity and the earning capacity in the past and the capacity which the circus would have had if the defendant (Mix) had appeared, but failed to state what any of these factors were. . . . He further went on to say that, if the defendant (Mix) had not acted at all, but had sat on a stool in front of the show, his association would have been worth $25,000 a week to it. Sound judgment is somewhat taxed to accept this statement as one of fact. . . . We are unable to find in the testimony of this witness 'a reasonably fair basis' for calculating the plaintiff's loss. . . . Damages are recoverable for losses caused or for profits and other gains prevented by the breach only to the extent that the evidence affords a sufficient basis for estimating their amount in money with reasonable certainty."

WHAT IS PUBLIC NUISANCE?

VARIOUS COURTS have held that a public nuisance exists wherever acts or conditions are subversive of public order, decency, or morals, or constitute an interference of natural rights of the citizens. Such nuisances always arise out of unlawful acts. In other words, common or public nuisances are offenses against the public order or economical regimen of the state, being either the doing of a thing to the annoyance of citizens or the neglecting to do a thing which the common good requires.

The difference between a public nuisance and a private nuisance does not consist in any difference in the nature or character of the thing itself. A public nuisance is a danger to the public, and a private nuisance is a danger or interference likely to affect an individual.

Generally speaking, to constitute a public nuisance, the condition of things must be such as injuriously affects the community at large, and not merely one or even a very few individuals. Whatever tends to endanger life, or generate disease, and affects the health of the community; whatever shocks the public morals and sense of decency; whatever shocks the religious feelings of the community, or tends to its discomfort, is a public nuisance and a crime.

CASE

For example, in the late case of State v. Everhardt (166 S. E. 738, Rowan County, N. C.), it was disclosed that the owner of a public place of amusement conducted it in such a manner that crowds of disorderly persons congregated in the immediate vicinity and performed boisterous acts which were a constant annoyance to neighbors and other citizens who passed by.

Legal proceedings were filed and the lower court held the proprietor guilty and the higher court upheld the verdict, saying:

"A disorderly house is a house kept in such a way as to disturb, annoy, or scandalize the public generally, or the inhabitants of a particular vicinity, or the passers in a particular highway, and is indictable at common law. . . . A nuisance is not a public nuisance though it may injure a great many persons, if the injury is only to the individual property of each. Common nuisances are such inconveniences or troublesome offenses as annoy the whole community in general and not merely some particular person."

Also, it is important to know that the owner of a theatre may file charges against any citizen who conducts himself in such a manner as to be a common nuisance either in front of the theatre building or inside the theatre.

CASE

For illustration, in a leading case, State v. Cainan (94 N. C. 880), a person who was arrested on the charge of disorderly conduct contended that he could not be legally convicted since the warrant failed to include the exact words and conduct on which the warrant for his arrest was based. However, in upholding the conviction of this person, the Court stated the following important law:

DECISION

"If he boisterously cursed and swore, no matter what were the precise words used, he was guilty. The words 'boisterous cursing and swearing,' have such distinctive signification, as necessarily implied a violation of the ordinance, and gave the defendant to understand with sufficient certainty, how he had violated it. The charge was simple and easily understood, without nice precision in making it. The Court could see that an offense was charged, and the defendant had sufficient notice and information to make his defense."

LIABILITY FOR STOLEN CLOTHING

VARIOUS COURTS have held that a theatre owner will not be relieved from responsibility for theft of clothing from a check-room although the words used in a receipt or contract given to a patron states that the theatre owner shall not be responsible for damage or injury to such clothing, if it is shown that the damage was caused by the theatre owner or his employer. This law is based upon the usual liability of a bailee, keeper of goods, toward a bailor or the owner of goods left in the care of the bailee.

CASE

For example, in Central v. Longwell (62 S. W. [2d] 87, El Paso, Tex.), it was shown that the owner of merchandise received a receipt containing a clause that the keeper, or bailee, would not be liable for any loss caused by fire or theft. The merchandise was stolen while in possession of the bailee and the owner filed suit to recover the value of the merchandise. In holding the owner entitled to a recovery, the court said:

DECISION

"A misdelivery of property by any bailee to a person unauthorized by the true owner is of itself a conversion, rendering the bailee liable, without regard to the question of due care or degree of negligence. . . . And a delivery to an unauthorized person is as much a conversion as would be a sale of the property, or an appropriation of it to the bailee's own use. . . . A bailee cannot insert provisions in the receipt which would relieve him from the consequences of his own negligence."

IMPLIED GUARANTEE HELD VALID

THE OUTCOME of a litigation involving an expressed guarantee depends entirely upon the court's interpretation of the original intentions of the parties at the time the contract was completed. On the other hand, a theatre operator generally is successful in a litigation involving an implied guarantee where he introduces convincing testimony to prove that the merchandise or equipment positively failed to give reasonably good service.

As previously stated, the law is well established that a seller impliedly guarantees that the subject of the sale is reasonably worth the amount of the purchase price. Therefore, if a theatre owner proves that talking machine equipment fails to give satisfaction which reasonably would be expected by the average and prudent theatre operator, he is not required to fulfill the obligations of the sale contract.

Another important point of the law is that a seller who leases a talking motion picture machine is not exempt from liability for breach of the implied warranty that the machine is reasonably fit for ordinary uses.

CASE

For illustration, in Talking Pictures Corporation v. Shea (61 S. W. [2d] 430, McGehee, Ark.), it was shown that the manufacturer of a talking motion picture machine instituted a suit against a theatre owner to recover the possession of a talking motion picture machine which the latter had operated in his theatre under a lease contract from the company. The company had leased the machine to the theatre owner for a period of ten years under a license contract. The license fee for the ten years' period was $5,680, payable as follows: $1,250 when the lease was signed; $750 when the machine was ready for shipment; $3,180 in twelve monthly payments of $265 each, beginning April 20, 1929; and $50 on the 1st day of January of each year during the term. The lease contract required the theatre owner, at his own cost and expense, to make changes and alterations in the building and these were made under the supervision of the seller's representative. The theatre owner also testified that the service man or representative furnished by the seller failed to adjust the machine properly with the result that it would not operate efficiently.

The theatre owner contended that since failure of the talking picture machine to operate properly considerably damaged his established theatre business that he was entitled to a judgment for damages. In rendering a verdict in favor of the theatre owner, the court said:

DECISION

"It must be remembered that the contract related to a machine about which Shea (theatre owner) had no knowledge whatever, but for the use of which he was required to pay $2,000 before its installation was commenced, and that he was also required to incur expense preparatory to the installation of the machine, which, if it did not satisfactorily display talking moving pictures, was valueless. . . . We conclude, therefore, that there was an implied warranty of the suitability of the machine for its intended use."

WHEN IMPLIED GUARANTEE IS LOST

VARIOUS COURTS have held that the legal effect of an implied warranty is destroyed by a written or verbal agreement between the theatre owner and seller in which it is clearly understood that the seller does not impliedly guarantee his product.

CASE

For instance, in International Company v. Bean (169 S. W. 549, Kentucky), the contract after distinctly specifying an expressed guarantee stated: "This express warranty excludes all implied warranties."

The court held that this clause relieved the seller from liability on an implied warranty.

However, the mere fact that a contract of sale contains an expressed guarantee does not destroy the implied guarantee, unless it is clearly understood that such is the intentions of the parties.

CASE

For example, in the leading case of Bekkevold v. Potts (216 N. W. 790), a contract of sale contained the following clause: "No warranties have been made by the seller to the buyer unless expressly written hereon at the date of purchase."

DECISION

The contract contained no written guarantee and later, when the purchaser discovered that the merchandise was defective, he sued to recover the purchase price. The court promptly held that the seller impliedly guaranteed his product to be reasonably satisfactory, irrespective of the terms of this written guarantee.

Therefore, it is quite apparent that an expressed guarantee does not invalidate the implied guarantee, unless the parties clearly intend to exclude the theatre operator from legal rights of an implied warranty.

COURT INTERPRETS LEASE CLAUSE

IN ALL LITIGATIONS involving advertising mediums, such as signs, the courts endeavor to interpret the contract in accordance with the intentions of the contracting parties when the contract was signed.

CASE

For illustration, in Water-Grand Holding Company v. Majestic Theatre Company (225 N. W. 135, Milwaukee, Wis.), it was shown that a theatre operator leased a theatre building for a term of 25 years. The lease contract contained a clause, as follows:

"It is further covenanted and agreed between the parties hereto, that the lessee (theatre operator) shall have the right at its sole expense . . . at all times, during the term of this lease, to erect, maintain and operate an electric vertical sign in front of the building . . . of substantially the dimensions and in subtantially the location to be provided for in the said plans and specifications . . . and lessee (theatre operator) shall have the right at its expense from time to time to remove such electric sign and erect, maintain and operate a new or different electric sign, provided such new electric sign from time to time shall be located substantially in the same location, and be of substantially the same dimensions as the old sign."

The plans and specifications of the building provided for steel brackets capable of supporting an electric sign 82 feet high. However, because of a restrictive city ordinance the theatre operator erected a sign only 60 feet in height.

Several years later the city ordinance was amended permitting erection of electric signs 70 feet in height. The theatre operator began to work on increasing the height of the sign from 60 to 70 feet, and the landlord filed suit to prevent the alteration contending that the original size of the sign must not by the terms of the lease be altered.

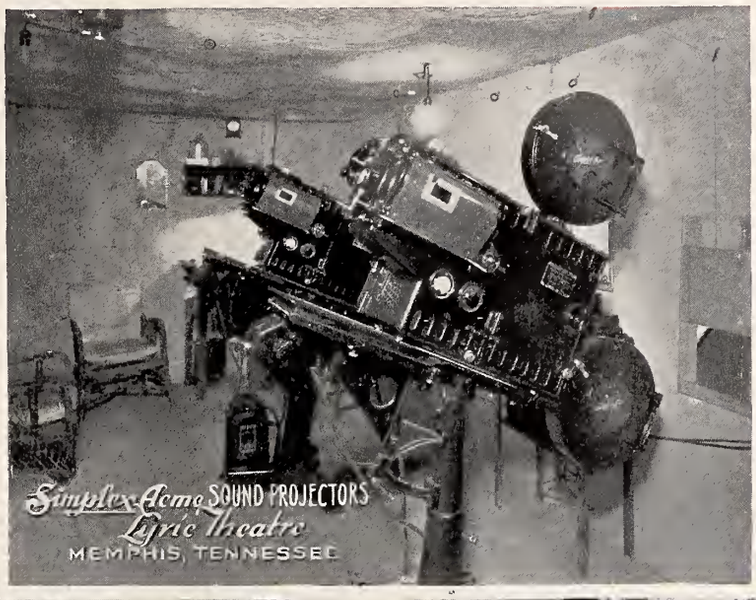
DECISION

However, the court held the theatre operator entitled to increase the height of the sign to 82 feet, saying:

"That the right to erect and maintain a large electric sign on the front of the building was of great value to a theatre tenant paying the large rent here required and occupying a substantial part of the entire building, is not and cannot be questioned. In construing the above-quoted vital portions of the lease granting this valuable right to the tenant, we have no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that the substance and essence of this grant was and is that such sign was to be measured, so far as any right by the landlord to limit its size is concerned, by the size as designated and permitted by the plans of the building. . . . We cannot construe the language of the lease . . . so as to make, for all time, the maximum size of any permissible sign to be that of that sign which happened to be the first erected under said lease. Especially should this be so when the size desired was always limited, as of necessity it must be, by law as well as by the lease itself, by the ordinances and regulations which are in effect in this city."

LAW OF WARRANTY

FIRST IT IS important to know that warranties are legally classified as "expressed" and "implied." An expressed guarantee exists under circumstances where the buyer and seller orally or in writing agree to the exact terms of the warranty. An implied guarantee is one where the seller does not make a warranty, but the circumstances are such that a Court implies that a warranty exists, irrespective of the contrary contentions that may be made by the seller.



In other words, frequently the character of a contract or the intended use of theatre supplies is such that a theatre operator is compelled to rely upon the honesty of the seller to supply merchandise reasonably fit for the intended purposes. Under these circumstances the Courts imply a warranty on the part of the seller that he will supply goods having reasonably good quality in consideration of the price paid.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 116, No. 6 August 4, 1934

A FOG of misunderstanding over the Legion of Decency movement and the motion picture industry's avowed and official adjustments to that movement is daily received in the current comments of the press, not a few of the social and religious leaders, and painfully indeed by the inferences of the cautious anonymous and secret commentators in important positions in the screen world. Despite the detailed and careful expositions that have been presented, a vast number of usually intelligent persons in point of fact do not know what it is all about.

Examination of the chorus of errors and misconcepts brings to view a familiar pattern of the prejudice which is offered as opinion. Too many persons of importance to the success of the new effort at adjustment of the art of Hollywood to the public of America have brought along a set of labels, stereotypes and notions that they have been accumulating for years and based on entirely irrelevant experience and observation.

There are many evidences, even so early, that the basic and all important principle of self-regulation, preserved by the plan put into operation by the Production Code Administration, is not being recognized as self-regulation by some of the powers of production. These powers of production are persons who in this and in many other expressions have indicated that they think the motion picture is their private property and concern.

They are the makers of the fog within. Meanwhile outside a fringe of militant riders of hobby horses of special interests and movements are seeking to find in the current situation a new opening and stage for their old acts and antics. So while the Legion of Decency movement has found adjustment towards its aims in the Production Code Administration the hobby riders are promising all manner of external censorships and invasive regulative measures. The external fog is just as dumbly thick as the fog within.

Only stubborn habit and old fears make picture makers see an invasion of the art in the Production Code Administration. Only stubborn, persistent pursuit of old purposes makes the censorship exponents see opportunity anew today.

Even so intelligent an observer and commentator as Mr. Heywood Broun, who writes these days for the New York World Telegram, betrays some considerable misunderstanding of the viewpoint which officially controls the Production Code Administration and its relation to the Legion of Decency movement. For instance, discussing evasive trends of screen behavior, he remarks: "I doubt that Mae West is the last of her line. More subtile approaches are distinctly possible."

It would seem that Mr. Broun assumes that it is inevitable that characters of the type portrayed so ably by Miss West are now barred from the screen, in the course of the "clean-up."

But in truth that is most contrary indeed to the aims and purposes of the movement. The adventurine-ladies that Miss West interprets are a proper part of drama and can and most likely will continue on the screen. Not locale and personnel, but rather their treatment, determines fitness. Eugene Brieux wrote a drama about syphilis and harlotry entitled "Damaged Goods" and there was a famous play about "Mrs. Warren's Profession," neither of which contained what could be construed as pornography.

There is, believe it or not, considerable difference between the play or picture which presents sex sins as a factor in life, and the play or picture which is in essence a bagnio travelogue.

That difference is the one which is now being impressed upon some of those creative minds of the picture making community.

The movement to achieve this is a normal and integral production activity, carried on at this time by a department of the industry created for the purpose, the Production Code Administration. It is not a step toward censorship, but most precisely one away from it.

Further, all the fun is not taken out of life if bad boys are forbidden to write dirty words on the back fence.

NAUGHTY WORDS

"The motion picture industry got into its current 'decency campaign' trouble as a consequence of too much success," Terry Ramsaye remarked in a talk before the Rotary Club of New York this week. "The motion picture put the road shows, which were plays attuned to the American multitudes, out of business when features came along in 1912. The drama was driven back to the big cities and the service of minorities, sophisticated minorities. When in 1926 sound came to the movies they went to the drama to get words to say on the screen and a lot of the words have turned out to be naughty, too naughty for the masses. The cracks of Broadway are not for Main Street." . . .

FREE IMPORTS

American distributors look for benefits from the lifting, last week, of all restrictions against importation of foreign films into Czechoslovakia, decreed by the government at Prague. Payment of a single $900 tax is the only requirement to unrestricted importation. . . .

STAGE SHOWS

As a possible means of overcoming losses due to the "Decency" campaign, New Orleans theatres are expected to bring back stage shows. Under present conditions downtown first runs bear the brunt of initial criticism, neighborhood houses gaining thereby. . . .

CHICAGO PREMIUMS

Provided each and every patron entering a theatre receives merchandise, Chicage places no ban on the giving away of premiums and the like. The decision came from Lieutenant Harry M. Costello, police officer in charge of theatres, following complaints from neighborhood houses calling give-aways unfair competition. The lottery element, however, has been eliminated. . . .

QUOTA REWARD

Ample reward, in the form of a week's salary, will go to managers and press representatives of RKO theatres who achieve quota figures on business during the month of August. The method has been devised to stimulate mid-summer business, usually slack, from within, rather than through recourse to summer entertainment festivals and similar "shots in the arm." . . .

LOUISIANA TAX

On suburban houses in New Orleans and smaller theatres throughout the state will fall the chief burden of the new two per cent tax on all film advertising in Louisiana. New Orleans key theatres will not be affected. . . .

U.A. SUED

Suing United Artists for alleged breach of contract, Wometco Theatres, Inc., Miami, Fla., claims $50,000 possible loss as a result of United Artists' action in moving "The House of Rothschild" into the roadshow class, notifying Wometco it must wait 120 days after roadshowing in Miami. This, alleges Wometco, after contracts had been signed with U. A. for first and subsequent runs. . . .

COLUMBIA LISTINGS

Permission from the New York Stock Exchange granted, Columbia is listing 31,536 additional voting trust certificates and canceling listing on 66,510, a net reduction of 34,974. The resulting total: 200,895. Of the new certificates, 4,234 were for payment of stock dividend, 27,302 for holders of Series A warrants for common stock whose option had been extended to June 30, 1937. . . .

ENGLISH INVESTMENT

Invested in the past six months in English film theatre enterprises was nearly $5,000,000, according to statistics compiled by Jordan & Sons, Ltd., London. During the period 120 film companies have been registered with aggregate capital of $3,366,500. Theatre enterprises total capitalization: $1,344,500. . . .

DE MILLE DECLARES

"Without consulting the public, producers, like ducks, dashed madly along until we all got into muddy water," last week declared Paramount producer-director Cecil B. DeMille, referring to the Legion of Decency campaign. But out of it, says the veteran, as from all such industry-wide problems, producers will emerge a "bit scarred, perhaps, but better equipped to carry on." He warns: "Producers are building their own funeral pyre by making films for the theatre man and New York."

NVA FUND

Last week denied by the New York supreme court was a petition of National Variety Artists, Inc., to restrain the trustees of the NVA Fund, Inc., from disposing of property of the fund, and asking appointment of a receiver. The court: receivers of such a fund would not tend to redress the plaintiff and will defeat the object for which the fund has been collected." An early trial was ordered. . . .

NAMED CENSOR

Named as successors to Major J. C. Boylen as chairman of the Ontario, Canada, censor board, by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, is Otter Elliott, projectionist at London, Ont. Fifteen years ago Mr. Elliott was chief censor, resigning in 1924 when the Conservative party took the reins. . . .

ALLIED MEETING

Discussed by Allied States eastern leaders at a New York meeting this week were trailers, code amendment on clearance and zoning, legislation, church drive and the New Jersey annual convention. Walter B. Littlefield presided. The next eastern session will be held in conjunction with the New Jersey session, August 22-24. . . .

SHOWMEN HIT COMPOSERS' PLAN TO RAISE MUSIC TAX

American Society Would Boost Reproduction Charge 20 to 1,000 Per Cent Over Present Rate of 10 Cents Per Seat

Exhibitors throughout the country were called to action Monday by their corporate and organization leaders to defend themselves against the announced purpose of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to raise the music reproduction fee charged theatres from 20 to 1,000 per cent, effective October 1, above the present annual tariff of ten cents a seat.

The large theatres are hit hardest by the new scale, which, for 20 or more performances a week, establishes a basic rate for annual license in an amount equal to one filled capacity house at the highest admission charged for seats at any performance. If less than 20 performances a week, the scale will be proportionately lower.

If the large interests accept the theory that all large theatres should and will pay a higher music tariff because they are the major users of music, then the Society will not increase the fee for any theatre seating less than 600 or charging an admission of 15 cents or less. The possibility of such a compromise was learned privately from E. C. Mills, general manager of the Society.

An emergency war council, representing all the affiliated circuit theatre interests and Allied States Association, the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, assembled at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York Monday to determine the strategy of battle. They held that the demands, as outlined by the ASCAP, were "entirely unwarranted, unconscionable, impossible and unreasonable."

The MPTOA Tuesday charged ASCAP with being a "monopoly in restraint of trade" and an "illegal price-fix combine." bine."

The immediate plan for attack decided upon by the exhibitors' emergency council, and which was recommended to all trade associations in the business, is three-fold:

(1) Resorting to litigation, the nature of which is at present being studied by a selected committee of attorneys representing the various exhibition interests.

(2) Bringing the demands of the Society to the attention of all present and prospective members of Congress.

(3) Organization of a united exhibitor front in opposition to any increase.

The Society, however, had a different story, claiming:

(1) Music reproduction fees paid in exhibition are not equalized, all owners paying the same basic rate of ten cents a seat regardless of the extent to which they employ music.

(2) ASCAP cannot afford any longer to license the music of its members "so cheaply," an increase being an "economic necessity."

(3) A new scale is needed, based on a scientific plan of assessment to have some relation to the income of the motion picture industry.

(4) There has been no increase in the music fee in 17 years, although the industry has increased its rates.

The exhibitors' committee will recommend to all exhibitors that before entering upon any new license agreement with the Society, they should consult with their own associations, and if not members they are privileged to address either the national Allied or MPTOA organization.

The Society's new license fee follows:

I. The basic rate for annual license is an amount equal to one filled capacity house at the highest rate charged for seats at any performance. Example:

Capacity of Theatre at Highest Admission

Class	Number	Price	Total
Loge seats	150	$1.00	$150.00
Orchestra	1,200	.75	900.00
Balcony	750	.30	225.00
Total value of one full capacity			$1,275.00

II. If the theatre presents 20 or more performances per week, the rate for annual license is an amount equal to one full capacity per above example.

III. If less than 20 performances per week are presented the rate for annual license is:

Number of performances per week	Rate for Annual license
19	95% of basic rate
18	90% " " "
17	85% " " "
16	80% " " "
15	75% " " "
14	70% " " "
13	65% " " "
12	60% " " "
11	55% " " "
10	50% " " "
9	45% " " "
8	40% " " "
7	35% " " "
Less than 7 (operating more than 3 days per week)	10 cents per seat
Less than 7 (operating 3 or less days per week)	5 cents per seat

III. The minimum rate for annual license in any case is fixed at ten cents per seat, except if theatre operates three or less days per week, in which case five cents per seat is the rate.

IV. For theatres which operate irregularly, or are operated for terms of less than a full year period, the rate is 1/12 of the above for each month or fraction thereof actually operated.

V. By theatres regularly operated the fee is payable quarterly (every three months) in advance. Irregularly operated theatres (road shows, etc.) monthly in advance.

VI. The above schedule of rates is effective on and after Oct. 1, 1934. They cover, and licenses issued by ASCAP relate to and authorize, the non-dramatic public performance of all musical compositions copyrighted by the members of ASCAP and of all foreign similar societies with which ASCAP has reciprocal relations. A list of members and affiliated societies will be sent by ASCAP on request.

VII. If for any reason any section of seats is closed off and sale of tickets thereto is discontinued, such seats may be deducted from the "capacity" of the theatre. If the price or performance policy of the theatre changes during the license year ASCAP should be promptly notified so that license fee rate may be accordingly readjusted.

Means General Increase

The foregoing scales reveal that the tariff for every theatre in the country will be increased except in the few cases where an exhibitor gives only seven performances weekly; also, where less than seven performances are given and when the theatre operates three days or less each week, the present 10 cent rate will be halved to five cents per seat per year. Mr. Mills on Monday paved the way for further discussions with the exhibitors' committee.

That the Society intended to increase royalties "as soon as the validity of economic recovery permits of an increase," was reported in Motion Picture Herald of July 29, 1933. Mr. Mills now believes that sufficient recovery has been made to effect the increase, which he said is "absolutely necessary because of the economic pressure on authors."

Even if the Society is successful in obtaining all the increased scale, the composers and authors will still be getting only 50 per cent of what they received before radio and talking pictures, he added.

Industry leaders estimated that the $1,000,000 now collected by ASCAP from theatres would be increased from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually under the new scale. Mr. Mills differs, declaring that the increased fees would only double the $650,000 revenue received from theatres during 1933.

"We know that the motion picture public paid $1,560,000,000 in theatre admissions during 1933," Mr. Mills said (this figure has been widely disputed), "and out of this sum only $650,000 was paid to composers and authors of music. The new rates would bring in $1,300,000 annually to the Society. This new revenue combined with the present income of the Society would not be more than one-tenth of one per cent of the entire amount paid in motion picture admissions."

Ivy Lee, in the Society's publicity, has attempted to prove that composers, authors and publishers receive only $1,704,000 annually out of all money spent by the public for entertainment, whereas dance halls and night clubs receive $25,000,000, theatres and concerts get $166,000,000, radio $525,000,000 and motion pictures $1,500,000,000.

8,000 Theatres Represented

When the new demands were made known, about three weeks ago, circuit and independent exhibitor leaders immediately formed an emergency council, said to represent 8,000 theatres, which opened negotiations with Mr. Mills.

MARIE DRESSLER, BEST BOX-OFFICE

Greatest Money-Making Star of 1932 and 1933 Won Her Highest Fame in Her Middle Sixties

Marie Dressler, the greatest box office of the sound era, is dead in the 65th year of a career as marked for its lack of ostentation as the distinguished simplicity of "Marie" herself.

Miss Dressler, beloved of millions the world over, passed away at 3:35 p.m. Saturday at the home of C. K. G. Billings, lifelong friend, at Montecito, Cal., near Santa Barbara. Death was a result of cancer and complications.

The star learned two years ago that she never could recover her health, but she took a course of treatment that enabled her to continue her work at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City by working only a few hours daily. Three months ago the illness forced her into retirement, going to the Billings estate, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Breed Walker, where her indomitable courage fought a losing fight.

Played First Role at 5 Years

Marie Dressler's theatrical career began when she was 5 years old, at her home in Coburg, Ontario. The occasion was a church theatrical and Marie played Cupid on a pedestal. When she tumbled off, the laughter that followed taught her even at that age that, perhaps, people preferred to laugh than to cry. So from that time on, she made them do both.

At 14, Marie joined a touring opera repertoire, changing her name from Leila Koerber to that of a deceased aunt, Marie Dressler. She played every type of part, from the chorus up, rising steadily from an $8 a week salary to the financial independence afforded by stardom.

Film Stardom in 1930

Yet her actual stardom in motion pictures did not come until 1930, when she played Marthye, the drunken old waterfront derelict in "Anna Christie." Greta Garbo was starred in that picture, the Swedish star's first sound film, but it was Marie Dressler who "stole the show."

From 1930 until late last year there was no dearth of work for Marie Dressler in Hollywood. Following "Anna Christie," came "Caught Short," "Chasing Rainbows," "Let Us Be Gay," "The March of Time," "The Singer of Seville," "One Romantic Night," "Call of the Flesh," "Min and Bill," "Emma," "Politics," "Reducing," "Prosperity," "Dinner at Eight," "Tugboat Annie," "Christopher Bean."

In 1932 Miss Dressler won the annual poll of exhibitors, conducted by Motion Picture Herald, for the best money-making stars of the 1931-32 season. She led the field with a 91 per cent score.

In 1933 she again won the Herald poll, heading the list with 74 per cent.

In 1931 the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awarded prizes to her and Lionel Barrymore for the best performances of the year. Her award had come for her portrayal in "Min and Bill," in which she and Wallace Beery starred.

Marie Dressler was essentially of the theatre. It was as much a part of her life as food and sleep. The greatest shock of her life had come when, after having devoted the best part of her middle age to war work, she could not get a stage engagement. In 1925, she announced her "retirement," although she had done little work on the stage since 1919.

On Stage in 1886

Her first professional appearance on the stage in what might be termed a real part was in 1886 as Cigarette in "Under Two Flags." The next few years she toured with light opera companies, playing 40 roles. She made her New York debut May 28, 1892, as Cunigonde in "The Robber on the Rhine," by Maurice Barrymore. She also played a number of parts with the Bennett Moulton Opera Company at the old Casino Theatre in New York.

Among her other roles in plays and operettas were: the Duchess in "The Princess Nicotine," in 1893; Aurore in "Giroflé-Girofla," 1894; Mary Douclee in "Madeleine, Or the Magic Kiss," 1895; Georgia West in "A Stag Party," 1895, while in 1896, she scored an enormous success as Flo Honeydew in "The Lady Slavey." She played Mrs. Malaprop in Sheridan's "The Rivals," and Flora in "Hotel Topsy Turvy" in 1898. In 1899 she appeared as Viola Alum in "The Man in the Moon" and the following year as Helen Print in "Miss Print."

"Tillie's Nightmare" in 1910

In 1905 she joined Joe Weber's Music Hall company, playing in "Higgledy-Piggledy," "The College Widower," "Twiddle Twaddle" and "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West." Then Miss Dressler went to London and appeared at the Palace theatre for £500 a week—the highest salary that had been paid a variety act.

Returning to the United States, she toured in "The Boy and the Girl," and in 1910 came a play and a role which made history—Tillie Blobbs in "Tillie's Nightmare." It was in this play that Marie Dressler introduced the world-famous song, "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl."

Miss Dressler continued with Weber and Fields, in vaudeville, here and in Europe. In 1917 she plunged into war work, entertaining the soldiers, making Liberty Loan speeches. Then she toured again in "Tillie's Nightmare" and played in "The Passing Show of 1921" at the Winter Garden in New York.

First Picture in 1916

Just prior to America's entry into the war, however, Miss Dressler had had her first taste of the motion picture. It was in 1916 that she played Tillie Blobbs in the Mack Sennett comedy, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," based upon "Tillie's Nightmare." Supporting her in the screen version were Charlie Chaplin and Mabel Normand.

One or two short stage engagements followed "The Passing Show of 1921." In 1924 she was in financial straits. In 1925 she went on a five-weeks vaudeville tour. In 1926 she undertook to sell real estate in Florida. When that bubble burst she returned to New York.

Marie Dressler never returned to the stage. Managers said the public wanted "glamorous youth." Late in 1926, however, Allan Dwan offered her a bit in a motion picture, a one-day engagement. When the film was released her name on the credits recalled her to the mind of a Hollywood casting director. She was summoned to the Coast and played a small part in "The Callahans and the Murphys." Other small character parts came her way and in 1930 her great opportunity "arrived" with "Anna Christie."

With all her success, Miss Dressler's friendliness never changed. She had been called "Marie" by every President since Grover Cleveland. When her 64th birthday was celebrated on the MGM lot last November, President and Mrs. Roosevelt were the first to sign a huge parchment scroll of greetings.

On the MGM lot this week, flags were at half-mast. On Tuesday, the studio ceased all activity during the funeral. With simple services at the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, at Glendale, Cal., — her pastor, Rev. Neal Dodd, officiating—pallbearers were Clarence Brown, Mervyn Le Roy, Charles Riesner, William K. Howard, W. S. Van Dyke and Jack Conway, each of whom had directed at least one of her pictures.

Jeanette MacDonald sang Miss Dressler's favorite hymn, "Abide With Me," accompanied by Katherine Lewis, who had played for her on the stage and studio set.

Milwaukee Group Plans State Unit

Representatives of 56 Milwaukee county theatres met in Milwaukee last week in the offices of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, and voted to organize a temporary unit of independent exhibitors until the proper procedure and connections can be arranged. The ultimate goal is one independent exhibitor organization of Wisconsin. Both Allied and independents of the MPTO of Wisconsin have joined in the movement. E. F. Maertz was named chairman, Harry Perlewitz, treasurer, and Etta Weisner, secretary.

The new group plans a new column of advertising for independent theatres in local newspapers, and plans to have at least 40 independent Milwaukee county theatres taking space in this column.

It is the contention of the exhibitors that many clauses in the new clearance and zoning schedule for Milwaukee county exceed the authority given the board under the code and it was indicated that the group will protest the schedule to the Code Authority.

The group wired H. M. Warner, president; Gradwell Sears, sales manager, and Joseph Bernhard, theatrical head, Warner executives, protesting a reported pending deal with Saxe Amusement Management, Inc., which, they indicated, will give Saxe theatres Warner-First National product in Milwaukee with Warner theatres showing these films at 10 cents less than the Saxe houses, thereby depriving the independent theatres of Warner product.

OUTSTANDING BRITISH FILMS OUTDO HOLLYWOOD'S IN CANADIAN NET

But Dominion Independents Prefer to Take Motherland Pictures One at a Time When They've Proved Themselves

By J. A. COWAN
Canadian Correspondent

Stiffened sales resistance to British product marks the 1934 summer sales season among Canadian exhibitors. The high grosses of the past season for a limited number of British films, notably the Regal-distributed "Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great," have not shortened the distance or smoothed the route to the dotted line.

Taking the viewpoint, in particular, of the independent exhibitor and the small-city manager of a circuit theatre, his current attitude is, apparently, that he will take the London imports as specials, one at a time, but only when and if they have proved their power at the box-office. He makes no secret of his belief that, for the British output, the mill-run stuff is likely to class below standard. On the whole, he figures that he stands to lose by playing British programmers with regularity except on a double-bill policy.

But while an ordinary British picture, if there is such a thing, is likely to gross below an average Hollywood film, it is also true that an outstanding British entry which has clicked satisfactorily on its major first-runs, may turn in grosses well above those registered by good Hollywood pictures. The exhibitor is inclined to feel that he can well afford to wait and see under these circumstances even if the program is going to cost him more. His take is likely to be more than enough above normal to take care of this.

British pictures in the lump cannot be said to have established themselves solidly in the Canadian market to date. The wins are on the basis of individual performance but there have been enough box-office nose-dives on British bookings to strengthen the Canadian showman in his belief that an average British picture must still carry the burden for inferior ones that have gone before.

Fraction Wants British Regardless

There is a definite buying population in practically every Canadian community with a most decided preference for British pictures, other things being equal. But this is not sufficient, in most localities, to offset the box office drop if a British picture without reputation is booked. A portion of the regular patrons will stay away and the volume of very-British customers is usually insufficient to make up this loss. But once a British film has been set in the public mind as good entertainment—and "Henry the Eighth" is the great and shining example of this—it can exert its full draw among the regulars and get this restricted all-British clientele in addition, with resulting high grosses.

Paradoxically, if a quota had been enforced in Canada for the last two or three seasons against British pictures and only the pick of England's studio output allowed into Canada, the position of the British film in the Dominion would now be unbeatable. To some extent, Canadian distributors attempted to enforce restrictions on the Empire imports by rejecting a number of films shipped over on the grounds that they were unsuitable to the Canadian taste. This has helped. But the great bulk of cash customers still have a suspicion that the Motherland's producers may try to slip over some low-grade entertainment on the Dominion's customers and, on the whole, whatever has been done to cure this idea has been carried out by the Canadian exhibitors and distributors, not by London, so the cure will take a long time.

Welfare Units Active

Another factor has to do with the part that national welfare organizations, patriotically inclined, have played in the British film situation in Canada. For years, several of these have consistently urged attendance at British films as a patriotic duty. This has had a damaging effect on the box-office as far as average moviegoers are concerned, since they are interested in entertainment. The rank-and-file of the organizations most vocal in the matter, as many managers learned to their cost, do not seem to be regular attendants at the film houses. Groups with large memberships, particularly women's groups, which attract wide attention and obtain much publicity for their resolutions and comments on the British film situation, do not, on a check-up, represent any considerable percentage of the box-office take at the theatre. Booking a film in the hope of gathering in their trade has not, in the past, proved to be a profitable idea except in a small group of exceptions such as at Edmonton, Alta.

Premier-Elect Is Friendly

While Ontario's premier-elect, Mitchell Hepburn, who comes into power after a political earthquake, has said that he believes the duplication of censorship boards in Canada is unnecessary, the matter is a federal one in that nine different provinces, of which Ontario is the most important one, are affected and it would be very difficult for any one section such as Ontario to make changes single-handed. Mr. Hepburn has announced his intention of taking over the portfolio of provincial treasurer, in which case censorship and film matters come under his personal control. Changes in censorship board personnel are a possibility but so far there is no definite clue to the new government's policy except that economy rules.

Canadian film interests are known to be on very friendly terms with the new government and the Premier's own attitude towards the industry as a whole is friendly. The only film personalities publicly active in the campaign, E. Marks of the Martin Theatre, Oshawa and Mrs. Joshua Smith of Toronto, both ran as candidates in opposition to the victorius Hepburnites. Marks lost a stiff fight and Mrs. Smith (Ray Lewis) was snowed under.

Invading Canada's Newport

First important recognition of films on the part of Canada's Newport at Murray Bay is scheduled for Friday when Warner Bros. presents the world premiere of "Dames."

Exceedingly exclusive, millionaire summer colony and summer home during his life of President Taft, Murray Bay draws its residents from Europe as well as America, but hitherto has almost ignored films as entertainment. The premiere, an invitation affair, will be staged in the Manoir Richelieu Casino, a replica of the famed 17th Century Chateau de Ramezay in Montreal which was the scene of Benjamin Franklin's early publishing efforts.

Arrangements to crash the resort's formal program were made by the Toronto office of Warner Brothers, partly on the basis that the event was a world premiere but chiefly because the film stars the Canadian-born Ruby Keeler and is announced as her first stellar appearance.

QUOTA IS ASKED FOR AUSTRALIA; THEATRE RESTRICTION IS DEFEATED

New South Wales Commissioner Proposes Quota Starting at 5 Per Cent for Distributors, 4 Per Cent for Exhibitors

By CLIFF HOLT
Sydney Correspondent

Most important of the recommendations arising out of the New South Wales Government's inquiry into the motion picture industry are those for an Australian quota and for non-restriction of theatre building. Limitation of theatre licenses was one of the most vital issues involved. A recommendation for a quota for both exhibitors and distributors is of paramount importance to local producers and those who contemplate entering the field. From the outset, the great body of exhibitors were indifferent to this phase of the investigation.

In presenting the findings, the Commissioner (Mr. Marks) pointed out that he had yet to make his full report to the Government. What is recorded here represents his interim report only. His next report will cover the remainder of the matter under investigation.

Mr. Marks recommended to the Government that a quota be enforced along the following lines:

DISTRIBUTORS	Per Cent	EXHIBITORS	Per Cent
First year	5	First year	4
Second year	7½	Second year	5
Third year	10	Third year	7½
Fourth year	12½	Fourth year	10
Fifth year	15	Fifth year	12½

He commented that the principal nations have recognized—in many instances by special legislation—the importance of a national film production industry. The chief objections advanced against a quota were that it would encourage production of inferior pictures and would indirectly encourage promotion of a large number of "mushroom" companies. He said the provision of a standard merit for quota pictures should lessen the risk of indifferent pictures being produced for quota purposes. The second objection he dismissed briefly, saying a flow of new capital could be expected while "the prospect of a portion of this capital being lost" would not constitute a valid objection.

Wants Uniformity

Mr. Marks urged that any quota legislation contemplated by N. S. W. should be submitted to the other States and an endeavor be made to obtain uniformity throughout Australia. He suggested that prior to the expiration of five years, consideration should be given to advisability of extending the period. Other sub-clauses in his quota recommendations were: (1) the quota should be in respect of the number and not the footage of feature films of not less than 3,000 feet in length; (2) exhibitors should be given the right to reject other pictures to make room for Australian bookings; (3) an advisory committee should be set up consisting of two producers' representatives, two distributors, two exhibitors and two outside representatives with no pecuniary interest; (4) one member of the advisory committee should be the chief censor; (5) if the minister is satisfied that in any year compliance with the exhibitor or distributor requirements is not commercially practicable by reason of quantity, character, exhibitor value or excessive cost, he may modify the percentage to suit the requirements.

Mr. Marks negatived practically every argument advanced by exhibiting companies and independents in favor of restricted theatre building, declaring that with such restriction "there would be no end to the number of industries which might claim protection by legislation on grounds equally as good as those advanced by film exhibiting interests. All the issues in their ultimate analysis are found to resolve themselves into a matter of competition."

Cites Other Industries' Problems

He said a wider experience of other industries enabled a recognition of similar competitive troubles which have to be faced by them.

Mr. Marks declared there was no valid reason for the restriction of picture theatre licenses advanced at the inquiry based upon some changed condition or vital alteration in the industry, which could not have been foreseen at the time of the original investment.

Commenting that companies urged the introduction of legislation to protect their theatre holdings, the Commissioner said: "It is a reasonable assumption that the owners and lessees of existing picture theatres in Sydney must inevitably sustain some measure of loss if new theatres be erected. . . . This is a risk of loss from competition in most business undertakings."

The commissioner made clear that the views expressed by him in his interim report apply to suburban and country theatres as well as to those in the city. He found that the industry apparently had reached a stage where practically all localities were adequately provided with theatres, and certain areas oversupplied. The situation, he pointed out, was obviously not unique to the film industry.

Attack on General Doubted

Mr. Marks did not support allegations made that distributors were attempting to break down General Theatres Corporation, which has important theatre holdings in Sydney. The allegations were embodied in statements that the distributors were increasing film hire and withholding supplies; but the commissioner declared that there was nothing to support the view that distributors acted in concert either as regards the price or selling of their product; that, on the contrary, there was every indication of active competition among them.

Exhibitors Open Quarters

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association last week held a luncheon for all members, considered a housewarming party to open new headquarters in the Film Building.

Hospitals' Film Awards Attacked

Charging the Veterans' Administration at Washington with unfair discrimination against independent distributors in awarding contracts for film to be supplied veterans' hospitals, J. T. Sheffield, Monogram franchise holder in the northwest, has requested Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, to enter a protest in this connection with the Administration and through other federal channels.

Mr. Sheffield, one of the largest independent distributors in the northwest, operating exchanges at Seattle, Portland, Salt Lake City, Butte and Denver, takes exception to the refusal of the Veterans' Administration to entertain his bid for film rental service for veterans' facilities in his territory. The reason advanced by the Administration officials was because Monogram "specializes in melodramas and western subjects, and while films of this nature might provide acceptable entertainment for normal audiences, experience has shown they exercise a disturbing effect upon a large proportion of patients at veterans' hospitals, especially such types as are afflicted with nervous or mental disorders."

"Their statement concerning Monogram Pictures," declared Mr. Sheffield, "smells of simple, hide-bound ignorance, or of a smart attempt to cover up the real reasons for rejecting our bid and paying more money for other pictures that certainly are no more desirable."

Figuring the minimum amount of business to be awarded under the proposal, Mr. Sheffield's exchanges would have received contracts approximating $2,000 for film service to be furnished from July 1, 1934 to June 30, 1935, to the 11 veterans' hospitals located in the northwest area that his five exchanges serve.

New York Court Dismisses Counterclaims in Fox Case

The appellate division of the New York state supreme court has thrown out counter claims filed by William Fox against Fox Theatres Corporation some time ago, when he was sued by the receivers for $2,066,082. The court ruled that if the claims were allowed Mr. Fox would be in the position of a preferred creditor, "to the detriment of other creditors."

The decision is a reversal of the verdict of Justice Peter P. Smith of the supreme court, who allowed the first counter claim to stand, but sustains his decision in dismissing two other claims.

DECENCY CAMPAIGN ISSUES ARE DEBATED

Educator Cites Fundamental Cultural Issues; Radio Speakers Agree Against Censors

Protagonists of the Legion of Decency, continuing their activities to gain numerical support for their campaign against immoral pictures, were presented over the week-end with many arguments against the drive, some coming from the pulpits of Protestant clergymen, others from laymen.

Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, educator, in an article in the New York World-Telegram, contended that the fundamental cultural issue involved in the movement is of far greater significance than is usually perceived.

"It goes more deeply than the question of the profits of a great industry or the salaries of its artists," he wrote. "It is also something wider than the issue of whether or not self-constituted bodies shall control the education, morals and art of the American people.

Charges "Imbecility" in Films

"Moving pictures are more than an industrial product. They are, or certainly should be, a prominent element in our culture, ranking with the newspapers, radio and stage. They have already attained a marvelous development as a manifestation of applied science and popular art.

"In spite of all the valid criticism which may be leveled against them it is doubtful that any other notable achievement of recent capitalistic enterprise offers more to the public for its money or contains so slight an element of evil in proportion to the educational and recreational facilities."

"While not a movie addict myself," Dr. Barnes explained, "I have certainly seen representative movies which fall into every category of film production. I have frequently been impressed with the insufferable dullness or the incredible triviality and imbecility of many pictures."

This charge, he added, may be lodged quite as much against the American public as against the film industry.

"I personally am well acquainted with some of the leading producers and know that they would much prefer to make their millions out of worthy and educational films if they could do so."

Urge Churches Help Market

Other comments revolving around an identical theme came from a Protestant Episcopal rector and a Presbyterian minister in New York. Both suggested that the churches "cultivate a market for wholesome plays by making 'goodness' as attractive as possible."

"Using the big stick appeals to the grandstand," said Rev. Thomas H. Whelpley at the Chelsea Presbyterian Church, New York, "but it is not the most effective weapon at the command of the Christian church. Let the churches through preaching and example create a taste for better things and a market for wholesome plays and the picture industry will be only too glad to give the people what they want."

The Episcopal rector, Rev. Albert E. Ribourg, said:

"The arm of the law can curb what today is an insult to common decency, but let us not forget that these things have been created and produced for a public which demanded them, thus proving that the number of people who support these particular forms of evil is larger than the number who prefer moral, clean and wholesome forms of entertainment."

Opposing spokesmen in a radio debate late last week in New York agreed that censorship was undesirable. The speakers were Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Methodist Episcopal, and I. Robert Broder, attorney for and founder of the Association for the Preservation of the Freedom of Stage and Screen.

"Boycotting objectionable films will do more to correct the complained of evils than any form of censorship," said Bishop McConnell.

Mr. Broder argued that boycotting of films and theatres would injure hundreds of thousands of employees.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America last week went on record against censorship, but warned Hollywood that unless its Production Code Administration, headed by Joseph I. Breen, is supported in its aims by the producers, the Council will do everything in its power to bring Federal control.

Headway was reported in the effort to ally fraternal bodies in New York state in the Legion's campaign. The Knights of Columbus was reported seeking to enlist 200,000 members for the Legion.

Following conferences between Fred Wehrenberg, head of the Kansas-Missouri MPTO, and Archbishop John J. Glennon, the theatre boycott in St. Louis may be modified.

Cancellation Problem

Another problem—involving the cancellation of pictures on moral grounds, as permitted by the major distributors—presented itself. In St. Louis, reports were current that exhibitors had encountered refusals by two major companies to cancel pictures listed as objectionable by both the St. Louis Better Films Council and the local Legion of Decency.

In Kansas City, Jay Means, ITO head, said the procedure involved in canceling pictures on moral grounds "is so hedged about with conditions and restrictions as to render it meaningless to the exhibitor."

Abram F. Myers, general counsel to Allied, in Washington said the cancellations allowances "are designed to hoodwink the press and public and mean exactly nothing."

Will H. Hays reported to MPPDA members on the progress made to date by the Production Code Administration in connection with the industry's cleanup campaign. Fifty features, 52 shorts and four serials have been approved under Mr. Breen's strengthened regime, Mr. Hays said.

Cites Hollywood's Efforts

Hollywood itself "is making efforts to free motion pictures from salaciousness," said Dr. W. H. McAlister, president of Mt. Union College, Alliance, Ohio.

No application of a theatre boycott is expected in Boston.

Five hundred thousand Chicago women will give their support to the Legion campaign.

Cincinnati Catholic clergy expressed skepticism that promises made by producers at the conference with Bishops there last month would be kept.

G. H. Gravis, state supervisor of high schools, said at Cleveland that Ohio needs no film cleanup.

Two thousand new Legion members were enrolled in Passaic, N. J.

Nine new censors were appointed in Seattle.

The Broadway Baptist Church in Spokane went on record as being against all films.

Short Still on Still Hunt for New President

The Motion Picture Research Council, still stymied by the coincident rise of the Legion of Decency campaign and the abrupt resignation of Mrs. August Belmont, third of the "name presidents" of the organization, is marking time, awaiting a new president, the passing of the Decency publicity storm and the autumn return of prospective backers of social and financial position.

The Reverend William Harrison Short has been engaged the while in an expedition into the more classic summer resort regions on a still hunt for presidential material. As he remarked to a reporter the other day, "Presidents of the caliber we require do not grow on every bush."

The president-picker paused at the Isle of Shoals to deliver a speech to the cultured colony there on the subject of "The Movies, the Decency Crusade and the Goal to be Reached."

The Boston Transcript, which dutifully covers such events in its sector, quotes Dr. Short as saying:

"The one-man censorship which is being set up in Hollywood under Joseph Breen, will be no more acceptable to the American people than would a one-man censorship of the American newspaper. . . .

"Local autonomy in questions pertaining to the screen is the remedy for the existing situation, just as the country has local autonomy in church, school and other matters affecting public education. To open the way for this local autonomy, federal legislation must do away with compulsory block booking and blind selling. . . .

"A recent study of 135 feature motion pictures now being shown—released between January 15 and May 15 of the present year—shows most of the major scenes to be built on illicit love of some form, prostitution or other anti-moral suggestion. . . .

"The moving picture industry is the most highly integrated and relentless monopoly in American national life. It dictates almost absolutely what shall be shown in every movie house in America." . . .

Interstate Names Dallas Woman Preview Supervisor

The Interstate Circuit, Inc., controlling five downtown first run houses in Dallas, has named Mrs. Clarence Echols, chairman of the better films committee of the Dallas Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, as supervisor of films for the Dallas theatres, heading a permanent committee to preview all releases, classifying them as suitable for family, adult or child audiences. The committee was appointed last year by Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the circuit.

Winfield Sheehan Sails For Stories, Talent

Winfield Sheehan, vice president and general manager of production for Fox Film, sailed last Saturday for his annual trip abroad. In addition to visits to London and Paris, Mr. Sheehan will spend some time in Italy, Sicily, Hungary and Austria, perhaps completing acquisition of several stories, and will search for new talent.

MONTH OUTSTANDING IN BRITISH PRODUCT

Sixty Per Cent Were Declared Above the Average Program Merit; Many Suitable for U. S.

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

In respect of both the bulk and quantity of pictures pre-viewed in London, July, 1934, has been an outstanding month for British production companies and for distributors of British films. Of more than a dozen pictures shown to the trade, quite 60 per cent are of a type and standard which make them certainties as box office attractions of much more than program merit in their native country. It is even more important that included in this 60 per cent are many features suitable for American use and one or two which are quite capable of being handled as super-attractions there.

The enormous strides made in every department of British production were vividly illustrated quite early in the month, when B. I. P.'s "Blossom Time" was shown. In American values, this picture may turn out to be another "Private Life of Henry VIII," although it is a quite different type of production. It is certain that it is a "super" of which Hollywood would have every reason to be proud, and it is significant that it has been followed by a number of good British films from other studios.

From Gaumont-British

Gaumont-British, for instance, offered "Little Friend" with Matheson Lang and a real "child discovery," Nova Pilbeam; "My Song for You," with the internationally famous tenor, Jan Kiepura; and "Bella Donna" starring Conrad Veidt and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. "Bella Donna" is from Twickenham studio controlled by Julius Hagen, which turns out a big percentage of box office successes.

From United Artists during the month have come "Lilies of the Field" (Winifred Shotter and Ellis Jeffreys), "Nell Gwyn" (Anna Neagle and Sir Cedric Hardwicke), and "Girls, Please" (Sydney Howard). All these are British and Dominions productions and they were shown as part of an impressive United Artists lineup, the Hollywood end of which offered such stars as Ronald Colman, George Arliss, Constance Bennett and Fredric March.

"Java Head," from the Basil Dean studios, is another British production of the month which both from its subject matter and its direction seems likely to interest America.

Would Sign Stars Jointly

Both as foreshadowing still bigger things certain to be accomplished in the near future, and as indicating the more far-sighted American view of present British values, Darryl Zanuck's statement to the press was highly significant. He intended, he said, to discuss with Alexander Korda a plan whereby Twentieth Century and London Films would sign stars jointly. Thus Joseph Schenck's recent suggestion that United Artists might lend stars like March and Colman to Korda is carried a very important step further. London films will not only become an integral part of the United Artists program throughout the world, but its cooperation will begin at the studio and it will have a vested interest in American star values.

Though all is bright on the production front, exhibitors are finding plenty to worry about. With an almost unexampled spell of fine weather putting practically every theatre into the red with painful frequency, the carbon trouble has cropped up in a new form. Foreign carbons are out as a result of the new duties and, although the Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association gave plentiful assurances that the British producers would reduce prices, it has found it necessary to recommend to its members an arrangement whereby they may be assured of a 15 per cent price discount by signing a year's contract with one specified concern.

Naturally, other manufacturers are up in arms about the move, which threatens a new monopoly. The curious thing is that the CEA should find it necessary to take precautions against price increases, by a bargain of this sort, when a big argument for increased carbon protection was that it would stimulate British production to the point of competitive prices.

Manager Locked Out

"Lost in the Legion," a BIP Leslie Fuller feature, established a humorous precedent at the Prince Edward theatre on its recent preview. The censorship office was unable to view the film on the day set for the trade display, and the manager of the Prince Edward was officially notified that if he displayed an uncertificated film he would lose his license. Actually, this rule applies only to a public and not to a private display, but there was some understandable nervousness at the Prince Edward and a prospect of the private view audience having to be turned away. Arthur Dent of Wardour Films solved the difficulty in a Napoleonic manner; by his orders, the manager of the Prince Edward was forcibly removed from his own theatre and locked out during the display of the film. Who is to go to prison is at the moment undecided.

Gaumont Bidding For Roxy Theatre

Gaumont British this week announced plans whereby it will establish the first British nationwide exchange system in the United States and, in addition, will acquire first run theatres in New York and other key centers.

Jeffrey Bernerd, general manager of Gaumont British who sailed for New York from Southampton last week, said that aside from its plan to invade the American market on a wholesale scale, production also is to be placed on a competitive basis.

Mentioned as a possible theatre for Gaumont in New York is the original Roxy Theatre on Seventh Avenue. Prior to his sailing from England, Mr. Bernerd held trans-atlantic telephone conversation with spokesmen for the Roxy and preliminary negotiations were worked out. It is understood Gaumont is prepared to make a cash offer for the theatre of between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000.

"We not only plan to establish a chain of distribution centers, but will take over key theatres throughout the country for exploiting British films," said C. M. Wolfe, managing director of the company.

"We will compete for directors and artists," he said.

Juveniles Prefer 'Tarzan' to West

"Tarzan" is a greater draw for Kentucky children than Mae West. Miss Anna Bell Ward, general manager of the Phoenix Amusement Co., Lexington, Ky., reports that as an example of juvenile taste in that sector, 11,722 children attended "Tarzan" in nine days, as compared with an attendance of only 844 juveniles on a seven-day engagement of Mae West in "I'm No Angel." At the same time, the Mae West picture was viewed by 23,000 adults.

Other figures on child attendance in Lexington showed that in three days 1,012 children attended performances of "Mr. Skitch," Will Rogers picture, while 1,211 juveniles saw the latest Zane Grey western in one day. "The Bowery" attracted only 287 children in three days.

"Duck Soup," starring the four Marx Brothers, was attended by 1,167 children in four days' showing, but during the week's engagement of "Dinner at Eight" only 608 children were present.

Other pictures were attended as follows:

"King Kong"—1,827 children in four days.

"Son of a Sailor"—(Joe E. Brown) 1,129 in three days, but only 145 children attended "Design for Living" during its three-day engagement.

"Saturday's Millions"—(college football story) 496 in four days.

"SOS Iceberg"—296 children in three days.

"Stage Mother"—147 in two days; "Bombay Mail" (murder mystery), 105 children in two days, and "Flying Down to Rio," 563 in four days.

"Little Women"—1,432 during a five-day engagement, and "Alice in Wonderland," 1,800 in four days.

NATION'S THEATRES, BY STATES

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on July 7th, published a generalized summary of how the theatres of the country are divided according to the population of towns and also according to the seating capacities of the theatres. The figures were for the country as a whole. Presented herewith is a breakdown by states.

One of the most important revelations gained from the survey was the extent to which the motion picture industry depends on small communities for its box-office upkeep. Eleven thousand theatres of the newly-estimated total of 16,850 in the United States are in places having a population of less than 20,000 persons; 10,000 houses seat 500 or less.

Only eleven hundrew theatres of the country's total structures seat 3,000 or more, all others seating under 1,500.

Only 3,235 theatres operate in cities with populations exceeding 200,000, while 3,830 are in communities having 1,000 and fewer inhabitants.

The survey which placed the total number of theatres in the country at 16,850 did not embrace theatre buildings still standing but which have been emptied of equipment, nor did it embrace theatres which have been closed for a year or more. Inclusion of both these classes in previous estimates sent the total as high as 22,500. Although the new total is listed at 16,850, it must be borne in mind that at least 2,000 houses are always temporarily closed, which means about 14,500 theatres are now operating.

Motion pictures are projected on the screens of theatres in some 9,260 cities, towns and hamlets of the United States, as follows:

2,215 Theatres in	13 Towns Having Population of Over	500,000
1,025 Theatres in	27 Towns Having Population Between	200,000 and 500,000
778 Theatres in	53 Towns Having Population Between	100,000 and 200,000
775 Theatres in	95 Towns Having Population Between	50,000 and 100,000
1,168 Theatres in	258 Towns Having Population Between	20,000 and 50,000
1,703 Theatres in	726 Towns Having Population Between	7,500 and 20,000
1,400 Theatres in	867 Towns Having Population Between	4,000 and 7,500
1,806 Theatres in	1,464 Towns Having Population Between	2,000 and 4,000
2,149 Theatres in	2,023 Towns Having Population Between	1,000 and 2,000
3,830 Theatres in	3,734 Towns Having Population of.....	1,000 and less
16,849	9,260

Following is the listing by states, with number of theatres according to population groups. On the next page appears a list by states and theatre seating capacity.

200 TO 500 SEAT THEATRES LEAD

Theatres having capacities of between 200 and 500 far exceed in number those theatres of any other size, 8,190—almost half of the 16,849 total—accommodating between 200 and 500 persons. Seven-eighths of all of the country's theatres seat under 1,000 persons, there being about 14,500 in this classification.

On the basis of the theatres' classification according to size, the estimated absolute maximum seating capacity of the 16,849 theatres would approximate 13,370,000, in line with the tabulation in the adjoining column.

Seating Capacities	No. of Theatres
Over 3,000	110
2,000 to 3,000	346
1,500 to 2,000	621
1,000 to 1,500	1,327

Paramount Fees Reduced Further

Federal Judge John M Woolsey in New York on Tuesday made reductions in the legal fees and allowances for services in the Paramount Publix three-month equity receivership, which preceded the company's bankruptcy, in an opinion filed in U. S. district court. Proposed reductions totaled $63,000.

The original equity receivership bill aggregated $208,000, but after protests by counsel for various creditor groups, the late Referee Henry K. Davis reduced the fees and allowances sought by $40,000. Thus, including the $63,000 reduction made by Judge Woolsey this week, the Paramount receivership bill is lowered to $105,000.

Celebrity Productions hereafter will issue individual one-sheet posters on each subject of the Powers ComiColor cartoons, starting with "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp." Wellington Mack, writer of comedy pantomime for circus clowns, has been signed by P. A. Powers, president of Celebrity.

Shorts Producers Launch an Attack On Double Billing

Short subject producers this week launched what may be a major, concerted drive against double and triple featuring. The actual effect of this widespread practice on shorts producers from a standpoint of dollars and cents was revealed at a hearing in Los Angeles before the local clearance and zoning board, when more than 250 interested exhibitors, distributors and producers gathered to hear testimony in support of I. E. Chadwick against the clearance clause barring double bills. On Tuesday the board upheld the clause.

Henry Ginsberg, general manager of the Hal Roach studios, was one of the witnesses who advocated the complete abolition of duals.

Mr. Ginsberg said the Roach studios showed a decrease of over $100,000 on the general payroll and approximately $20,000 on payrolls of extras "compared to what was paid out during the heyday period of singles." In 1932, he testified, Roach carried 184 persons on its payrolls, exclusive of extras, and spent about $1,000,000 on its 40 short subjects. Extra talent was paid $61,000. In 1933, $807,000 was spent for 40 short subjects, with 169 regular employees, and $44,000 paid to extras. "In the current year, Roach has reduced its short subject output to 32, all brought about by the dual bill system," Mr. Ginsberg said.

At Asbury Park, N. J., Allied of New Jersey voted almost unanimously to drop double bills. Conferences are being held with Warner representatives.

More than 87 per cent of Oregon exhibitors this week were reported opposed to double bills. This is expected to increase to 95 per cent, according to the Portland clearance board, before complete elimination is effected.

Fox Metropolitan Sale Again Halted

Further retarding the efforts of Loew's, Inc., and Warner Bros. to acquire the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, a petition was filed in U. S. district court, New York, on Monday by a minority bondholders' group asking the right to examine members of the circuit's bondholders' committee and representatives of Loew's and Warner to determine the value of Fox Metropolitan assets. This is their second petition within two weeks, the first on reorganization.

Those whom the petitioners ask leave to examine are: Nicholas M. Schenck, J. Robert Rubin and Leopold Friedman of Loew's; Harry M. Warner, Albert W. Warner, Joseph Bernhard and Abel Cary Thomas, all of Warner Bros.; A. C. Blumenthal and his counsel, Saul E. Rogers; Irving Trust Co., receiver for Fox Metropolitan; William Atkinson, administrator for the receiver; Si Fabian, former Fox Metropolitan officer; Joseph W. Dixon, Max Horwitz, Ernest Niver, William M. Greve and Alvin J. Schlosser, members of the Fox Metropolitan bondholders' committee; Warner Marshall, Jr., former secretary of the committee, and Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., depositary for the committee.

RECAPITALIZING PLAN FOR PATHE EXCHANGE

Webb Explains Proposal for Conversion of Class "A" and Common to One Issue

Stuart W. Webb, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., last week announced a plan of recapitalization which is designed to simplify the corporation's capital structure, eliminate its current operating deficit, clear up all accruals on its preferred and Class "A" preference stock and place the company in a position to pay dividends out of future earnings.

Class "A" and common stock will, under the plan, be converted into a single class of new common stock, Mr. Webb explained, while each share of 8 per cent preferred stock will be changed into one share of new 7 per cent convertible stock and five shares of new common.

Holders of outstanding shares of Class "A" preference stock will be entitled to receive, for each share held, two shares of new common stock, while holders of outstanding shares of common will be entitled to receive 1-20th of a share of new common for each share of outstanding common.

Collateral Trust Notes Planned

An issue of collateral trust notes, convertible into the new common stock on the basis of $20 principal amount for each share of new stock, will be authorized, and these notes may, in the discretion of the directors, be used from time to time to retire all or any part of the 7 per cent sinking fund gold debentures, of which there are at the present time approximately $2,000,000 principal amount outstanding, and to provide working capital for corporate purposes.

Mr. Webb said that, under the existing set-up, the board of directors had been endeavoring to work out some plan which would be equitable to all classes of security holders, but that to date the chances were remote for holders to receive anything by way of dividends over a long period of time. He pointed out that, in addition to an operating deficit, there are accruals of unpaid dividends on the 8 per cent preferred stock of more than $400,000 and on the Class "A" preference stock of over $6,000,000.

"Under the proposed plan," he said "all of the accruals are to be cleared up, and the Class 'A' preference stock eliminated, so that no further current dividends will accrue with respect to this class of stock, leaving the only dividends payable prior to the new common stock approximately $56,000 per annum on the new 7 per cent convertible preferred stock. Thus, the new common stock will be in a favorable position with respect to prospects of dividends when and as earnings are available therefor.

Large Prior Claims

"The present common stock which is in such an unfavorable position with respect to possibility of payment of dividends is likewise preceded by large prior claims with respect to distribution of assets. In addition to the prior position of the 8 per cent preferred stock, the Class 'A' preference stock is entitled to receive in the aggregate a total of over $12,000,000 no involuntary liquidation and over $18,000,000 on voluntary liquidation prior to any distribution to the present common stockholders.

"Accordingly, it would appear that the present common stock, which is to receive over 8 per cent of the total number of shares of new common stock distributable to holders of Class 'A' preference and common stock, will be in a more favorable position than at the present time. On the other hand, the holders of the Class 'A' preference stock, who at the present time occupy a position so much superior to that of the common stock as to render the value of the present common stock practically negligible, will, through the elimination of the operating deficit and other features of the plan, obtain advantages which justify the concession made to the common stockholders."

Mr. Webb declared the possibility of being able to issue and sell convertible notes will place the company in a position to raise capital for expansion projects which may be carried out in the future.

Block Booking No Evil, Says Laemmle

Declaring that "block booking is the only sales plan which keeps the industry alive," Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, in a "Straight from the Shoulder" article in the current issue of Universal Weekly, made a vigorous defense of the block sales policy, insisting it is not an evil but an economic necessity.

"Under block booking you buy the good with the bad, and you know it in advance," he said.

"You must be assured of enough pictures to run your theatre," he continued. "So you as well as the producers, are responsible for block booking—and you never need to apologize about it to anyone.

"You decide what producer you have confidence in. You say to yourself, 'This producer has made money for me. He cannot click 100 per cent but his average is good. I will buy his product, knowing that some of his pictures will be strong and some weak, but on the whole I can make a profit.'

"If it were not for block booking, and if you had to buy one picture at a time you would be on uneasy street all year."

N. Y. Bill Would Censor Child Films

A special censorship for motion picture films which are to be exhibited to children under 16 years is proposed in a bill introduced into the special session of New York state legislature at Albany by Assemblyman Charles H. Breitbart, Democrat, of Brooklyn.

The bill, which would amend sections of the education law and the penal law, provides penalties for the manager, doorkeeper and ticket seller of a theatre where any child is admitted to witness a picture that has not passed the special censorship.

Warner Names Smithkin

Albert Smithkin, former Warner Indianapolis branch manager, has been transferred to Cincinnati, succeeding Maurice White, who recently resigned to enter exhibition.

'Of Human Bondage' One of Best, Hickman Says

BY WALTER D. HICKMAN

ONE of the smash movie hits of the year is W. Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage."

Here is one of the most sensitive movies—depicting one man's struggle to free himself from a bondage of selfish love—that the screen ever has revealed.

"Of Human Bondage" is a masterpiece and has the right to that honor, the same as the Maugham romance, which is one of the most widely read books ever written. In the hands of Leslie Howard, the sensitive, fine and beauty loving soul of Philip Carey, a club-foot medical student, is revealed in all of its fine and sentive beauty.

Mr. Howard

If there ever has been a "soul" performance photographed upon the screen, then this work of Mr. Howard is that one. I am putting Mr. Howard's Philip Carey in my own hall of fame. I am sure this is one of the ten best performances on the screen that I have seen. Philip loved Mildred (Bette Davis), a waitress with a cheap mind and even a cheaper body, with so much devotion that in his imagination he made a lovely goddess out of this mess of human clay.

Handicapped as he was with a deformed foot which never touched the loveliness of his soul and disposition, Philip lived in his false dream of the "beauty" that Mildred did not possess.

He even did this when she destroyed him financially, abused his pride and nearly ruined his finer sensitiveness. Watch the scene when Mildred attempts to use her physical charms on Philip. Watch Miss Davis reach dramatic heights of fierce intensity which I never suspicioned she possessed.

Watch Howard feebly try to hang on to the vision he had created as a sweetheart. It is magnificent acting on part of both players.

HERE is the first great acting that Miss Davis has given the screen. Here character is one of ugliness and utter selfishness.

She destroys herself and although she nearly wrecks the sensitive soul of Philip, she is defeated.

Two other women figure in the life of Philip. They are Sally, (Frances Dee) and Nora (Kay Johnson). Both performances, although different in characterization, are perfect performances.

Take time to watch the splendid acting of Reginald Owen as the father of Sally. Here is work that you will want to remember.

There is not a weak member in this great cast. Please take time and watch the work of John Cromwell, the director, and see how he has put over the club-foot deformity of Philip. Here is sensitive direction that actually [illegible] the eye.

We are demanding fine stories, fine acting and intelligent direction. Then if we are in earnest then our duty is clearly to see this masterpiece.

Of all the movies I have [illegible] I had [illegible] saw "Of Human Bondage." Now this one is my seventh.

Now at the Circle.

"OF HUMAN BONDAGE" is but one of many fine attractions RKO-RADIO has delivered this hot summer when you needed big shows and good shows . . . and there's still another big one coming

J. J. Franklin Plans Circuit in Hawaii

J. J. Franklin, operating under the name Franklin Theatrical Enterprises of Los Angeles, plans the construction of a circuit of theatres in Hawaii, a territory now controlled by Consolidated Amusements, in which the late Louis Greenfield was a chief figure and owner of a half-interest. Consolidated shows product in its theatres on the island and sells it to government reservations and sugar plantations as well. ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

IN THE CENTER of the production circle in Los Angeles one Stephen Dexter has launched a most unusual enterprise, that of determining the blood line of inheritance—at so much per determination—in order to establish distant heirs to dormant estates. One method employed by Mr. Dexter is the Major Family Clan Campaign. All people belonging to the same family name are grouped together. Whenever Dexter hears of undistributed estates, dormant bank accounts, undisturbed property and the like, he circularies each member of the Clansman group of that name. The first six clans to be established are of the names of Smith, Brown, Jones, Johnson, Campbell and Cook.

One strange will discovered by Mr. Dexter was left by Meinheer Van Kole, an inveterate smoker, who directed that his casket be lined with old cigar boxes, that his favorite meerschaum pipe be inclosed and that friends attending the wake be supplied with two pipes and a package of tobacco. His friends were further instructed to smoke steadily throughout the services. This they did, with the result, so the story goes, that smoke became so dense that it was necessary to blow a horn at the door of the house so the mourners could find their way outside.

Another strange will was written by a New Yorker who directed his executor to sell at auction 71 pairs of pants he had owned, without their being inspected and only one pair to a person. His wishes were carried out, and in each pair was found $1,000 sewn in a cuff.

Professional claim lawyers, warned Dexter, have for years been receiving thousands in fees from the gullible who believe that they are heirs to phantom estates supposed to be worth altogether more than $5,195,000,000.

Digressing for a moment from the routine of publicizing motion pictures, Paramount's home office division of press agentry enlightens us with the story about a visitor's tour of the Hollywood studio. "See!" whispered the studio guide, pointing to Mary Boland sitting diligently knitting a sweater between scenes, "Miss Boland isn't only a good actress—she crochets, too."

"Knits to you," chirped demure little Mary.

Probably the most important reason why Hollywood so greatly admired the late Marie Dressler was that she gained success after forty with no help from the beauty parlor.

Of all the great and famous who have visited the Roosevelts at the White House, Miss Dressler was the only one the servants made so bold as to ask to see. When word filtered downstairs last year, during the troublesome code drafting proceedings, that she was in the house, a council was held and a representative of the house staff was elected to send word to Mrs. Roosevelt that they would like to see the actress if it could possibly be arranged. It was.

Miss Dressler went downstairs and chatted, told jokes and sang. It was one of her most successful public appearances.

The President appointed but two of Hollywood's horde of professionals to membership on the motion picture Code Authority. One was Eddie Cantor, the other Marie Dressler. There have been suspicions that Mr. Cantor talked himself into his appointment. Not so with Miss Dressler.

Affiliated and independent exhibitor interests assembled in New York on Monday to devise ways and means of jointly combatting the plan of the American Society of Composers to effect a large increase in the annual fee charged exhibitors for reproducing in their theatres the music of Society members. The first decision made was to engage the Society in litigation over the proposed increase. Accordingly, a staff of circuit and exhibitor counsel was organized, consisting of the attorneys of all of the large companies and those of exhibitor organizations. It is a mutual arrangement. Ed Levy will fight for the MPTOA, Abram Myers for Allied and Milton Wiseman will represent the Independent Theatre Owners of New York.

During the proceedings, and after all other organizations had placed the services of their counsel at the disposal of the committee, someone asked Charles L. O'Reilly, head of the New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, if they could count on the TOCC counsel.

"Well," drawled Mr. O'Reilly, "I don't know. I've been studying this thing while here and I guess you'd better not depend on our lawyer."

"Who is your lawyer?" asked an exhibitor.

"Burkan—Nathan Burkan," replied Charlie.

And the conversation ended there, because Mr. Burkan also represents the American Society of Composers and will probably defend the Society in the threatening fight with the exhibitors.

From the busy little broadway cubbyhole office of young Al Sherman, Mascot Pictures' purveyor of press publicity, comes a bit of the drama of Hollywood in the following announcement that Erich von Stroheim has finally landed a job:

> "After indulging in the great Hollywood sport of 'Number, number, what will my future be?" the saturnine Herr von Stroheim changed his first name to read 'Erich', and immediately landed a job with Mascot as the villain in 'Crimson Romance'."

Mr. von Stroheim, still under 50, was born Oswald Hans Carl Maria von Nordenwall. He directed "Foolish Wives" and "The Merry-Go-Round" during his five-year association with Mr. Laemmle's Universal company, and made "The Wedding March" for Pat Powers and Famous Players, and "Greed" and "Merry Widow" for Samuel Goldwyn.

The distinguished monocle-wearing Viennese, holder of the Franz Joseph Cross and the Annexation Medal awarded for bravery in battle during the Bosnian Campaign, was selected in 1926 by the critics of the country as the best motion picture director of the year. But he was a boon to the raw stock manufacturers, using to film one feature more negative than would be required to produce a half-dozen.

Newsreel editors who gave so much space recently to the Dionne quintuplets born in Quebec, Canada, might investigate the birth in China of octuplets—seven boys and one girl, born to the wife of Sam Ting, a poor Chinese boatman, on his fishing junk located in the Pearl River delta. The mother and eight children were reported in good health two months after the birth.

TO JAKE SCHREIBER, owner and operator of seven main street Detroit motion picture theatres, catering to the all-night trade, goes the prize of the year for enterprising showmanship.

Jake was in Chicago on the Sunday night when the fugitive Dillinger was shot dead by federal agents. When Jake heard the news while resting in his hotel suite near the Loop he immediately began pondering over the possibilities of a sensational Dillinger display for his Colonial theatre lobby. Bolting for a taxicab he sped to the scene of the killing in front of the Biograph theatre on the northside, where with pickax and shovel he became busily engaged in the manual labor of digging. When he was rudely interrupted by the Chicago police force for an explanation he told them he wanted a piece of the sidewalk on which Dillinger had fallen, together with the evidence of the fugitive's freshly spilt blood, to place in his Colonial theatre lobby back home.

Jake did not get the piece of the sidewalk, but he did get a piece of a police sergeant's mind and a piece of page one of the Chicago Tribune.

The reason why Universal Pictures did not pay the $5,000 which it offered as a reward for the capture of John Dillinger is because the informers did not meet the requirements of the offer. One stipulation was that information leading to his capture or arrest be transmitted to Universal Newsreel, and this was not done, the "girl in the red dress" who was reputed to have informed the federal men having dealt directly with the authorities. She should have been a technicolor job, anyway.

It serves "Red" right.

Mr. Kann immediately left New York for the quiet and salt air of Monhegan Island in the Atlantic off the Maine coast, to recuperate.

CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

NOS. 53 - 54 — "BANK NIGHTS"; DESCRIPTION, LEGALITY, POWER OF LOCAL BOARDS

Exhibitors everywhere have been writing to the Code Question Box in recent weeks for information concerning the merchandising theatre practice known as "Bank Nights." There appears to be much confusion over the legality of the practice under the code. Too, there exists no little doubt as to the exact definition and description of the stunt. From these letters there have been culled a various assortment of questions which are answered and points which are explained as follows:

NUMBER 53—In the issue of Motion Picture Herald dated May 26th, under Question Number 30 of the Code Question Box, an explanation was given of a certain type of "Bank Night," as follows: "An arrangement is made with the local merchants whereby they distribute to their customers imitation money, and at the theatre on the designated "Bank Night" the patrons bid on various articles, which articles are usually contributed by the merchants. The customer having the most imitation money would obviously be in a position to outbid any others."

This explanation evidently differs from the type of "Bank Nights" used generally. However, it was obtained from people who have been using that type of stunt in the east. Following is a discription of the "Bank Night" stunt that has been copyrighted, trade-marked and patented by Affiliated Enterprises, Inc. and which is in general use:

Affiliated Enterprises enters into a contract with an exhibitor, for a sum of money (weekly fee, or a percentage of the gross receipts), and furnishes the theatre with register books, trailers and other paraphernalia. On a designated night of the week the theatre itself offers a prize of some specific amount of money and the drawing thereof, as a rule, takes place at about nine o'clock in the evening. Registration by the patron is said to be absolutely free and is further described as follows:

In Register Number 1, persons, patrons, over the age of 16 years, may register by signing their names and addresses, and opposite each name space is a number, in regular order from number one up. Register Number 2 is provided by Affiliated, in which there are placed, in alphabetical order, the names appearing numerically in Register Number 1. Set opposite each name in the second register is the number corresponding to the number opposite the respective name in the first register. This system of registration is provided in order to eliminate any duplicate registration.

Register Number 1 is placed in or near the entrance or exit of the theatre or, it may be placed at some other convenient place. Each person when registering places the prefix of "Mr.," "Mrs." or "Miss" before the name, and no one shall be allowed to register more than once.

A bank is chosen by the exhibitor, wherein a certain designated amount of money is deposited by him for each week of the stunt. The name of said bank shall be exhibited over Register Number 1, and the name of the bank may be used in all advertising pertaining thereto.

It is distinctly provided that no additional sum or compensation shall be added to the regular admission to such theatre by reason of the stunt, and, according to Affiliated Enterprises, "the purpose of the system shall be for advertising only."

At a certain time or times fixed by the exhibitor, the numbers corresponding to those set opposite the names in Register Number 1, are placed in a box, from which is chosen or selected one number; and in the event the person, whose name is written in Register Number 1 opposite the number so chosen from the box, shall be present in that theatre, or on the outside, without a paid admission, or appears at the box-office to claim the award, he shall be entitled thereto, and he shall have the right to go into the theatre without a paid admission and shall be entitled to the cash offer as though he or she were in the theatre by a paid admission at the time of the drawing; and the owner of the theatre shall immediately make available said amount to the person entitled thereto.

In the event that the individual representing such number thus chosen is not in the theatre at the time of the selection, or does not appear at the theatre and claim the award within a reasonable time after the selection, he or she shall not have or be entitled to said amount. In the latter event, the amount of said bank account shall be carried over to the next week and shall be increased by the regular designated amount. Thus the amount shall accumulate from week to week until the registration of a party is selected or chosen who claims the said amount, either by being in the theatre or on the outside, or who presents himself within a reasonable time after the selection. There will only be one number chosen each week, and, according to Affiliated, "it shall be distinctly understood that the registration shall be absolutely free and that no admission or ticket shall be required in order to register and participate in same."

NUMBER 54—Are "Bank Nights" permissible under the code? What medium is used under the code to determine their code legality?

Sol A. Rosenblatt, Division Administrator of the NRA in charge of the motion picture code, made the following approved interpretation late in May of the code clause pertaining to lotteries, premiums, cut-rate tickets and the like: "It is ruled that the provisions of Section One, Part Three, Article V-E, are deemed to include among other methods or devices therein specified which directly or indirectly lower or tend to lower announced admission prices and which are unfair to competiting exhibitors, or which deceive the public, so-called 'Bank Nights' or similar or like schemes or plans otherwise designated, if any participant therein is directly or indirectly required to purchase or otherwise acquire for value a ticket or other token of admission to the theatre when any such scheme or plan is being offered or presented."

This means that "Bank Nights" are permissible under the code only when the patron participating therein is not required directly or indirectly to purchase or otherwise acquire for value a ticket or other token of admission in order to participate in the stunt.

Because there exist different opinions as to whether the "Bank Night" plan as described earlier in this article either directly or indirectly requires a parton to purchase a ticket in order to learn that he had won the award, each Local Grievance Board has been empowered to rule on each situation in its territory that is brought to its attention for a ruling.

The matter is left entirely to the Local Grievance Board to determine whether the question of lottery is involved, lotteries being prohibited under the code. Appeals from Local Board decisions may be filed with the Code Authority.

Some idea of the confusion that has been created in the field over the "Bank Night" practice under the code may be gleaned from the fact that in Dallas the Grievance Board ruled that "Bank Nights" are not a code violation, while in Denver the Board ordered the practice discontinued, which decision was later upheld by the Code Authority. Both in Atlanta and in Des Moines the stunt received favorable decisions from the boards. Los Angeles, however, ruled against them, while Oklahoma City and St. Louis ruled that they are not violations. The Kansas City board ruled against the practice, the Kansas state attorney general said they are not a lottery and in St. Louis the board ruled in favor.

The whole point involved is whether the patron directly or indirectly must purchase a ticket to participate in the stunt. If the patron must make such a purchase, then the stunt is prohibited under the code, otherwise it may be used without violating the code. In any event, exhibitors should present their individual problem before their Local Grievance Board, which alone will decide if the stunt is permissible.

Percentage Sales At Highest: Ross

A greater number of percentage pictures have been sold during the current season than during any previous year, Harry Ross, president of Ross Checking Service, told an assemblage of branch managers of the Midwest, who met in a two-day session at the Knickerbocker Hotel, Chicago, last week.

Mr. Ross indicated that reports from 3,000 representatives over the country gave every reason for optimism concerning business conditions. The upturn has been especially marked in the past two weeks, he said.

In attendance at the meeting from the home office were: Mr. Ross, Frank Miske, auditor; D. A. Ross, director of branch operations; W. E. McKee, sales manager; C. B. Ross, production manager, and O. M. Young. Branch managers present were: H. W. Donaldson and V. Richardson, Detroit; J. E. North, St. Louis; Burt Harrington, W. I. Brown and W. G. Caldwell, Chicago; R. W. Thayer, Cincinnati; B. E. Jolley, Indianapolis; P. A. Laroche, Kansas City; H. Schiffren, Des Moines; Charles Warger, Milwaukee; D. W. Mills, St. Louis; H. O. Gleiss, Omaha, and Ray Ollinger, Washington.

Trendle Starts Booking Company

George W. Trendle, president of United Detroit Theatres, Publix affiliate, has formed United Detroit Service, Inc., which will book pictures into his own and other theatres in Detroit. Last week Mr. Trendle established the Detroit Artists' Bureau, Inc., for booking vaudeville acts into theatres and other places of amusement.

The new combination will operate in opposition to Mid-States Theatres, Inc., which is now booking nearly 100 local and state theatres.

L. H. Gardner is in charge of United Detroit Service, with Arthur Elliott, former film salesman, as his assistant. Already under arrangement with the new organization are three Charles Komer theatres, the Colony, Whittier and Redford; six Sol Krim houses, subsequents, and Julius Fischer's Plaza, also a subsequent.

Also established by Mr. Trendle is a weekly public broadcast for club women in connection with his radio station, WXYZ.

JUDGE PRIEST

Fox

Having all the earmarks of being wide popular entertainment, the commercial showmanship of this picture is evident. Its title, the lead character of 75 or more Irvin Cobb stories, published in magazine and book form, is a household word. Many of the wellknown story characters, Sarge Baby, Doc Lake, Ashby Brand, Aunt Dilsey, Senator Maydew and Jeff Poindexter are incorporated into the story. The screen play is by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti. John Ford, maker of "Arrowsmith," "The Lost Patrol," "Doctor Bull" and "The World Moves On," is the director.

Will Rogers, in a character that should fit him to a "T," has the role of Judge Priest. The supporting cast is composed of wellknown players, listing Tom Brown, Anita Louise (currently in "I Give My Love" and "DuBarry"; Henry B. Walthall (wellknown from "The Birth of a Nation" to "Viva Villa!"), David Landau (now in "As the Earth Turns"), Rochelle Hudson (with Rogers before in two pictures), Roger Imhoff (in "David Harum" and "Handy Andy"), Frank Melton (first seen in "State Fair"), Charley Grapewin, Stepin Fetchit, Berton Churchill, Brenda Fowler, Francis Ford and Hattie McDaniels.

Essentially a character portrayal, this story differs widely from the previous Rogers vehicles in that where they concentrated mainly on a topical humor, "Judge Priest" adds a sympathetic romance and strong human drama. Fundamentally it is Judge Priest, against many conflicting cross currents, fostering the course of true love. Naturally the locale and time is that made well known by the Cobb stories, a small Kentucky town and the time when Confederate veterans are nearing life's evening. Logically, exploitation and showmanship will concentrate on the title and the Rogers name, now at its box office zenith due to "David Harum" and "Handy Andy."

ROMANCE IN THE RAIN

Universal

From the word go, this is a showman's exploitation story. Potential interest creation is to be found more in what happens during the production than in story classification, cast names or title value. An original by Sig Herzig and Jay Gorney, from which Barry Trivers prepared the screen play, with additional dialogue supplied by Gladys Unger and John Weaver, with songs and music by Gorney, Don Hartman and Ed Ward, the yarn is a literal demonstration of the efficacy of high powered ballyhoo and showmanship. Direction is by Stuart Walker, who handled "Tonight Is Ours," "Eagle and the Hawk" and "Evenings For Sale."

For name purposes it offers Roger Pryor, a hit in "Moonlight and Pretzels" and now leading man in the newest Mae West picture; Heather Angel in "Berkeley Square," "Springtime For Henry" and other Fox pictures; Victor Moore, wellknown stage star; Esther Ralston, recently in "By Candlelight" and "Sadie McKee"; Paul Kaye, seen in "Easy To Love" and "Hi, Nellie"; Guinn (Big Boy) Williams and David Worth.

Motivated entirely by comedy and given the necessary romantic twist, it details the hectic experiences of an author of lurid love stories for red hot magazines. Its big entertainment and production feature, suggesting automatically the caliber and color of exploitation, is a Cinderella contest. Through this medium, with the assistance of every form of high pressure ballyhoo, the girl in the case, Heather Angel, wins the Roger Pryor promoted contest. Then comes a Prince Charming contest to be climaxed by a grand public wedding in Yankee Stadium during a big sporting event. All of this amidst much theatric excitement, leads to love for the leading pair.

Topical, colorful, its story and action readily lending themselves to unusual interest creating stunts and gags, it looks like a carnival for progressive showmen.

THE RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD

Radio

In this, while there is sure value accruing to cast names, the story itself appears to be the outstanding showmanship source. Actually it's a timely, semi-topical romantic comedy. Delving a little deeper, it's a clever satire on human hopes, ambitions and desires when great wealth is a handicap to love. In it two girls participate in a trick to test a young man's affections. The rich girl, Miriam Hopkins, changes places with her secretary to find out whether Joel McCrea, the man she loves, really loves her for her money or for herself alone. Moving through many situations, most of them gayly comic, but some tensely dramatic and all promising to be highly entertaining, it solves its own problem in an unanticipated way.

The original story and screen play were prepared by Norman Krasna, whose most recent efforts have been towards comedy, as was demonstrated by "Love, Honor and Oh, Baby." Direction is by William Seiter, who likewise has been specializing recently in this style of entertainment.

In addition to the three leads already mentioned, the cast includes Henry Stephenson, Reginald Denny, Wade Boteler and George Meeker as the most prominent supports, and Fred Howard, Herbert Bunston, Burr McIntosh, Charles Coleman and Edgar Norton in minor roles.

There is also development of a triangle romance that has an unusual showmanship value. Bringing up that "would you marry money" question it makes available a host of exploitation possibilities. All can be applied to luring the interest of both men and women. Thoughtfully analyzed, with a view to making the story itself the focal point of interest, this picture undoubtedly affords an experiment in showmanship selling that may grow in importance during the coming theatre-going season.

HAVE A HEART

MGM

Fundamentally "Have a Heart" is a "Cinderella type" story up-to-date, one in which an unusual number of showmanship potentialities is available. The original story is by B. G. DeSylva, familiar as writer of many successful song hits and for collaboration on musicals, and, by David Butler. Dialogue and continuity are by Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf, who did the dialogue on "Dancing Lady" and "Going Hollywood." In addition to active participation on the story preparation, David Butler, director of the current Will Rogers picture, "Handy Andy," is directing.

The picture marks the first starring opportunity for Jean Parker. Remembered for her part in "Little Women" and later in "Lazy River," this fact is a definite showmanship asset. James Dunn, in many Fox pictures since "Bad Girl," and most recently with Shirley Temple in "Baby, Take a Bow," has the opposite lead. Una Merkel, now in "Murder in the Private Car," Stuart Erwin, whose work in "Viva Villa" and later "The Party's Over," seems to have won for him a long deferred popularity, and Muriel Evans, a feature player in many MGM productions, are the principal supports. Others are Paul Page, Edward Brophy and Willard Robertson.

The yarn, located in New York, is a modern love story. It tells of a girl who, crippled and cast aside, fell in love with a peddler of "Have a Heart" icecream bars. With pure romance as the basic appeal, it weaves a novel skein of drama, pathos, comedy, suspense, excitement and sacrifice which eventually lead to the triumph of honesty and true love. Such elements being the essentials of popular entertainment and commercial showmanship and decidedly in line with today's standards, they require only the proper application to create patron interest.

GIFT OF GAB

Universal

As if in answer to the demand for showmanship shows, this production appears to be one that will stretch the full imagination and utilize all the ingenuity of any exploiteer. In story and production values as well as the personalities presented, it's an out and out ballyhoo feature. Built upon that entertainment quality, it requires its use to the utmost in its publicizing.

The story is an original by Jerry Walk and Phil Epstein. Adaptation is by Lou Breslow and direction is by Karl Freund.

For its feature players it offers Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart, Ruth Etting, radio and vaudeville favorite; Alice White, Victor Moore, currently in "Romance In The Rain"; Henry Armetta, Douglas Fowley, Hugh O'Connell and Sterling Holloway. Supplementing them are such noted entertainers as Phil Baker, Ethel Walters, Beale Street Boys, Graham McNamee, Downey Sisters, Gus Arnheim's Orchestra, Chester Morris, Paul Lukas, Karloff and Lugosi, June Knight and many others.

With Lowe in the leading role and the title adequately explaining the idea, the story details the experiences of Gabby Gabney, who after winning all prizes for consistent talk from babyhood to maturity and a few interludes as a barker, eases himself into a radio announcing job. With the connivance of a stooge, he becomes a super-celebrity broadcasting news sporting events and into big money, love and trouble all at once. As he parades the famous personalities before his "mike" he stages a fake interview with a transatlantic flyer very much reminiscent of the Mollison flight which loses his job for him but makes it possible for him, with the help of his lady love, a lapel "mike" and a parachute, to scoop the world on an air transport disaster.

An object lesson in super-showmanship, adaptation of only a few of the suggested angles looks to be the ideal way in which to sell it.

Now and Forever

(Paramount)

Character Drama

This is the kind of picture that any exhibitor can offer his patrons with a real confidence that it will merit their appreciation. It's a wholesome and thrilling human interest yarn, with Shirley Temple in a sympathy-drawing role. While there is definite novelty to its narrative technique, it continuously capitalizes upon theatric elements that many times have demonstrated their entertainment and box office values. It possesses assets in cast and production values establishing it as a big theatre attraction. At the same time, because of the understandable human quality of its story, its convincing portrayal of an extraordinary life situation, it is a distinctive all-family attraction. As such, its value is equal for the differing tastes of large and small theatre patronage.

Actually it's the story of a crook, but really it is the character drama, intelligently endowed with theatric realism, of a man and his motherless child. While it's emotionally tender, it's not sticky sweet; while there is a continual and actual menace of stark and tragic drama, it's not bitter or depressing. Because of the intelligent manner in which it balances the elements that provoke smiles and induce tears, its colorful situations protrayed against colorful backgrounds it brings to the screen a picture that legitimately justifies showmanship enthusiasm.

Jerry is a slick swindler. Toni is his partner in crime. After one funny job in Shanghai, they decide to split. She goes to France. He comes home to America to reclaim his daughter, Penelope (Shirley Temple) from her hard-hearted uncle Higginson. The preliminary situations are played and directed with a deft touch that set audiences in the mood for what is to follow. Then one more gold mine swindle worked on the smiling Felix and the pair are off to the Riviera to rejoin Toni. There's a delightful conflict between Toni and Penny that requires all Jerry's diplomacy to develop into friendship. There's a suggestion of menace as it develops that Felix is a super crook who permitted himself to be hooked so that he could have a finger on Jerry. There's human pathos, continually lightened by fine comedy (mainly supplied by Shirley) as the trying to go straight but poorly paid Jerry finds his meager salary totaily inadequate to finance the ambitious plans he has for his child.

The situation leads him to contact with Felix on a jewel robbery with the dowager Mrs. Crane, who has taken a shine to Penny, as the victim. There's a robbery at a children's party. Jerry hides the jewels in her Teddy Bear doll. Bravely Jerry tries to lie himself out. When Penny holds him to their "honor bright" truth-telling compact, he breaks down, attempts to return the gems, is forced to kill Felix and is himself fatally wounded. Only one thing matters as Jerry knows his life is ebbing fast. He returns the necklace to Mrs. Crane. That his child's future may be secure, he permits the eccentric but kind old woman to adopt her. Dying, as the auto in which he is riding keeps pace with the train bearing the child away, the climax is stark tragedy as Toni drives the car over an embankment to destruction.

Despite the weakness of title which conveys practically no cue as to the character of the story, there is plenty of potential showmanship in "Now and Forever." Little need be said of the cast. As far as Shirley Temple is concerned, the mere publication of her name is now apparently enough to create much interest. But you can promise a very different Gary Cooper, and the others—Carole Lombard, Guy Standing and Gilbert Emery—are well known. Charlotte Granville is new, of course. Then there's the story, in which there are plenty of tears, but just as many smiles to banish those tears. Together they afford a combination to repay smart showmanship.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Cat's Paw

(Fox - Harold Lloyd)

Comedy

This an entirely different type of Harold Lloyd comedy. There's little of that old harum scarum thrill until the climatic sequence. In its place, however, and none the less commercially and entertainingly valuable, is a wholesome straightaway comedy story; acted, presented and moving in the unique motif of its theme. Through its unusual premise, its fantastic comedy, drama, romance, intrigue, topical graft-political atmosphere, nevertheless, there is an unmissable thrill that is practically certain to catch popular fancy. It's all-audience entertainment, affording something special for each age from the kids up to grandmas and grandpas.

It calls for a different kind of showmanship in its direct marketing. The story from which it was adapted is a recent feature of The Saturday Evening Post, the readers of which constitute a large potential audience. While it closely follows the theme of the published story, it eliminates all the situations therein which might have proved bothersome. Fundamentally it vividly depicts the experiences of a young American, brought up in China to be a missionary and consequently inculcated with Chinese ethics and philosophy, who unwillingly is whirled into a whirlpool of graft and gang-crime-ridden American politics. The unrealism of the whole idea is its entertainment and showmanship realism.

The elements that are entertaining and salable in "The Cat's Paw" are: the comedy and drama of this boy in a land strange to him but familiar to all, who picked up off a curb stone and amidst all the hectic hullabaloo of a high pressure political campaign is made the "reform" mayor overnight; there's comedy in his bewildered romantic meanderings made poignant by the topical wisecrackings of the cigar-counter girl to whom he attaches himself; there's an alluring thrill, as the graft hungry gang, even the man who made him mayor, try to sway him from his avowed intention of doing his sworn duty and cleaning up the town; the menace of threats, of a voluptuous girl lure that finally puts him behind the eight ball but out of which emerges the final dramatic thrill, as, in a dragnet roundup, he herds all the riff-raff criminals from high and low places into the dungeon of his Chinese friend and by the application of weird Oriental torture wrings confessions from them all.

Audiences will live, laugh and sympathize with the odd Ezekiel Cobb of this picture. To win many new patrons and recapture the old, let them know the character and entertainment value of this picture, by assuring substantial entertainment in which the unusual humanness of the story is accentuated, by letting the folk know that while they laugh with and at this funny Ezekiel Cobb, they'll fight his fight with him, that his hopes will be their hopes and his serio-tragedies theirs.

The quality of the production makes it easy to emphasize again that familiar, well loved, clean and laugh-provoking Lloyd personality that has proved so potent at the box office.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

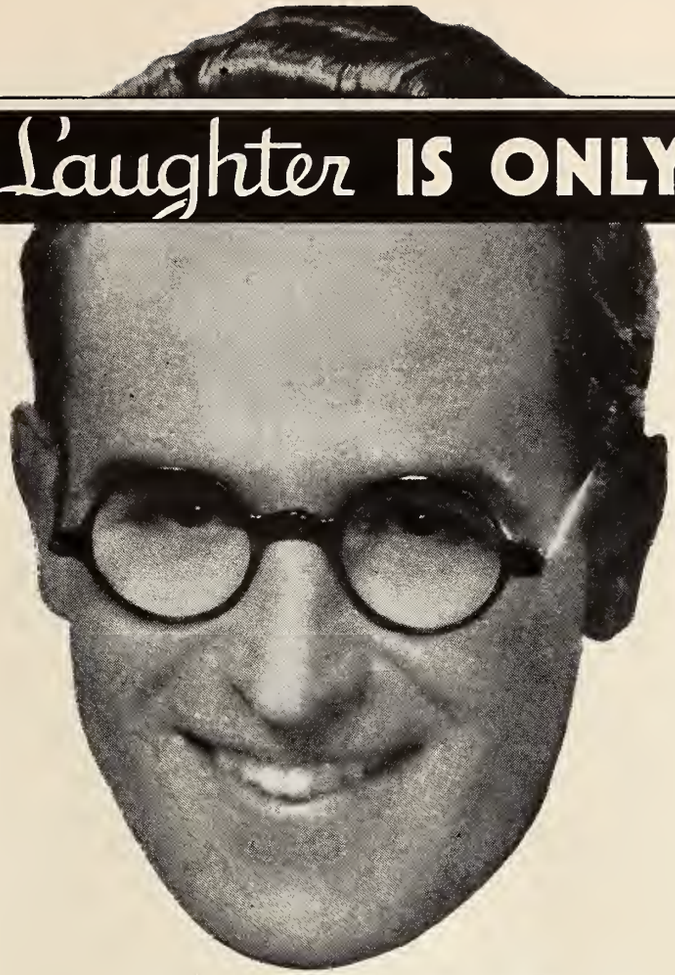
The Barretts of Wimpole Street



(MGM)

Romantic Drama

Analysis of this picture indicates it to be one of the outstanding entertainment and showmanship values to reach the screen in years. Only the most cursory examination is necessary to consolidate that opinion. "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is a fine love story—tender, humanly real, and playing upon the most sympathetic emotions. That's its basic entertainment. It is intelligently acted, directed and produced with a constantly evident aim to meet the most exacting standards. All fully reflect the time, thought and expense devoted to its preparation. Its entertainment is of the brand and standard equally appealing to both class and mass alike.

From a spot showmanship exploitation standpoint there are many other angles to be considered. "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" has been widely publicized and consequently is popularly familiar. As a Katharine Cornell stage play it was presented in practically every important American center. In this screen version something unique from a publicity standpoint has been achieved. It presents, in the leading roles, three Academy prize award winners, Norma Shearer, Fredric March and Charles Laughton. Previously March and Miss Shearer appeared in "Smilin' Through." The supporting cast is composed of well known players, one of whom, Maureen O'Sullivan, may prove the sensation of the picture. With these stars, this picture is almost sure to attract unsolicited newspaper and word-of-mouth publicity, consequently it is the type of attraction that should be set apart, introduced to the public with utmost ingenuity as something so different and important that it is their duty to see it, because of its values of appeal to the irregular theatre goers as well as to the regular fans.

The gloomy Victorian Barrett Home is dominated by the tyrannical, jealous father, Edward. Elizabeth, clinging to life by a slender thread, finds her only joy in writing poetry. Her writings command the attention of Robert Browning. Sympathy for her ripens into love. His determination to marry the girl brings him into conflict with Edward. Situations build to threatening dimensions fraught with danger to Elizabeth, her sister, Henrietta, and her several brothers. When danger menaces Browning, Elizabeth forgets both fear of death and her father, steals away from home, goes to a church to await marriage to Browning.

There is a danger that patrons may get the impression beforehand that "The Barretts" is highbrow and arty. True, there is a direct appeal in cast and story to the intelligentsia and socalled upper classes; nevertheless there is heart appeal to the appreciation and sympathy of the crowd you know as the shop clerks, laundry girls and truck drivers. Sell it with a technique that draws the curiosity of both classes.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by MGM. Producer, Irving G. Thalberg. Director, Sidney Franklin. Original story, Rudolf Besier. Screen play, Ernest Vajda, Claudine West. Additional dialogue, Donald Ogden Stewart. Cameraman, William Daniels. Running time, 109 minutes as seen on the Coast. Release date, to be determined.

Hell Bent for Love

(Columbia)

Drama

A lively action drama, with a popular star of this type of film, "Hell Bent for Love" provides a combination of romance and excitement. It would perhaps be well, under present circumstances, to subordinate the title in the selling of the picture. As a matter of fact, the title does not reflect the nature of the production.

With the hero out to "get" the crooked gang which forced his ouster from the state police force, and utilizing the old method of "setting a thief to catch a thief," the exhibitor has an opportunity to develop attractive copy lines in his selling. Heading the cast is the popular Tim McCoy, more often seen in a western role, who gives a forceful performance here as a determined minion of the law. Lilian Bond is in the opposite lead, Bradley Page is the villain of the piece and Lafe McKee is in a minor role.

The picture starts rapidly, with McCoy one of two motorcycle officers on the state highway pursuing a speeding car in which is Miss Bond. When a crash injures McCoy's fellow officer, McCoy obtains a warrant for the arrest of the girl, and finds her to be a singer in the night club of Page. He also discovers that she is not at all unattractive, and his discovery arouses the antagonism of Page, crook boss of the city, who warns McCoy against encroaching upon territory where he is not wanted. A motorcycle race at a police outing, which McCoy wins, provides an action interlude in the story.

A payroll holdup takes place while McCoy is on duty, and he is made the department goat, his resignation being "requested." Out to get Page and his gang, he calls together a flock of ex-underworld personages, all of whom are going straight, and all under obligation to him. One by one, they get word of Page's plans, and in turn succeed in scotching each crime or intended crime, under the direction of McCoy.

He enlists the aid of Miss Bond, who has turned from an unwilling object of Page's attentions, in order to hold her position, to a very willing ally of McCoy, with whom she has fallen in love. The showdown comes when McCoy learns Page is still trying to dispose of stolen jewelry. He frames an arrangement with Miss Bond and one of the friendly ex-crooks as pawns. They decoy Page into offering to dispose of the jewels, when McCoy and more "friends" walk in on the negotiations. Page escapes with the jewelry in his car, and McCoy, on a motorcycle, goes after him. The chase, the capture, the reinstatement of McCoy and his marriage to Miss Bond, all follow.

It is good material for the weekend action position.—Aaronson, New York.

Happy Landing

(Monogram)

Action Drama

This rapid action drama of border patrol fliers is at times heavily on the melodramatic side, but it blends its action with a touch of reasonably entertaining comedy, and romance, makes no demand on the audience and should be sold for what it is, lively, active entertainment.

In the position of the week where action is the best selling point, which is usually the weekend, outside the metropolitan districts, is the best place to spot this production. There is much for the youngsters in it, as well as for adults, and there is nothing in the slightest objectionable in the entire film.

The title may be used in the selling as significant, both of the subject matter of the narrative and the pleasant termination of the romance. In the lead is Ray Walker, who is attaining a certain popularity in this type of material, and who will be familiar by reason of his recent roles in other Monogram pictures. Opposite is Jacqueline Wells, one of the Wampas Baby Stars of 1934, and in support are such old familiar names as Noah Beery and William Farnum.

Walker and Hyram Hoover, buddies in the border patrol, are at the same time warm rivals for the hand of Miss Wells, daughter of their commander, Farnum. They disobey orders to fly to sea to meet the ship bringing her in, which is in charge of Walker's father, Beery, as captain. Comedy has its moments as they race to the girl's home, upset the colonel and vie with each other for the honor of taking her to the dance that evening. There they run across Morgan Conway, former border patrol officer who was fired for suspected complicity with smugglers, and fight with him.

When the gang, of which Conway is the boss, holds up a bank next day, Walker is circumstantially implicated, and made to fly the bandits safely across the border at the point of a gun when a fake message sends him to meet them. Unable to explain satisfactorily, he is forced to resign and takes a job as deck hand on his father's steamer. The boat is carrying a large sum of money, a Mexican company's payroll, which Conway and his gang are after. At sea a confederate holds up captain, purser, Miss Wells and Walker, and threatens that unless he is released with the payroll, the large seaplane overhead will bomb the steamer. He is disarmed, Walker dons his clothes and, with a satchel containing newspapers, boards the seaplane. Overpowered, he is forced to jump, swims ashore and is picked up by Hoover. The two go after the seaplane, and in an exciting air chase, force it to crash into the sea. Walker drops out of Hoover's plane, is picked up by the steamer's boat, and concludes his romance with Miss Wells to end the film.—Aaronson, New York.

Tomorrow's Citizens

(Atlas)

Of Interest

There is considerable general interest for the public at large in this short subject, which, produced by Atlas of Chicago, is a pictorial explanation of the operation of Mooseheart, the practically self-contained community maintained in Illinois by the Loyal Order of Moose. The manner in which the eligible children are taken as youngsters and carried through a high school graduation, in the efficient and attractive atmosphere of the place, is interestingly told. Showing in theatres with the cooperation of local lodges is understood to be planned.—Running time, 11 minutes.

At the Races

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

There are amusing spots in this, with Edgar Bergen, the well known ventriloquist, featured with his inevitable dummy. The two are at the races, and against a background of fast moving horses on the track, and the activity of the bookies and in the paddock, Bergen and his sweetheart carry on a conversation with the dummy, who, quite a conversationalist, makes most of the jokes, some of which are fair. The subject is novel.—Running time, 10 minutes.

400 at Kansas City Film Picnic, Tournament

More than 400 attended the annual Kansas City film picnic recently, which was sponsored by the Motion Picture Relief Fund and the Variety Club. Arthur Cole was general chairman and Frank Hensler, president of the Variety Club, co-chairman. Elmer C. Rhoden, Fox Midwest division manager, won first prize with low score in the golf tournament.

CODE COST ONE-HALF OF FIRST ESTIMATE

Authority's Expenditures in Six Months $70,846; Emergency Boards To Hear Field Appeals

Expenditures of the Motion Picture Code Authority for the first six months of 1934 were revealed this week to have totaled $70,846—or approximately 50 per cent of the original estimated cost.

According to Price, Waterhouse, auditors, Code Authority collections for this period aggregated $107,145. Throughout the auditors' report the economical operation was emphasized.

Total expenditures of the head office in New York, including rent of the Radio City offices and salaries for the executive secretary, John C. Flinn, and his 21 assistants, were $34,094 for the half-year period. Included in disbursements from New York, in addition to rent and salaries, are:

Transportation and hotel expenses for C. A. traveling members	$4,053
Furniture and fixtures	2,921
Office equipment	1,568
Printing	2,992
Postage	1,799
Telephone and telegraph	1,402
Office supplies	740
Salaries	16,399
Rent	1,343

Total disbursements of 32 local boards amounted to $36,752. The Hollywood offices had expenditures of $4,210, New York local boards $2,821. All other local boards were under $2,000 each.

The principal items listed under Code Authority receipts were payments by exhibitors aggregating $70,245 in first half assessments and advances from producers and distributors of $36,700 against their first half assessments.

The Code Authority this week indicated that exhibitors in any clearance and zoning territory may obtain new schedules from their local boards for the 1935-36 season when the boards reconvene next November, provided there is a sufficiently representative demand.

Twenty-three key cities have already established new zoning schedules.

The June 13 code amendment makes it optional for the Code Authority to direct the local clearance and zoning boards to confine their activities to the hearing of complaints against existing schedules or to direct them to draft new ones.

The amendment, which originated in an emergency resolution of the Authority last February designed to expedite the setting up of schedules in time for the new selling season, is as follows:

A new subsection (c) to be added to Article VI, Part I, Section 7:

(c) Local Clearance and Zoning Board, in addition to the powers and duties otherwise provided for in this Code shall, when directed so to do by the Code Authority, receive any and all protests from Motion Picture Exhibitors against any existing clearance and zoning as to their respective theatres alleging that such clearance and zoning is unreasonable in length or area. The issue raised by such protests shall be decided by the Local Clearance and Zoning Boards after notice and hearing to the parties affected and pursuant to the procedure and subject to such rights of appeal as are provided in this Article. The Code Authority may direct that the duties of the Local Clearance and Zoning Boards shall be performed and discharged by the hearing and deciding of protests as provided in this Subsection, instead of formulating schedules as provided in Article VI, Part 1, Sections 1 and 3.

The Code Authority last week passed unanimously a resolution which, if approved by the Administrator will be incorporated in the code as an amendment to Article VI, Part 2, Section 7(c), and will give the body more time for deciding appeals. The proposed amendment follows:

(c) Any party aggrieved shall have the right to appear before the Code Authority and present additional evidence. The Code Authority, after investigating the complaint or grievance and reviewing the evidence theretofore taken, and considering the additional evidence, if any, shall promptly render its decision not less than fifteen (15) days from and after the date when the parties have been fully heard on appeal, unless the Code Authority shall extend the time to render its decision, which extension shall in no event exceed thirty (30) days."

Another amendment proposed this week by the Code Authority proposes that assentors failing to pay assessments promptly will be considered code violators. Hearing of complaints on the assessments outlined last week has been extended from August 6 to August 15.

Emergency Boards To Be Set Up

Emergency boards to hear appeals from local clearance and zoning board rulings will be set up in the field by Code Authority, the idea being to expedite the settlement of troublesome clearance and zoning situations in 125 cities in 25 of the 31 local clearance and zoning board territories. George Schaefer of Paramount and Charles L. O'Reilly of the TOCC will set up the new appeals machinery and the boards will start functioning as soon as the numerous appeals from the field can be tabulated. Cleveland will be the first city in which one of these groups will function.

In the field, the following cases were settled or temporarily disposed of by the local boards:

Complaint of Minrose Amusement Corp., operating the State at Carthage, N. Y., against Schine Theatrical Co., operator of the Strand, on premature advertising, was upheld by the Albany grievance board and ordered stopped.

An overbuying complaint by James Minter, Minter Theatre, Owosso, Mich., against Butterfield's Capitol and Strand, was dismissed by the Detroit grievance board. A giveaway complaint also was upheld and the practice ordered stopped within 90 days.

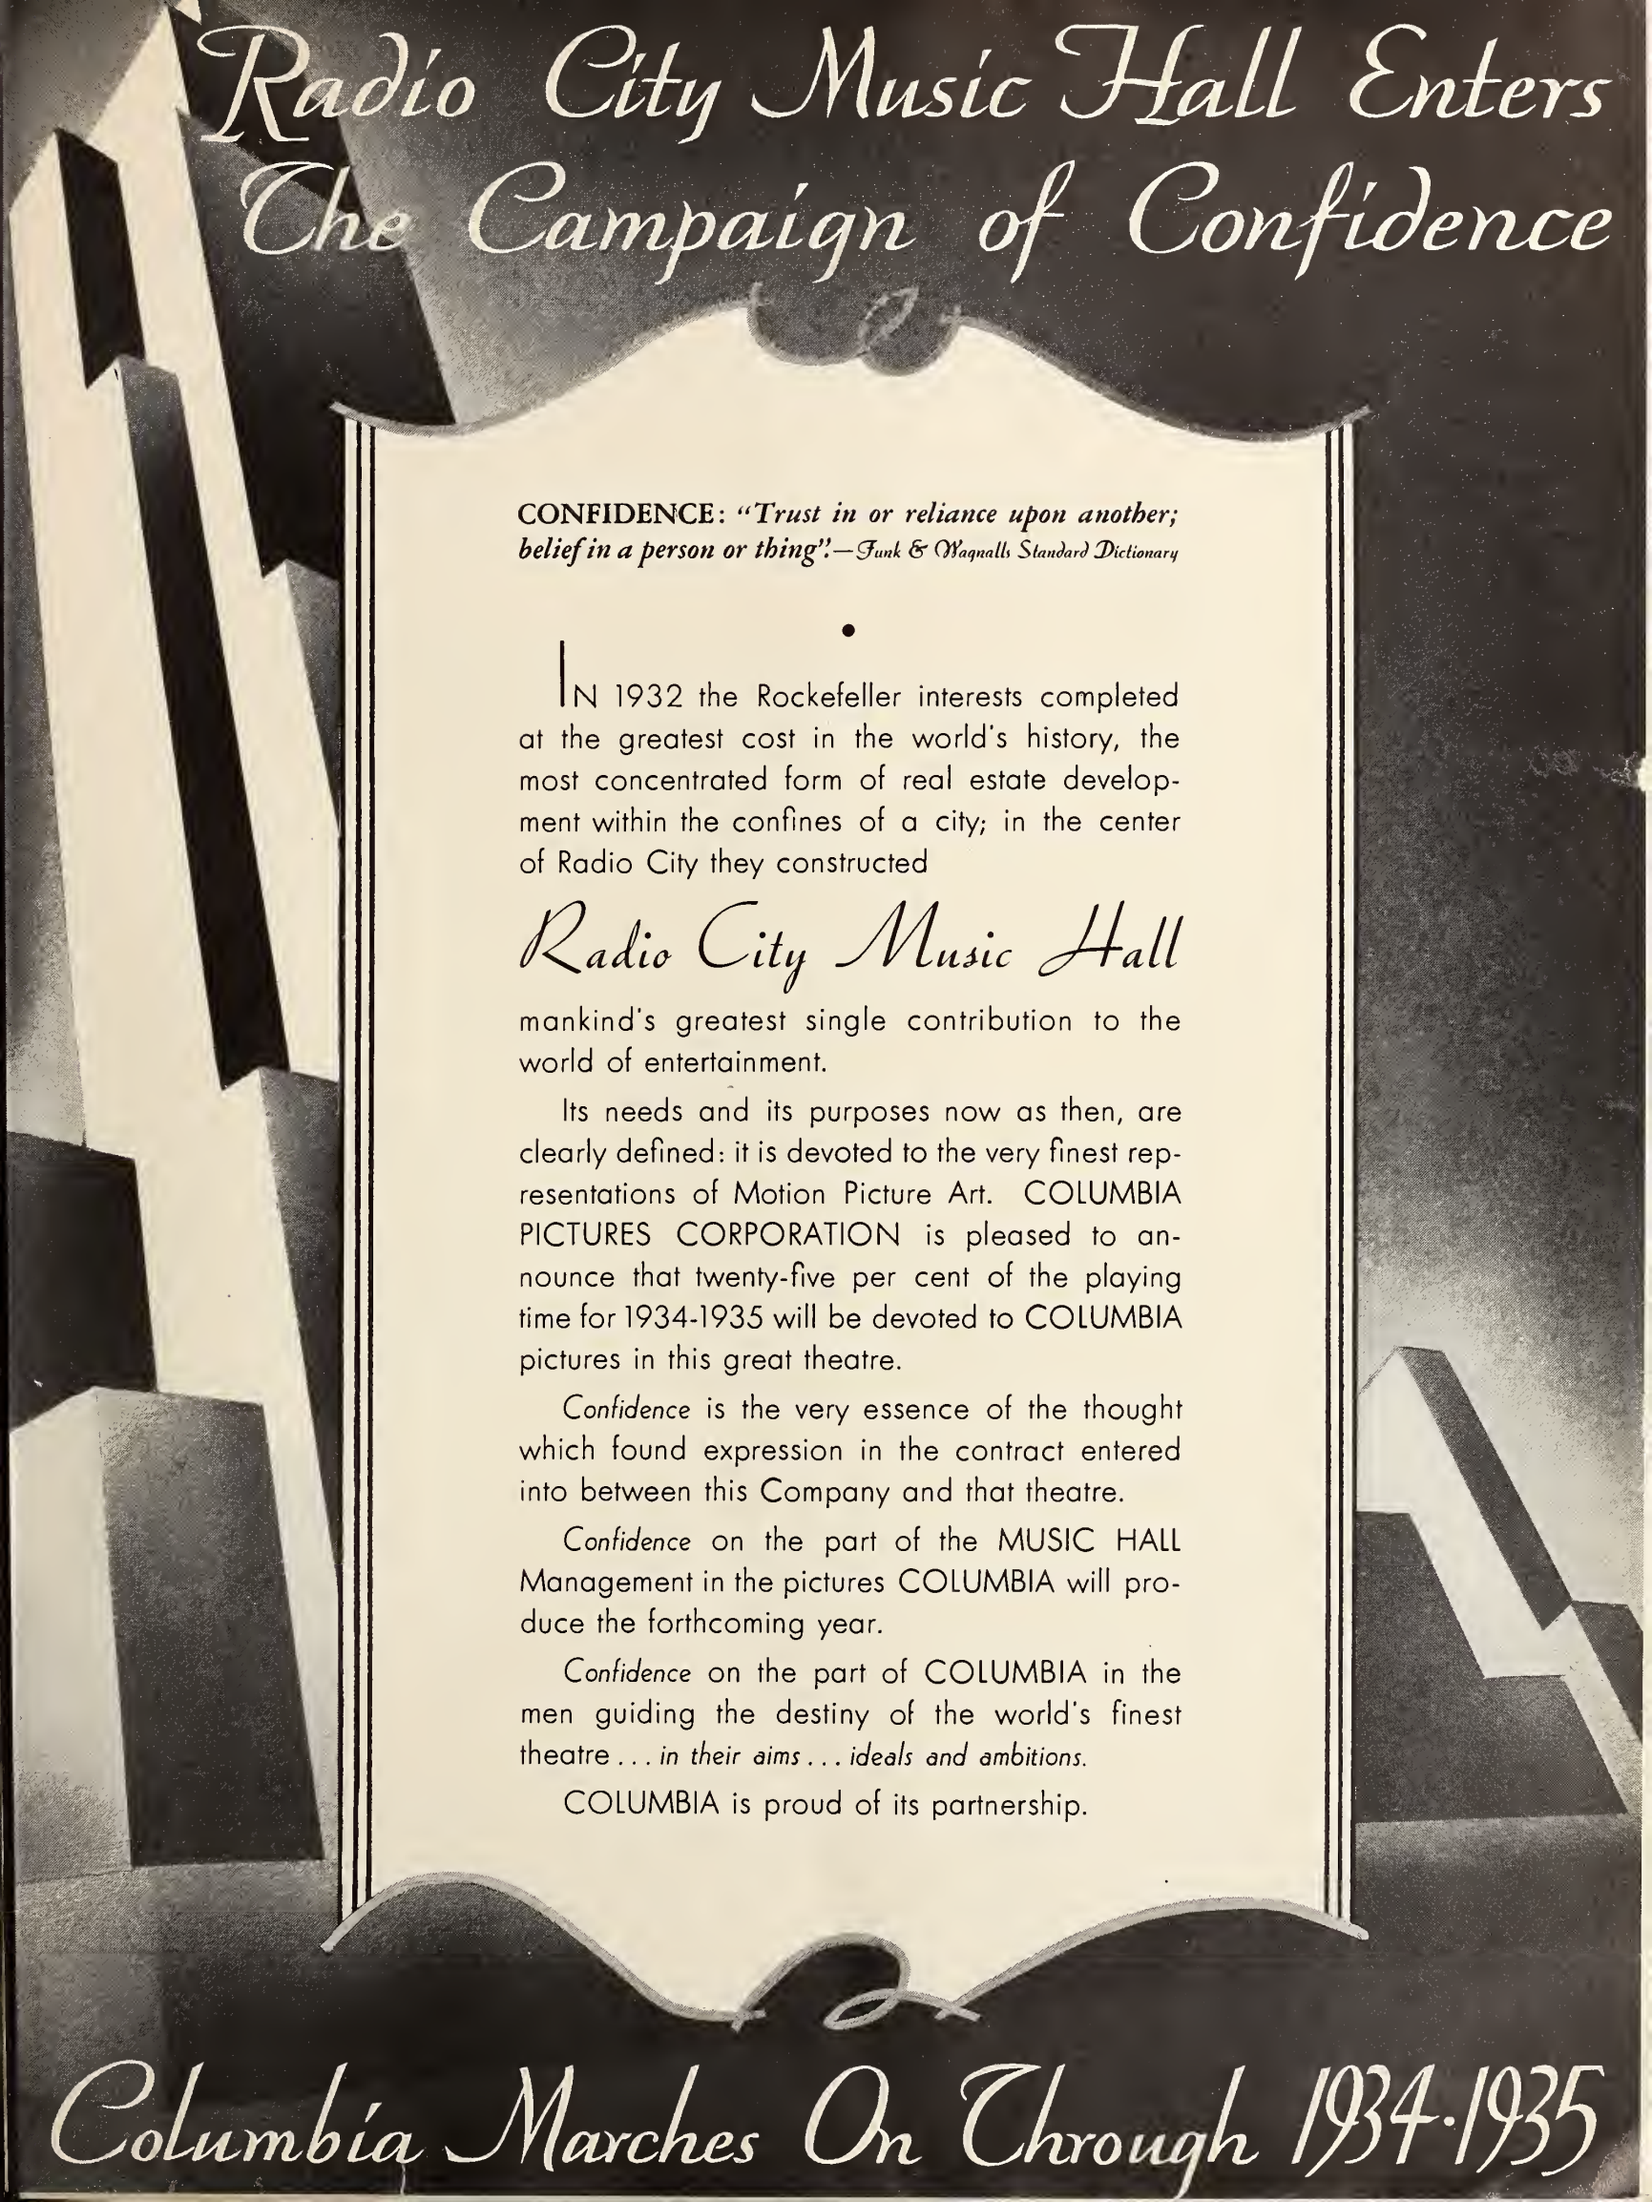
The Indianapolis grievance board, on complaint of Baxter Amusement Co., found that the St. Theresa Roman Catholic Church is operating a motion picture theatre in competition to regularly established theatres and ordered distributors to cease serving the non-theatrical account.

The Kansas City grievance board outlawed premiums when it accepted a petition containing the signatures of more than 75 per cent of the circuit and independent theatres demanding their elimination. Kansas City exhibitors also are depending upon their local board for some solution to the problem of free picture shows sponsored throughout the territory by merchants.

Free admissions to children's matinees were ordered ended by the Omaha grievance board on complaint of the Central States Corp. against the Wall theatre, operated by Scott Wall at Fremont, Neb.

Exhibitors in Saginaw voted almost unanimously to ban giveaways of dishware, silver, china and other commodities.

Buck on Radio Program



Frank Buck, wild animal hunter and producer of the RKO Van Beuren films, "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Wild Cargo," has temporarily succeeded Amos 'n' Andy on the daily Pepsodent radio program, over an NBC-WJZ network. He will dramatize a jungle adventure story based on actual experience.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended July 28, 1934, from 95 houses in 19 major cities of the country, reached $867,735, an increase of $69,503 over the total of the preceding calendar week, ended July 21, when 92 theatres in 18 cities reported an aggregate gross of $798,232.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—A box office natural that advertises itself by word of mouth of satisfied customers. Held over. Don't pass this one up; it is a life saver. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Wm. A. Cruite, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhod patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Take the fascinating Gable as a newspaper reporter, and the beautiful Colbert as the pampered darling of an indulgent father, put them on the road from Miami to New York, bus-riding, hitchhiking, and whatnot, mix well with several million inquiring people, bent upon returning the wandering daughter to her indignant "papa," and what have you got? A Swell Picture!!—or so our patrons seemed to think, and after all, that's what we're interested in, isn't it? Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 16-17.—O. T. Kirby, Palace Theatre, Roxboro, N. C. Small town patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Is it necessary to add my opinion to the best picture in years? I thought "Lady for a Day" could not be excelled in naturalness, sweetness and entertainment, but "It Happened One Night" changes all of that. Clark Gable and Claudettc Colbert absolutely swell. Some people said they never liked Gable until they saw this. Wonderful dialogue. Congratulations, Columbia, for giving us the best picture ever made on American modernism and life.—C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

LINE-UP, THE: Marian Nixon—Just like reading a dime novel, nothing to concentrate on, just sit there and let it happen. Not so bad though for a program picture, but nothing you can get out and shout about. It is a one day picture. Made a profit on this one. However, it was very, very close. Running time, 63 minutes. Played July 20.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

PARTY'S OVER: Stuart Erwin—I haven't had a picture this summer that I could hold my head up and face my audience as they came out. This one is almost up to average program fare. In dollars and cents, terrible. Took a loss. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 22-23.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

SPEED WINGS: Tim McCoy, Evalyn Knapp—A good program picture which isn't any more or any less than the previous Tim McCoy pictures. In fact, all rate about the same.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

THRILL HUNTER, THE: Buck Jones—Didn't like this one but it is all right as long as the customer is pleased. Running time, 59 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

First National

FOG OVER FRISCO: Bette Davis, Donald Wood, Margaret Lindsay—A fast moving story of the stolen bond racket, involving a millionaire's daughter. Murder, kidnaping, newspaper reporters and policemen furnish plenty of excitement. Seemed to please. Played July 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

REGISTERED NURSE: Bebe Daniels, Lyle Talbot—A fair picture. People really expected more of the picture than they received. Did a fair business. Played July 11-12.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

REGISTERED NURSE: Bebe Daniels—Just a program picture. Nothing offensive about it but nothing to make the patrons rave. Business below average. Played May 24-25.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MERRY FRINKS, THE: Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee—This is one of the funniest comedy pictures and truest to life pictures ever made. All in the cast were extra good comedians. It is clean and still funny; everyone liked it. Clean comedy is still popular; comedians that can't get a laugh without being nasty and suggestive better get out of pictures as the roughnecks walk out on their stuff, disgusted. Played July 10-11.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

MODERN HERO, A: Richard Barthelmess—A fair program picture that pleased on bargain nights. Business average. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 29-30.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

1790 Broadway, New York

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Pat O'Brien—Warner Bros. ring the bell again with another swell musical show. Pleased 100 per cent. Clean as a whistle and clever. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 24-25.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown—Not quite up to Joe's standard but it is a good, clean comedy that seemed to please. One never has to apologize for a Joe Brown picture. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown—The poorest Joe Brown picture I have played in years. They came for the first matinee and after that they went out and told everybody to stay away. Business below average. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 10-11.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WONDER BAR: All Star—Disappointed in gross and picture. Not up to "Gold Diggers," "Footlight Parade" or "42d St." First Warner musical that patrons have complained about. About broke even on a three-day run. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 15-17.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Fox

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple, Claire Trevor, James Dunn—A mighty cute little picture. Miss Temple is a fine actress. Well received; everyone liked it. Her drawing power is becoming equal to that of Marie Dressler, Will Rogers and Lionel Barrymore. The censors can't kick on this one. Played July 1-2.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—The only big thing about this picture here was the rental. It is just a fair picture for this country, spoiled by the alleged actor, Stepin Fetchit. Why inflict him on us any longer? Poor sound, poor photography, and poor business.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Small town patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—This was a good picture. But in the last reel a grandmother sits holding her grandchildren while she sucks on a cigarette. Very uplifting? Played May 27-28.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—Gaynor and Farrell re-united in a picture that pleases their old fans. Just another picture for those who are not interested in the stars. Business above average. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 18-19.—Tom Malloy, Fox Theatre, Napa, Cal. General patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—A very good drawing card here. Did a good business on a good picture. So everybody is satisfied. Played July 6-7.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—A fine picture that just did show a profit. Sound was not extra good on this subject. But clean as a hound's tooth and well liked by those that came. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S COURAGE: Warner Oland—An O. K. Charlie Chan story. Pleased our mystery-minded folks. Played July 14.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—We don't know what the other audiences think of Fox pictures, but our people like them and what's more they prove it by leaving their money at the box office. It certainly is a pleasure to show films like "David Harum" instead of foreign accent stuff, hot mammas and idle chatter. Biggest gross for a two day showing in the past year. Thank you, Fox. Played July 14-15.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

DEVIL TIGER: Kane Richmond, Marion Burns—Ran on double program. I consider it too weak for a single bill, but makes a good second picture. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 20-21.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

DEVIL TIGER: Kane Richmond, Marion Burns—Not so strong as "Bring 'Em Back Alive" but makes a good filler. Appealing to kids in particular, good educational value. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: George O'Brien—A good Western picture. Mae West and everything. Being in a farming and ranching community it held up quite well. Played July 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Cliff Edwards, Rudy Vallee—This is good entertainment for all. Not as much dancing as expected but the music is very tuneful, production lavish. It pleased our people. Glad to see Cliff Edwards given a part in a real show. Why producers do not use this entertainer more is a puzzle. Business not as good as had hoped and expected it would be. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnok, Va. Town and country patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee—This picture has everything to please the average patrons. Full of action and good singing and dancing. One of the best of the season for the usual run of fans. Played July 21.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. General patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee, Jimmie Durante—Got this one late and the physical condition was bad and on account of criticisms the "Nasty Man" number had been taken out. The entire picture was originally built around this number and with Rudy Vallee very poor in his roll and the absence of the song number it fell flat. They all asked me if I did not have guts enough to show all the picture. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 1-2.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

HEART SONG: Lilian Harvey—I advise all exhibitors to lay this on the shelf if they have it bought as it is one that makes you want to hide from your patrons upon leaving the show. The few who stayed thought it the worst they had ever seen. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 10-11.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn, Claire Trevor—Played with "Devil Tiger." A good clean picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 20-21.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

I AM SUZANNE: Lilian Harvey—Only fair. Not near so good as "My Weakness." Too long for one thing. Could have cut out some of the puppet scenes and made a better and shorter entertainment. The manager cheating the hero and heroine even to the close of the picture is not pleasant. Business below average. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 23-24.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

I AM SUZANNE: Lilian Harvey—A rather sweet picture in which a marionette show forms the background of the story. Very interesting and entertaining. Running time, 99 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers—This is excellent. We thought it the very best that Will Rogers has ever done except "State Fair." Everyone liked and enjoyed this picture. The many beautiful out-of-door scenes added much to the picture. Everything satisfactory with this one. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres,

Alice Faye—A pleasing and clean comedy drama that should satisfy almost any audience. Probably a bit hard to sell for what it is on account of the title, but worth extra effort. Business fair. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 8.—Tom Malloy, Fox Theatre, Napa, Cal. General patronage.

SPRINGTIME FOR HENRY: Otto Kruger—Springtime for Henry—a frost in springtime for us. A Jesse L. Lasky production. Need we say more.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Warner Baxter, John Boles—This picture was good in spots. Some parts were slow and draggy. Shirley Temple steals the show. Quite a few of our patrons stayed to see the song and dance number by little Shirley Temple the second time. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 17-18.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Warner Baxter, Madge Evans, John Boles, James Dunn, Shirley Temple—Advertised as the show of 1,001 surprises hut proved to be the show of 1,001 disappointments. Thumbs down. Played July 8-9-10.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Warner Baxter, Madge Evans—Rated as a special but it did not do special business in our town. More like George White's Scandals or a revue and not much of a connected story. The scene with Shirley Temple in it was the best of all. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 12-13.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

SUCH WOMEN ARE DANGEROUS: Warner Baxtex, Rosemary Ames—Just a fair program picture that we played on Bargain Night. It seemed to please most of the folks very well. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 3-4.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

THREE ON A HONEYMOON: Sally Eilers, Zasu Pitts—Quite a funny production. Just about an average comedy. It seemed to please our patrons. Played June 30.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre. Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

THREE ON A HONEYMOON: Sally Eilers, Zasu Pitts—A good comedy that seemed to please. Zasu in her usual "Oh, dear" way steals the show. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE ON A HONEYMOON: Sally Eilers, Johnny Mack Brown—A surprisingly good picture; in fact, one of the most satisfactory from every standpoint that we have played in months. Ran it on Family Night and it more than pleased a better than average attendance.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BEGGARS IN ERMINE: Lionel Atwill—Although the theme is a little improbable, that of a working man's Utopia, the action and story are excellent. Should appeal to all working men as the theme is decidedly socialistic. Rather advanced, maybe, but along their prescribed line. Well liked here. Average business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 6-7.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

BEGGARS IN ERMINE: Lionel Atwill—Here is a picture that I screened before I advertised it and I still believe that it is a good picture even though I couldn't get them to see it. Business very bad hut those who saw it liked it. Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 1.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

BROADWAY TO CHEYENNE: Rex Bell—This is a good Western picture and brought in the crowds Saturday afternoon and night and it pleased them all. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 7.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

BROKEN DREAMS: Randolph Scott—This picture is a very fine family attraction. Clean and wholesome. Played on hargain nights and the patrons well pleased with the picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 15-16.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

CITY LIMITS: Sally Blane—Good picture with good entertaining values. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 11-12.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

CITY LIMITS: Ray Walker—Just another program picture that pleased fairly well. Business slightly helow average. Some good comedy. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 19-20.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MYSTERY LINER: Noah Beery, Astrid Allyn, Cornelius Keefe—Just an average program picture. However, the plot is better than in some of the so called hig mystery pictures released by the major distrihutors.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY LINER: Noah Beery, Astrid Allyn, Cornelius Keefe—Played this on a double hill and it gave satisfaction. Interesting story and a good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

SIXTEEN FATHOMS DEEP: Sally O'Neil Creighton Chaney—Just a program picture that needs support. The story isn't had hut there were no names to hring them in. Played on hargain nights on a double bill with "Laughing at Life." Sound on hoth pictures very poor. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 5-6.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WOMAN'S MAN: Wallace Ford—A very mediocre program picture that certainly didn't please our people. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 31.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

SIX MORE SHOWMEN JOIN CONTRIBUTORS

From the West and the South this week come six new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me." Read the reports of these:

MGM

CAT AND THE FIDDLE, THE: Ramon Novarro, Jeanette MacDonald—A good musical show that was well liked. Has a good cast, some catchy tunes, hut lacks what it takes to make a good picture hecause it did not go over so hig here, and it was the same story in other houses out West. Why, I don't know, because it is good. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 4-5.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

ESKIMO: Native Cast—Strictly educational and very tiresome to the average audience. However, it is unusual enough to make it amusing to some. Over-advertised, not worth half the money and if there is never another one like it made it will be too soon. Running time, 118 minutes. Played July 3-4.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

ESKIMO: Native Cast—Educational as well as entertaining. Appeals to patrons of all ages. Nothing to offend in it. A great picture to play in warm weather; it suggests coolness. Better than average business. Running time, 110 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—Owing to the popularity of Bing Croshy and Marion Davies our business was fine. But Miss Davies drags herself through the picture like a sick kitten because she is so in love with Bing, and Bing gets drunk in the last reel hecause he is so in love with Marion, and a drunk always spoils a good show. Played April 28-29.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert—This is without douht the hest picture we have played in the past six months. Played July 7-8.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

HER SWEETHEART: Marie Dressler—Although I had heard that this picture wasn't up to some of the previous Marie Dressler pictures, I am inclined to disagree. I helieve that it is just as good as all of the others. It is just a natural. Business ahove average. Running time, 87 minutes. Played July 12-13.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: All Star—The press sheet was the higgest thing ahout this one. Cartoon in color the hest feature of the show. Laurel and Hardy do some of their usual stuff. Eddie Quillan numher OK. Possibly I was expecting too much. It has a catchy tune or two. Played July 12-13.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Jimmy Durante—Our patrons did not care for this musical as they did for other musicals we have had and our hox office receipts were not what we expected. The scene in color and the comedy furnished by Laurel and Hardy were very good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 1-2.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

LAUGHING BOY: Ramon Novarro, Lupe Velez—Absolutely the very poorest picture I've shown this season. Novarro miscast in such a picture and Velez in her part made it worse. Just one of those program pictures you'll wish you had not shown. A few more like this and these stars are through. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 26-27.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

LAZY RIVER: Jean Parker, Robert Young—We played this on a double feature the last day. We were hesitating to play this picture because of the poor reports but it was a nice, well acted picture and liked by everyone. Running time, 77 minutes. Played July 5-6-7.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable—Good picture, many favorable comments. Business above average. Played July 7.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clarke Gable, Myrna Loy—One of the most pleasing pictures shown in a long time. Gable is in his element in this picture. Also Myrna Loy is very good. However, the ending is a little distasteful, and could have heen made differently and improved the picture. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 17-18.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable—Nice pleasing picture to average business. Picture not true to life, however. For instance, can you imagine a governor of a state resigning because he had thought of doing something wrong?—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—This did a fine business for us—great show. Played June 9-10.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gahle, Myrna Loy—This is where the old matinee idol pulled them in for us. A great show to nice crowds. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery, Elizabeth Allan—A mighty good mystery picture. Interesting story and well acted. Played July 12-13.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

OPERATOR 13: Marion Davies—A good picture that pleased. Fair business in spite of 108 degree weather.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

OPERATOR 13: Gary Cooper—A very good entertainment. A good story. Acting ok. Good music score, with the Mills Brothers singing several songs. Story of the Civil War days and this type of story was welcomed by our patrons. Played July 15-16.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—We had good patronage on this MGM effort. This picture was not meant for small towns. Our patrons didn't enjoy it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 15-16.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery—Photography, settings, gowns, etc., lovely, but not generally suited for small town entertainment. Too much English accent together with some bad spots in recording, left our patrons guessing what it was all ahout. We advertised the fact "Riptide" was on the blacklist of the Federal Decency League and Council of Churches and receipts were above average. However, many were disappointed, but for different reasons. Played July 15-16-17.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—A fine picture in which they drank booze nearly every time they turned around and thought it was good. Played July 14-15.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

SHOW-OFF, THE: Madge Evans, Spencer Tracy—A fair picture that all our patrons seemed to go for. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 12-13.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

STRANGER'S RETURN: Lionel Barrymore, Miriam Hopkins—This picture is too old for me to do any good on reporting on it hut I'm going to anyway. It certainly drew and pleased almost everyone. I received a very nice print from New Orleans exchange. Running time, nine reels. Played July 20-21.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller—This picture has everything, the best action scenes ever to hit the screen. Step on the advertising. It is worth it.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—A wonderful picture to excellent patronage. Played June 24-25.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

THIN MAN, THE: Myrna Loy, William Powell—A very clever entertainment. Both Powell and Loy show that they can handle comedy roles and I believe their playing roles of this type would be welcomed by the customers. The whole cast is good. The picture follows the story, will please all classes. Quite a bit of drinking and a shady crack or two, but they are done in a manner that isn't offensive. Played July 8-9.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN: Lionel Barrymore, Fay Bainter—Played this Wednesday-Thursday but deserves a Sunday booking in any theatre.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN: Lionel Barrymore—Played this June 22-23 with a double feature. Didn't give much satisfaction, although Lionel Barrymore pleases everyone. Played June 21-22-23.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery—This was another surprise. My public don't like such plays and as a percentage picture it was a flop. Running time, 112 minutes. Played July 13-14-15.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery, Fay Wray—A great picture, one of the biggest we ever played, but a terrible box-office flop. I can't understand it, as this star has always been a good drawing card here in any picture, but this one did not hit. Business is very poor on all of them now but we did expect better results on this one. It's a grand entertainment. Played July 15-16.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo—Hats off to Metro for another great picture and one of the greatest thrillers ever produced by any producer. It is entirely different from anything before and will hold audience interest from beginning to finish. It is a drama portraying the career of Pancho Villa's entire life and should prove one of the year's best pictures. Wallace Beery turns in the greatest role of his career and the swell supporting cast handle their roles superbly. It will not appeal to the women due to the fact that it is rather cruel in some scenes. However, if you want thrilling entertainment, here it is. Except for the few sexy scenes in this, it is excellent entertainment for the whole family and the kids are not likely to understand that. Would do better on any other day of the week. Business fair. Running time, 115 minutes. Played July 7.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING: May Robson, Jean Parker—They don't make any better entertainment than this picture. It gave 100 per cent satisfaction to all we got to see it. I call it better than most of the socalled specials and it is clean entertainment. Played July 17-18.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING: May Robson—Here is one clean show—no booze, no bad talk—just good entertainment. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 18-19.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

Paramount

ALL OF ME: Fredric March—This is an exceptionally good picture but didn't draw any extra business.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft, Carole Lombard—This one flopped completely at the box-office and gave our few patrons very little satisfaction. This town doesn't go for this kind of picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft—A very good dancing picture, gave satisfaction all the way through. Business was a little better than average. Running time, 81 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

COME ON MARINES: Richard Arlen—A good picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 28-29.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

COME ON, MARINES: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino, Roscoe Karns—A fair program picture. Up to this time Roscoe Karns has been put in very minor parts. He showed lots of ability and should draw reasonably well in the future. Did a good business on this picture. Of course, the date helped (July Fourth). Played July 4-5.—Max B. Horn, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March—This picture held my audience, although some of them did not care for it. Played July 5-6-7.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

DESIGN FOR LIVING: Fredric March, Gary Cooper, Miriam Hopkins—"Design for killing business" is much more correct. This is the reason why there is war on unclean pictures. No picture can be good entertainment built upon such an immoral foundation no matter how well the players may do their parts. Most unsatisfactory from every angle. Business low. Sorry I ran this "special." Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

DOUBLE DOOR: Mary Morris—A very well done horror picture that pleased fairly well. Business about average. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 10-11.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

DOUBLE DOOR: Mary Morris, Evelyn Venable, Guy Standing, Kent Taylor—Advertised as the play that shocked Broadway, it was that all right. Marvelous acting by Mary Morris but it was a shock at the box office. There was not a single comedy relief in the picture. A crafty characterization of a vindictive old woman, scheming, plotting all the way through the picture. Not very good entertainment. Just one actress in character role. Taylor and Venable supply the romance that must go with all pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DOUBLE DOOR: Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor—Fairly good program picture that has no pull at all. With all the good stories and material why waste time and effort making a thing like this to kill your playing time with? If you can take in film rental you'll do very well on this one. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 5-6.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

GOOD DAME: Sylvia Sidney, Fredric March—A fair picture to poor crowd. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 10-11.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

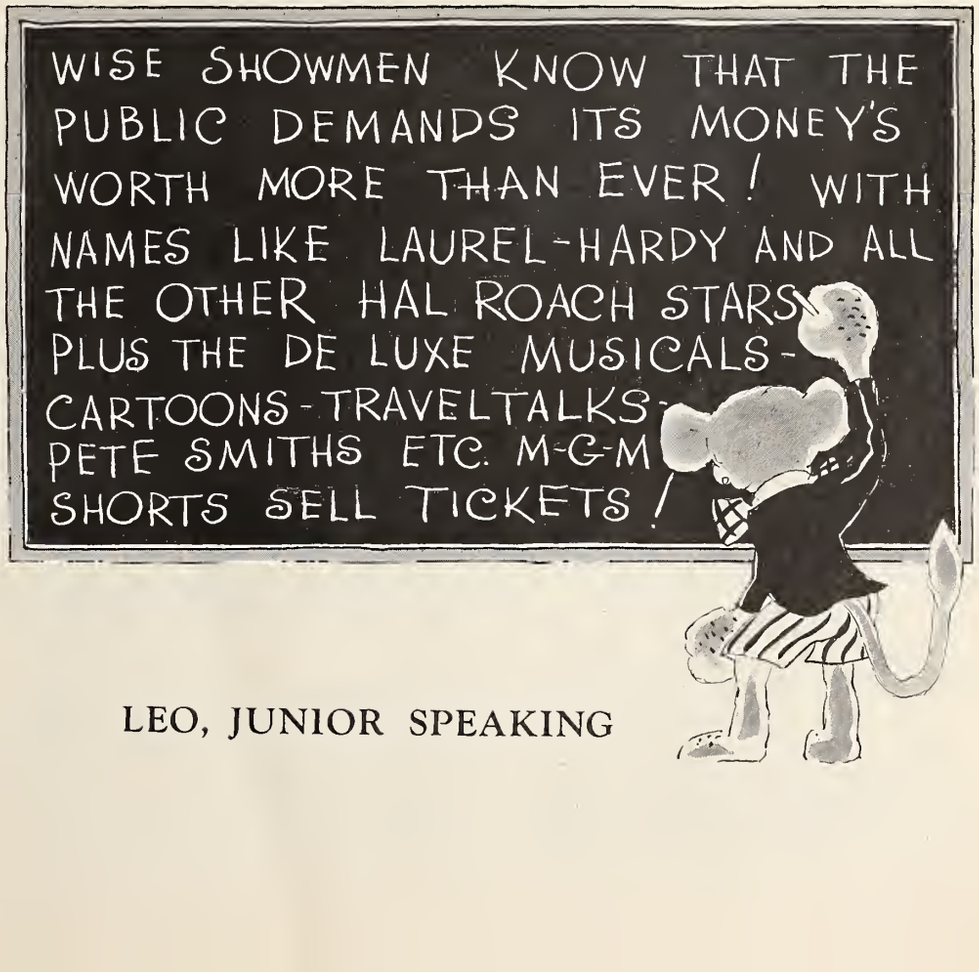
HERE COMES THE GROOM: Jack Haley—A good hot weather show. Silly comedy but it will get the laughs. With this hot weather the folks can stand a few laughs. Played July 17-18.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES THE GROOM: Jack Haley—Another picture without any box-office appeal and if you can get them in on it, there are but a few who will like it. During the summer months they'll wish they had stayed at home. Don't know why we're expected to do business on such film fare. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 11-12.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott—The biggest draw in two years. Played July 12-13-14.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple—A dandy. The kid is marvelous. Lots of entertainment. Pleased nearly everyone. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 15-18.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Adolphe Menjou, Shirley Temple—Shirley Temple is the whole show and what a show! It will make you want to meet them as they come out, for it is as near 100 per cent pleasing as any this season. What the theatres need now is more such pictures that might solve the problem that they are confronted with. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 28-29.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.



LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple—They are still talking about this picture around this town. Business above average and pleased 100 per cent. Excellent for Sunday. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 17-18.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Burns and Allen—Although I exploited this picture and really tried to put it over it just didn't click for some reason. Personally I liked the picture but there were a large number of our patrons who didn't like it and said so. General consensus of opinion among the dissenters was that it was too silly and inane. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 15-16.—H.M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Guy Lombardo, Burns and Allen—When they have one of the best known orchestras on the air, why should there have been so much of Gracie and so little of Lombardo. Burns and Allen have a certain following, some that think they are great and some that they are an acute pain, too, but there is no doubt about the popularity of Lombardo's orchestra, and I say that they missed a bet in having only three members of the orchestra in the picture. I don't think that Burns and Allen can repeat and be a draw in any later picture, if they decide to make it. They run too much to type as did Ed Wynn, of whom just one dose was enough for Metro in the "Chief." And I think that that picture finished his broadcast contract.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Burns and Allen, Guy Lombardo—Made to order for Burns and Allen fans. Will please anyone looking for light comedy or nutty entertainment. Music by Lombardo is exceptional. Business above average. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 4-5.—Tom Malloy, Fox Theatre, Napa, Cal. General patronage.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Guy Lombardo, Burns and Allen—Too much Burns and Allen and not enough of Lombardo and band. They expect Gracie Allen to be foolish but this pleased them too well. She's just downright silly all the way through this one. Lombardo could have saved it if he had appeared a little more. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 24-25.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—A very nice musical from Paramount. Ross can sing beautifully but needs more poise before the camera. Ruggles saved the picture. Business average. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 13-14. H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charlie Ruggles—A very good little picture which we put on our better nights and which did very well at the box office considering the hot weather. The "Milking Chorus" at the last was exceptionally good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 5-6.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross.—One of the worst pictures we have played from Paramount group. No one who saw the show cared for it. Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles were not liked in it at all. No extra business. Running time, 76 minutes Played July 3-4.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—This is fine entertainment. Clean as can be, some very pretty scenes, good comedy, excellent music. Lanny Ross is all to the good. Paramount gave him a clean start and if it will do right by this young man he will become a favorite. Many told me how much they liked Lanny Ross and his singing and how much they enjoyed the show. Business good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 4-5.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Jack Oakie, Kitty Carlisle—A very good picture that pleased 100 per cent. Patrons liked it and said so. Women especially interested in Carl Brisson. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 1-2.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Kent Taylor—Fairly good entertainment, about like the usual Zane Grey. But we all know that they are a little bit better than the average Western. But did not draw any extra business. Running time, 57 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes—Not so hot; will get by as a program picture. But your opposition will no doubt hit you a lick while you're trying to play it. Just another filler on your program. Running time, 66 minutes. Played July 19-20.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Ned Sparks, Zasu Pitts—Fair mystery comedy with Sparks furnishing what entertainment the picture offers. Some of the comedy not on a very high plane. Too bad when comedy like this has to be resorted to to get laughs. Played July 10-11.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SHE MADE HER BED: Sally Eilers, Richard Arlen—Not a very strong picture, but give it credit for some thrills. Animals and babies usually get a rise out of the audience. Played July 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hot Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie—Jack Oakie in the role of a sidewalk barker trying to get by as a big shot showman when off duty. It presents Oakie in a characterization that seems best suited for him. Music by Ben Bernie is worked into the story very nicely. Supporting cast good. Business average. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 15-16.—Tom Malloy, Fox Theatre, Napa, Cal. General patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie, Roscoe Karns, Dorothy Dell—A very entertaining little show. Bernie's orchestra adds a few novelty numbers and the old maestro isn't a bad actor. Has plenty of comedy with Karns almost stealing the show. The entire cast is good. Pleased the customers. Played July 21.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

TAKE A CHANCE: James Dunn, June Knight—Just fair entertainment and business not as good as expected. A fair program picture, that's all. Cliff Edwards should have sung more; his songs are always a draw. Running time, 81 minutes. Played May 7-8.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Country and town patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant—Both of these stars well liked here and this picture is nicely done and will please the average audience. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 8-9.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney—This is certainly a honey of a picture. When I saw the trailer on this one I was afraid of it because of the costumes. However, don't let that worry you for they will come to see it, and what is more that they will like it and tell you so. Excellent Sunday picture. Business average. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 27-28.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

FINDS REPORTS ARE DEFINITE BENEFIT

Benefits to exhibitors from exhibitors' reports on "What the Picture Did for Me" are attested by K. C. Preston of the Lyric theatre at Salem, Mo., a new contributor. Writes Mr. Preston:

"Enclosed you will find several reports on the different pictures we have played recently which you may use in your column if you see fit.

"We thoroughly enjoy your department in MOTION PICTURE HERALD and benefit by the reports the exhibitors send in.

"It is one of the best departments in the magazine.

"Hoping we will again have an opportunity to send in reports on the various pictures, and wishing you much success."

THREE CORNERED MOON: Richard Arlen, Claudette Colbert—Disappointing. Too much of a stage play. These types of entertainment may suit "Broadway," but they do not please "Main Street," and producers should remember that "Main Street," not "Broadway," made the motion picture business one of the biggest there is. Business low. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 2-3.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Country and town patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Stuart Erwin—A good comedy Western that pleased the patrons and seemed to draw extra good. We liked Stuart Erwin as the comic western hero. Running time, 57 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby—A picture that pleased 100 per cent and did a very satisfactory business. It seems as though Bing Crosby is the one crooner who can please both men and women, young and old. Business above average. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 3-4.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard—This is an excellent picture that should please all types of patrons. It is a romantic comedy with music and presents the one and only Bing Crosby singing several popular song hits. This is the outstanding drawing card and the success of this will depend largely on Crosby's popularity. In addition to the music, Burns and Allen furnish the comedy along with Leon Errol and the newcomer, Ethel Merman. This type of entertainment is suitable for the whole family and is very good entertainment. Business was poor on this, but above average for the summer run of pictures. Too bad that we could not have this in the fall months when business is good. If Crosby goes over well in your community this is sure to be a great business getter and will please everyone.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard—Good entertainment. Bing Crosby always pleases our patrons, also Burns and Allen. Some very good songs by Bing Crosby. Play it. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard—Just fair, not the big special they would have you believe. My patrons were expecting more than they got on account of extra advertising on this picture. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 21-22.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

WHARF ANGEL: Victor McLaglen—Fair program picture. Played on bargain nights to average business and seemed to please. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 12-13.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WHITE WOMAN: Charles Laughton—Well acted picture with a good story. The only fault I have to find with this picture is that Laughton does not speak American and it is very hard at times to follow him. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 3-4.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

WITCHING HOUR, THE: Judith Allen, Tom Brown—Just a fair program picture that pleased fairly well. Business fair. Played on bargain nights. Played June 26-27.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park Fla. General small town patronage.

WITCHING HOUR, THE: Tom Brown—Good picture. Good suspense and entertainment. Running time 64 minutes. Played July 14.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinville, Ore. Local patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields, Buster Crabbe—Fine. W. C. Fields excellent. Bad print from Paramount. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 20.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields—This picture was to me one of the best this popular star has made. Picture pleased. Good Sunday and Monday attraction. Business average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 20-21.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

RKO

ANN VICKERS: Irene Dunne—This is another women's picture. It did not draw so good but it seemed to please those that did come. Running time, 74 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

COME ON DANGER: Tom Keene—An excellent western that pleased the western fans and kids. Played June 16.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

DELUGE, THE: Peggy Shannon, Sidney Blackmer—The first part of this picture was unusual because of the earthquake showing the destruction of New York City. The rest of the picture was very poor. Unpleasant, cheap melodrama. And it would have been just as easy to have made something much better. No walkouts. Business off. Running time, 67 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

GHOST VALLEY: Tom Keene—Like the usual Tom Keene Western. Good entertainment for Western fans. Running time, 48 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

GOODBYE LOVE: Charles Ruggles—Good comedy entertainment that should please those looking for light and pleasant pastime. Charles Ruggles is well liked; when a trailer shows that he has a part in a picture, there is always a titter through the house. Did a satisfactory business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 27-28.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

IF I WERE FREE: Irene Dunne, Clive Brook—This was much better entertainment than we had expected it would be. There are some beautiful scenes and music running through it and it holds interest well. This pleased our patrons and did an average business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played April 25-26.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

IF I WERE FREE: Irene Dunne, Clive Brok, Nils Asther—A very good entertaining picture but these good pictures of all the companies fail to draw film rentals, whereas the poorer pictures (that would do no business in the city) will at least draw the amount at the box-office they cost us. Figure it out if you can; I can't. Played July 12-13.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS: Ann Harding, John Boles—A dandy picture which we played Sunday-Monday and which did better than other pictures which we have played those days in some time. On the order of "Back Street," which came out a year or so ago. Sad in places. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 8-9.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—A wonderful picture. The men and women both came to see it, but women mostly drew good. And all thought it was wonderful. Running time, 112 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—This was a good play but due to some kind of a jinx it did not hit the bullseye. Running time, 112 minutes. Played July 6-7-8.—Barry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Zasu Pitts, El Brendel—Good comedy, a little spicy in spots but they like it that way. Very well received here. Average business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 4-5.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, El Brendel, James Gleason, Skeets Gallagher—Nothing to it but pleased the hayshakers. Played June 6-7.—E. H. Malone, Community Theatre, Hammond, Wis. General patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN: Zasu Pitts—Zasu Pitts and El Brendel should be starred in more pictures. Drew the best box-office returns in three months, a good picture with lots of laughs. Running time, 67 minutes. Played July 10-11.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

RENEGADES OF THE WEST: Tom Keene—An excellent western that pleased a Saturday audience. Played July 21.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

SING AND LIKE IT: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton—A very weak picture and all our patrons told us so. Zasu always draws in our town but she will have to be in better pictures or she will lose out. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 10-11.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

SING AND LIKE IT: Zasu Pitts—We have run several bad pictures but this is the worst yet. Even the kids did not like it. Seven reels of wasted film. We have had only two lemons from RKO this year. This was both of them. Running time, 67 minutes.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George S. C. Small town patronage.

SON OF THE BORDER: Tom Keene—More pictures of this type will kill Western pictures. The sound and everyone in the picture was bad. Made money on it but hurt my business. Running time, 52 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—This picture pleased very well but recording on it was very poor. There are times when it is impossible to hear what is being said. Business average. Played June 28-29. H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—In these days of depression, drought and crop failure it is certainly refreshing to see a show that depends on story and acting instead of mansions, yachts, drinking and smoking. Katharine Hepburn as Trigger, the little mountain girl in her faded gingham dress, overcoming the handicap of poverty, ignorance and superstition, is superb. I consider this the best picture I have exhibited this year. Ralph Bellamy gives a fine performance and the mountaineers are all good. Beautiful scenery, this picture is absolutely clean and ought to please everyone. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 18-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—In spite of very hot weather and a carnival going on, this picture drew a fairly good attendance and was well liked. Some of the mountain dialect used by this star was a little hard to understand. Played July 7.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

STRICTLY DYNAMITE: Jimmy Durante—Poor. Idea got tangled up and the plot never came to a head. Durante no good for a full picture. Too much of him is too much. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 13-14.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

STRICTLY DYNAMITE: Lupe Velez, Jimmy Durante—Was a bit disappointed in this one. My people said they did not care for it. It was also very weak at box office. Picture in my estimation is pretty good program fare.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomation, Ala. Small town patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—Good show of its kind and by far the best animal show we have had recently. Drew a good Saturday crowd. Running time, 96 minutes. Played July 14.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BLOOD MONEY: George Bancroft—This role suits Bancroft and the patrons welcomed him back after a long absence. A very strong gangster type of story but not offensive. It was well liked here, no objection raised by anyone. Played this with the Baer-Carnera fight pictures so both drew well. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

BOWERY, THE: Wallace Berry, Jackie Cooper—Wallace Beery always goes over good here. A rough and ready picture that pleased. Played July 10-11.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

EMPEROR JONES: Paul Robeson—A complete waste of film, time and money. One of those pictures where you hide in your office and lock the door when the customers come out. Failed to hear a single favorable comment from the patrons but plenty of razzing, and I don't blame them. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 11.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Spencer Tracy, Jack Oakie—A splendid action story with plenty of comedy and exciting finish. Well liked here. Good business resulted. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 6-7.—Wm. A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Spencer Tracy—Good picture that satisfied the customers. Lots of comments on how good the picture was. Business average. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 14.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumar. Wash. Small town patronage.

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett—Excellent entertainment, well liked. No drawing power and just average business.—B. R. Johnson, Orpheum Theatre, Kerrobert, Canada. Small town patronage.

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett—Entertaining musical comedy that everyone enjoyed. Slightly better than average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 12.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ROMAN SCANDALS: Eddie Cantor—Good Cantor show. Plenty of comedy, gorgeous settings, nice music, some suggestive cracks, but all in all it's a good piece of entertainment. Played July 19-20.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

WHOOPEE: Eddie Cantor—Old but good. We got a print that had excellent sound. The color showed up good also.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Caused a lot of talk in town booking this subject on Friday the 13th, but I see now where I was wrong and I'll never do it again. Everything would have been all right if they had had the characters speak English and if they had explained the mystery. My patrons are still asking just what it was all about and I can't tell them as I don't know myself. It looked to me like the producers got it into such a mess they couldn't solve it themselves. It is not up to Universal's standard of mysteries, though I did take a nice little profit on it. But it wouldn't have held up two days. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 13.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

BOMBAY MAIL: Edmund Lowe—A murder mystery; it is only fair entertainment and did not please the audience entirely. Business not above the average. Running time, 66 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

COUNTESS OF MONTE CRISTO: Fay Wray, Paul Lukas—A good clean picture that held the interest and gave good satisfaction. Running time, 77 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

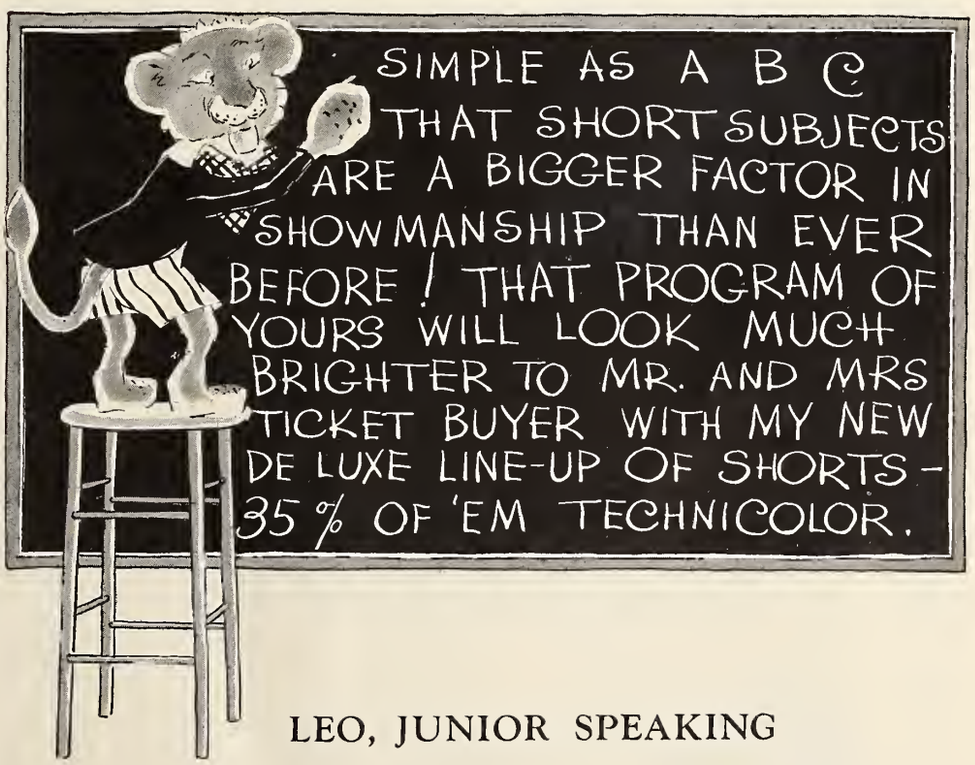
CROSBY CASE, THE: Wynne Gibson—Pass this up and they'll never miss it and your theatre will be better off. Played July 12-13.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres—This one drew good and seemed to please the customers 100 per cent. Running time, 75 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres—Just fair, but took a nice loss at the box office, with no opposition. So, after all, in dollars and cents, it is no good. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

HER FIRST MATE: Zasu Pitts, Slim Summerville—Satisfactory comedy entertainment. Not as laughable as some of the other Pitts and Summervilles, but it's all right. And did Friday and Saturday coverage business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 20-21.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

I LIKE THAT WAY: Roger Pryor, Gloria Stuart—Good program picture with a couple of good songs in it. Ran it on bargain night and everyone was pleased.—J. E. Ross. Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.



I LIKE IT THAT WAY: Gloria Stuart—This was a good picture. It is not anything to rave about, but it will please an ordinary crowd very well. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy—Personally, I thought this was one of the best pictures in some time. Played June 28.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy—Full of action. Smart dialogue with comedy, this picture is good for any place. Lee Tracy was the whole show, but he was satisfactory. Played July 21.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy—Regardless of Mexico, that boy Tracy is still a big box-office attraction. They came and how they came, but they were disappointed to see their hero in such a dime novel as this one. Weak story or no story at all. Tracy handled his part well, and I believe they were satisfied to see Tracy again. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 6-7.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

LET'S BE RITZY: Lew Ayres—Much ado about nothing. Just barely nosed out a profit but didn't have film rental to pay, as it was a gratis booking caused by a bad print. When they give you the print and you barely make a $5 profit then it is time to quit the business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Chas. S. Edwards, Queen Theatre, Pilot Point, Texas. General patronage.

LEO, JUNIOR SPEAKING

LET'S TALK IT OVER: Chester Morris—Average program picture to average business.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MAN WHAT NOW?: Margaret Sullavan—A very good picture, not so good at the box-office. Played July 9-10-11.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

LOVE BIRDS: Zasu Pitts, Slim Summerville—I took this one on to help run out my string of pictures with Universal. Same old stuff. These stars are definitely through as a draw at the box office. I knew that they would not pull before I used it but having so many pictures to play out put it in and found it very poor. Not worth running for adult entertainment.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Inc. General patronage.

LOVE BIRDS: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—A very good and really funny comedy with two of the silliest comedy stars on the screen. It seemed to please very well.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

POOR RICH, THE: Edna May Oliver, Edward Everett Horton—Here's another "clucker." Just one flop after another. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 14.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard, Ruth Hall—It seemed to please the Western fans but personally I was disappointed in it. I have seen much better Westerns. However, it will do in a pinch. Excellent horse fighting.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—Extra good Western that pleased 100 per cent. When producers no longer make good Westerns a large number of small town theatres will close. It's good, well made Western with plenty of beautiful out-of-door scenes that always please. Put action, comedy songs in these Westerns and you will always please. It is good to hear the children laugh and applaud. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 4-5.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Pa. County and town patronage.

State Rights

FIGHTING COWBOY: Buffalo Bill, Jr.—About the poorest Western that we have ever shown in our theatre. The story isn't any good and the action is worse. It would not take many of these to ruin any one's business. The patrons must have realized this for most of them stayed away the Saturday we played it. Running time, 49 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

Warner

COLLEGE COACH: Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell—Good entertainment from start to finish, has plenty of action but the usual football picture has. You can't go wrong on this one. The patrons were well pleased. Running time, 74 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis—Personally I didn't like this picture and neither did the men. But it certainly pleased the women. Played this picture just as all this talk started about cleaning up the movies. It is pictures like this one that start all that kind of truble. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 8-9.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

HAROLD TEEN: Hal LeRoy—Very nice picture that pleased most of the patrons. Business above average. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 21-22.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

HI, NELLIE!: Paul Muni—Splendid. Muni a real actor. Clean all the way through. Many favorable comments. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 18-19.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—A very clever picture that pleased. Business average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 7-8.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—Just average entertainment and average business. Played July 12-13.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

JIMMIE THE GENT: James Cagney—This picture was not up to the usual Cagney standard. However it pleased most of the Cagney fans, although some were disappointed. Business below average. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 17-18.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

SMARTY: Joan Blondell—Very well produced picture that should please anywhere. Clever lines and fast moving comedy makes it acceptable. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 19-20.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

UPPER WORLD: Warren William—Just a fair program picture that won't hurt nor help any. Business below normal. Played July 5-6.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General small town patronage.

UPPER WORLD: Ginger Rogers, Warren William—We played this one on Sunday. Expected too much. The second night was heartrending. Played July 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

World Wide

LONE AVENGER, THE: Ken Maynard—The average shoot 'em-up western and seemed to please the patrons, but business was only normal. Running time, 57 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

Short Features

Celebrity

JACK AND THE BEANSTALK: Comicolor cartoon—An excellent cartoon in color that pleased all the kiddies and was enjoyed by the older patrons as well.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Columbia

ANTIQUE ANTICS: Krazy Kat Kartoon—Average cartoon like most of them, just about the same.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

MICKEY'S COVERED WAGON: Mickey McGuire Comedy—An excellent comedy. This type of comedy always pleases, and they are always very good.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

MICKEY'S MINSTRELS: Mickey McGuire comedy—A good kid comedy.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

SCRAPPY'S DOG SHOW: Scrappy cartoons—Good. Running time, 7 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TEN BABY FINGERS: George Sidney, Charlie Murray—A very good comedy. Columbia certainly is improving in both their features and shorts.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

WORLD'S AFFAIR, THE: Scrappy cartoon—A very entertaining cartoon.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

CORRECTING A WRONG IMPRESSION!!

The—

"SCORE CHARGE"

ASCAP is informed that many exhibitors are under the impression that payments made by them to film exchanges or producers under the above heading are for the account or credit of ASCAP.

Any such impression is entirely erroneous.

ASCAP has never received, does not now receive, and will not in the future receive, one single cent of the monies collected from exhibitors under that heading.

ASCAP has no connection whatever, directly or indirectly, and never has had, nor any dealings with, any film producer or exchange, except as it may have licensed the performance in producer-owned theatres of the music copyrighted by its members.

ASCAP will be grateful to any exhibitor who will promptly inform it of any instance in which the statement is made that "score charges" are collected for its benefit—and it will immediately require a retraction of such misinformation or falsehood.

ASCAP hopes that the producers of sound-pictures who have billed exhibitors for so-called "score charges" will promptly now make a clear public statement to exhibitors of just what this item covers. We think this should be done:

First: Because we are sure the producers do not officially desire that their object in making this charge shall be camouflaged under false colors, and

Second: Because we understand the exhibitors generally believe that under this heading they have been the victims of excessive profiteering, and

Third: All concerned should know the actual truth of the reasons for collecting this charge and where the money goes after it is collected.

Finally—ASCAP collects but one fee—and will never collect but one—for a given use of the product of its members—the public performance for profit of their copyrighted musical works.

BIG MEOW, THE: Tom Howard—Just two reels of film. One or two laughs. All in all, it's not so hot.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

GOING SPANISH: Musical Comedy—The best two-reeler we have had from Fox. The song and dance number is very good.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

GOLD GHOST, THE: Buster Keaton—This is a real good comedy. We get so very few two-reelers that are worth their running that when a good one comes along it's a real treat. Let us have more from Buster Keaton, both feature length and two-reel. Running time, 20 minutes.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

GOLD GHOST, THE: Buster Keaton—O. K. Keaton comedy. Received some laughs.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Aurora Theatre, Mo. Small town patronage.

HOTEL ANCHOVY: Coronet comedy—One of the worst shorts we have played. Have failed to get any shorts from Fox that had any laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LAST DOGIE, THE: Song Hit Stories series. This was fine. Why don't they make more song one-reelers like this one? There are so many beautiful songs and ballads, old and new, that could be made into such real entertainment. Running time, 11 minutes.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Small town and country patronage.

MANAGED MONEY: Shirley Temple—A fair comedy with little Shirley Temple which drew on that alone as she is so very popular now. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

NO SLEEP ON THE DEEP: Harry Langdon—Lay off this one; it is terrible. Nothing to it at all. Running time, 21 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

PARDON MY PUPS: Shirley Temple—This seemed to please and get some laughs. It was Shirley Temple who put it over. Running time, 19 minutes.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

SUNNY SOUTH, THE: Terry-Toon—A good Terry-Toon with Southern music all the way through and darkies and cotton fields and Simon Legree. Running time, six minutes.—K. C. Preston, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

TRIMMED IN FURS: Mermaid comedy—A slapstick that made every one laugh. If producers would cut out so much talk and put in more action, no matter how absurd, comedies would be a little more than time killers. Running time, 18 minutes.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

MGM

AIR FRIGHT: Todd-Kelly—Good comedy. Everyone seemed to enjoy it.—J. E. Rose, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

AIR FRIGHT: Thelma Todd, Patsy Kelly—This is only a fair comedy featuring that likable team of Todd-Kelly as air hostesses. They appear much better in this than in previous shorts and pleased very well. Here's hoping there are many more good ones from them. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

ANOTHER WILD IDEA: Charley Chase—Good comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. W. Mattecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

APPLES TO YOU: Musical comedy—Terrible. Absolutely no good. There is no sense to it. All our folks told us about it, too. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

CROOK'S TOUR—All-star series—This is the first of the MGM all-star series we have played and it was punk. Why this was made I don't know. Running time, 19 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

DAY IN VENICE: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—These single reelers would be fine for high schools, but as a part of a program when admissions are charged they are very poor. Running time, nine minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

DIRTY WORK: Laurel and Hardy—Excellent. All Laurel and Hardy comedies seem to be fine. Some of my patrons said this was one of the funniest comedies they had ever seen. Running time, 20 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

DUKE FOR A DAY, A: Musical comedy—Another flop for Metro. Their shorts are certainly losing ground this season. Any two one-reelers would be better than this comedy. Poorly made musical comedy shorts are terrible. Running time, 20 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville. Small town patronage.

FINE FEATHERS: Oddities—This short would be trite except for Pete Smith's explanatory remarks which make it excellent. Running time, one reel. Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

FIRST ROUNDUP, THE: Our Gang—The most amusing Gang comedy in some time.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

FIRST ROUNDUP, THE: Our Gang—A very good short in which the Our Gang kids all go on an overnight camping trip and tbe scares and excitement they have. Very thrilling at the last. Running time, 19 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF ERIN: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—All of this series have been good, but this one not quite up to the standard of some, but it's an okay travelogue.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOING BYE-BYE: Laurel and Hardy—A swell Laurel-Hardy comedy and we think one of the best they have made. Do not miss this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOOFY MOVIES, NO. 3:—There are a few wisecracks in these features that are amusing, but as for the film, they are just a lot of hokum that are of little value to any program. Running time, 10 minutes. C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

GOOFY MOVIES, NO. 4: Pete Smith—O. K. short.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HANDLEBARS: Oddities—An Oddity showing bicycling from the early days down to the present day craze of girls bicycling in shorts in California. Running time, 10 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

HANDLEBARS: Oddities—Good comedy. Your patrons will enjoy this as mine did. Running time, one reel.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel. Okla. General patronage.

HI, NEIGHBOR: Our Gang comedy—Very good.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

INSULTIN' THE SULTAN: Willie Whopper cartoon—This series only fair so far.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MENU: Una Merkel—A good short. This would be common except for Pete Smith's explanatory remarks which are great. Running time, two reels.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

ROAMIN' VANDALS: Musical comedies—A very funny musical comedy, better than the average.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

ROAST BEEF AND MOVIES: Musical revues—Poor. Not much to it. Running time, 17 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

SHERMAN SAID IT: Charley Chase—Good comedy and lots of action. Running time, 17 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon. State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

SOUP AND FISH: Thelma Todd, Patsy Kelly—Just a fair comedy in which Miss Kelly plays pranks and jokes all the way through a dinner party. Not so hot. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

STRATOS-FEAR: Willie Whopper — This is the third Willie Whopper show I have ever played and it is excellent. It was appreciated by all. Running time, eight minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

VITAL VICTUALS: Oddities—These Oddities are very amusing and so different that they are good with any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

WILD POSES: Our Gang—The Gang is falling down. In fact, there is no more Gang. In this Spanky was featured almost entirely. The Gang (3) came in twice. Running time, 19 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

Paramount

JUST AN ECHO: Bing Crosby—A very fine short. Bing Crosby sings some good numbers and there are plenty of laughs also. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE REVUE: Little Jack Little—A dandy one-reeler and one that will please. Running time, 10 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

MR. W.'S LITTLE GAME: Alexander Woollcott—Terrible. Nothing to it. Nobody liked it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

OIL'S WELL: Chic Sale—A good comedy. Plenty of laughs in this one. Our patrons thought it good. Running time, 22 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

OLD BUGLER, THE: Chic Sale—Excellent. Let's have more from Chic. Running time, 20 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 5: This is a very interesting one-reeler and will go well with any program. Running time, 11 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

PICTORIAL, NO. 8: Paramount Pictorial—This series has been consistently good.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

RADIO ROUNDUP, A: Headliners—You can't miss on this one.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

SEASIN'S GREETINKS: Popeye, the Sailor—These are the most popular short subjects I am using this season. Running time, 8 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

SEASIN'S GREETINKS: Popeye—Another excellent comedy of that famous cartoon character, Popeye. These one-reelers are all good entertainment and please all my patrons. These always draw extra business and bring many comments. This one sbould draw them in for you. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WHEN YUBA PLAYS THE RUMBA ON THE TUBA: Mills Bros—Just another screen song. The cartoon is better than the singing. Running time, 10 minutes.—Barton R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

WHERE'S THAT TIGER: Headliners—Very good.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

WHERE'S THAT TIGER: Harmonica Rascals — These short subjects are very popular in my town and equal to the average two-reeler and better than most of them. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

RKO

HOOK AND LADDER HOKUM: Tom and Jerry Series—Very good one-reeler.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomoton, Ala. Small town patronage.

PREFERRED LIST: Dorothy Lee, Chuck Chandler, Bud Jameson, John Sheehan—Terrible. Supposed to be a musical and all the lines were sung by individuals and by a chorus. We thought it very poor. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

RASSLIN' MATCH, THE: Amos and Andy—Either too much was expected of this series, or there is something wrong with them. They miss fire somehow.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON A LADDER: Edgar Kennedy—Good, although some double meaning wisecracks. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S MECHANICAL MAN: Mickey Mouse—A dandy Mickey Mouse. Will please every one. Running time, seven minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

Universal

BROADWAY BREVITIES: Mentone No. 7—One of the best of the series.—Rubel Hutchings, Allen Theatre, Allen, Neb. Small town patronage.

ED. SULLIVAN'S HEADLINERS: Ed. Sullivan—A good novelty dance saves it from being just average.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

FULL COVERAGE: Henry Armetta—A very good comedy. Running time, two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Louise Fazenda—A very good comedy as are all of Fazenda's. Very funny.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

KISSING TIME: Broadway Brevities—Good. Running time, two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

LET'S PLAY POSTOFFICE: Jean Sargent—Not so hot. Just a lot of drills and dancing dolls playing around that tires the customers who were expecting a snappy short subject. Surely there is something else besides legs that short subjects could be built around. Running time, 19 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

LOOK FOR THE SILVER LINING: Dorothy Stone—They called this a special and charged double for it and it was terrible! Nothing to it. Long drawn out lot of nothingness. Poorest Vitaphone short I have used this season. Running time, 28 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

MILD WEST, THE: Broadway Brevities—Brevity two-reel subject and a good one.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Gerenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

MILLS BLUE RHYTHM: Melody Masters—This should only be shown in a Negro show as there is nothing to it but that kind of hokum and it is an insult to white patrons in the South and they resent having it forced on them. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

MILLS BLUE RHYTHM: Melody Masters—A dandy one-reeler with the singing and dancing done by colored entertainers. Play on your best nights. Running time, 10 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

TIN HAT HARMONY: Abe Lyman and Band—Very good band act. Running time, 10 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

TUNE DETECTIVE, THE: Pepper Pot—Good musical with some mighty good dancing.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

20,000 CHEERS FOR THE CHAIN GANG: Broadway Brevities—Only fair. Not near as good as many previous Broadway Brevities. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

VERY CLOSE VEINS: Ben Blue—A very good two-reel comedy. It is silly, of course, but what else should a comedy be? Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WHO IS THAT GIRL?: Bernice Claire—If Warner don't fire their grand opera singing teacher and hire a gag man for their Brevities, they'll soon be the bunk. This one would be o. k. if shown at the Metropolitan Opera House. Running time, 20 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

YEAST IS YEAST: Broadway Brevities—Not up to the standard of Warner comedies, but it was very good, however.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

Serials
Universal

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones—This is a good serial and was a drawing card to our Friday and Saturday program. Buck Jones is popular with our Western lovers. If you want a Western serial this should please. Running time, 20 minutes.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Small town and country patronage.

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones—A very good serial that pleased the kiddies. Did not hold the interest as well as "Clancy of the Mounted."—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PERILS OF PAULINE: Evalyn Knapp—Not so good. Did not draw extra business. Running time, 20 minutes.—Mrs. R. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

PIRATE TREASURE: Richard Talmadge—This serial is going good in the fourth episode; it has the youngsters all afire. It is going to prove an extra business getter if it holds up to the fast pace of the first three chapters. Running time, 20 minutes.—Mrs. E. D. Carter, Fairfax Theatre, Kilmarnock, Va. Town and country patronage.

PIRATE TREASURE: Richard Taldmadge—A lot of impossible stuff that will not even appeal to the kids. When they witness fight after fight and one man coming out with his freshly pressed clothing not even soiled after whipping a dozen at a time the little five-year-olds will razz it. These are the elements of this serial. Running time, 19 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

Chicago University Has Educational Feature Film

The University of Chicago, for some time a producer and user of educational motion pictures, has completed an eight-reel talking picture, "The Human Adventure," handled by the Oriental Institute of the university. Subtitled, in effect, "a sketch of man's rise from savagery to civilization," the film will be "roadshown" to leading colleges throughout the country in much the same manner that a theatrical film is shown in key cities. Erpi Pictures Consultants, New York, is releasing and distributing the picture.

The film, requiring more than three years to complete, was produced under the scientific supervision of Dr. James H. Breasted, well known historian and director of Oriental Institute. Direction and narration of the film was by Charles Breasted.

Ban Hitler Film

Police Commissioner H. E. Pickert and Superintendent John P. Smith of Detroit have banned "Hitler's Reign of Terror," describing it as "an obvious fake." Samuel Cummins, of Jewel Productions, distributor of the film, has communicated with the police officials, indicating he intends to defy them in their decision.

Dear HERALD:

Just now we don't know whether to start for New York or Hollywood. We have just received a letter from New York and she closed it by saying, "Come up and see me some time," but we think that the climate in Hollywood is excellent at this season of the year.

If you want to see a good comedy you should see "The Merry Wives of Reno." It has the basis for an excellent story and it has a good cast, including Guy Kibbee, Glenda Farrell, Frank McHugh, Roscoe Ates and several other good ones, including Hugh Herbert and a sheep from a sheep-ranch near Reno. We believe it was Ruth Donnelly who played the part of Kibbee's wife, and if we are not mistaken, she has played that part on several former occasions and played it so well that it has caused us to wonder if she and Kibbee had not visited Reno before and gone from there to the church. Like a lot of other fellows we know, Guy has usually been strong for corn licker and Ruth was not always satisfied with smelling of the cork herself. Outside of a few unnecessary rough spots that you might object to, we would class this as an excellent comedy.

Should you become restless and uneasy when you think of the picture code, you might let your mind dwell for a time on the pleasure you will get when you pay your part of the interest on billions of dollars of bonds held by the bankers and millionaires, a debt which you had no part in contracting. Taxation Without Representation was a serious matter in 1776, but it is a joke in 1934.

Like Sherman's March

Harry M. Warner, one of Hollywood's prominent producers, is reported as saying that "the present objection to pictures comes from 5 per cent of the public, and this is a small but militant minority."

In traveling back and forth from New York to Hollywood by airplane or Pullman sleeper, 95 per cent of Harry's vision must have been obscured by fog or dust. Had he traveled 150,000 miles by automobile, as we have done, that "militant minority" might have looked to him like Sherman's March to the Sea. It is funny what a rumpus "5 per cent of the public" can kick up out in Hollywood.

A-Mike Vogel, an excellent gentleman of ability and the Skipper of the "Round Table Department" of the HERALD, had this to say editorially recently: "In many instances 15 hours a day are still usual. Managers must toil from early morn to midnight, seven days a week, in defiance of the spirit of the code that has been created to alleviate this impossible condition."

Every once-in-a-while we run across a bit of comedy that makes us smile. Had our friend Mike sat in a car until 11 or 12 o'clock noon waiting for some manager to get out of bed, as we have so often done, he would have gotten an altogether different slant on these slavish managers. These boys have to work hard enough for what little they get, there is no doubt about that, but it isn't work that is making them thin, it is worry, trying to get pictures that will draw expenses.

We knew a NewYorker once who strayed away from Broadway far enough to get out in the edge of the country and he stopped a farmer and inquired, "Say, what are those things over there?" The farmer looked in the direction he was pointing and said, "Why, one is a cow and the other is a haystack." Then the New Yorker, wanting to show his knowledge of agriculture, pointed to a cornfield that was about ready to tassle and said, "Say, mister, when are you going to dig that celery?" After he had got back to his home his folks asked where he had been all day and he replied, "I've been out west among the Indians." We'll betcha that guy never saw a MOTION PICTURE HERALD in his life.

Someone recently said that a prominent man connected with the industry was about to resign from a $150,000 job because the churches were criticizing some of the boys up at the top. Will somebody please page a doctor. We feel the need of a stimulant. The guy who would resign from a $150,000 job hasn't been born yet.

Anyone who likes to see Mexican bandits will enjoy seeing Wallace Beery in "Viva Villa." We doubt very much if they could have picked a better type for Panco Villa than Wallace. He looks like a Mexican, he dresses like one and he acts like one. We wouldn't want to say that he is half Mexican because that might make both him and Mexico mad. How about that, Wallace? Better see it if you like that type of entertainment.

The other night we saw "Hi Nellie," a newspaper story with a graveyard for a side issue. The people who did the most of the chores were Paul Muni, Glenda Farrell and Ned Sparks. If there is any sense or reason for Paul playing any better than he did in this picture, we are unable to see it, and every time we see Glenda play she does it so nicely that we want to buy her an ice cream soda and an all-day sucker. If they don't star Ned pretty soon in some picture we are going to conclude that there is no need for a post office in Hollywood, because they can't read.

On Human Nature

We have always patted ourself on the back in an egotistical belief that we had the ability to diagnose human nature without the aid or consent of anybody on earth, and we are offering to wager the last nickel we've got that there isn't a woman in Hollywood who has a bigger heart and a more lovable disposition than Zasu Pitts.

Should her husband read this and take exceptions to it, he can have the choice of weapons, provided he will keep this quiet from our very good friends, Louise Fazenda and husband.

If it weren't that we consider you a special friend of ours, and one who will keep it strictly under your hat, we wouldn't mention the matter at all, but did you know that the public has always wanted to be and will continue to want to be entertained? And did you know also that the moving picture is the least expensive and best entertainment that has yet been devised? Well, it is, and can you see any good reason why Hollywood should work up a sweat and tear her shirt just because the Legion Of Decency is demanding that they cut the dirt and sex out of some of their entertainment? You wouldn't expect the public to buy a rotten apple just because it wanted apples, would you? Maybe the man who put that rotten apple in the box had been raised on rotten apples. You might give this thought the once-over and see what you think about it, that the producer who doesn't sort out the apples right now will be marching in the dust of the procession next year. Then, too, the Legion might give this a little consideration, that if they want clean entertainment they should support clean entertainment and not stop at boycotting dirty entertainment. Reason is the foundation rock upon which all our activities should be based.

We never have known until today just what it was that stunted the growth of Muskogee, Oklahoma. We have it upon the authority of A-Mike Vogel himself that he was born and raised there, and the record discloses that he made so much noise at feeding time that the Indians got hostile because he drowned out their war dances and they moved to Claremore, Oklahoma, the town made famous by Will Rogers.

The public has wondered for a long time why a colyum writer was never hung or shot at sunrise, the reason being that they could cut their column short any time it appeared to be becoming dangerous.

It kinda appears to us that there are war clouds gathering around the HERALD wigwam, with Ernie looking for a cleaver.

ROSENBLATT ADVISES COMMITTEES
10 PICTURES START, 8 COMPLETED
NEW PRODUCT COVERS WIDE FIELD

By GUS McCARTHY
Hollywood Bureau of Motion Picture Herald

SOL A. ROSENBLATT, NRA division administrator, arrived in town Thursday and devoted the weekend to visiting the studios. His real work started this week with a general meeting Monday night in the Gold Room of the Beverly-Wilshire hotel with all members of the various five-five committees, to advise them how they may exercise their duties in keeping with the requirements of the code. Major Joseph O. Donovan, Coast secretary of the Code Authority, assisted in arrangements.

The deputy administrator is also here to hear complaints and recommend changes in the code wherever found justified. Among the many waiting to lay their troubles before him was Herbert Aller, business manager for the local Cameramen's Union. He charged that producers were forcing cameramen to join the American Society of Cinematographers in order to get jobs. Dick L. Strange, former member of the original studio labor board, said assistant cutters were being worked overtime and that studio reclassification of "grips" made them standbys with 75 cents an hour pay instead of $1 as prescribed in the code.

Mr. Rosenblatt expressed great interest in Joseph I. Breen's machinery for producer self-regulation under the Production Code Administration. However, Mr. Rosenblatt said: "The government will not enter into the matter. I am merely going to observe the censorship plan of the Hays office, and naturally I am interested in the work of censors."

The administrator limited his visit here to 10 days.

Just a Coincidence

This coincidence is related by Read Kendall, Los Angeles Times' ever-cheerful reporter.

Shortly before Wallace Reid's death, Kendall covered the story for the court. Reid had just made pictures titled "Officer 666" and "Speed." While Kendall worked on the story he carried badge number 666, and his nickname was, and still is, "Speed."

And there is the incident that occurred on the "Have a Heart" set at MGM, relayed by Una Merkel.

The studios always save old contracts, canceled checks, and so on, for the prop room. Filming a scene for "Have a Heart," the director handed a bit man a file of such papers and told him to run through them at random, selecting one offhand to give to King Baggot, playing another bit. When the scene was taken, Baggot happened to glance at the slip of paper. It was a canceled check for three thousand dollars, made out by the studio several years ago, to King Baggot.

MGM recently purchased the screen rights to the novel, but just as recently postponed the vehicle because of sequences in the story which they feared would not conform with the Production Code.

Ten Start, Eight Completed

As production maintained its normal pace with 36 feature productions in work, 10 new pictures were added to the active shooting list and eight were completed. Of the new pictures, major studios account for seven and three independents each contribute one. On the finished side of the ledger all but one, a Mascot, are major company features. Fox and Universal each started two pictures, the other new activity being split equally among Paramount, Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Invincible, Mascot and Monogram. At MGM and Warner two pictures each were completed, while one each from Paramount, Radio, Universal and Mascot was transferred to the cutting rooms.

Diversity marks the tenor of the new pictures, but it is worthy of note that of the 10 new pictures, three are westerns.

The Fox starting pair hint the current trend. "The State vs. Elinor Norton," a drama, teams Claire Trevor and Hugh Williams, who made his screen debut in "All Men Are Enemies." Norman Foster and Henrietta Crosman head the supporting cast. In "Music in the Air," Gloria Swanson, John Boles and Douglass Montgomery head an extensive cast, among them Al Shean, Reginald Owen, Hobart Bosworth and Joseph Cawthorne.

Western and Romantic Drama

At Universal a western and a romantic drama got under way. The first, "Rocky Rhodes," features Buck Jones, Sheila Terry and Stanley Fields in the principal roles. "Escapade" is the second picture for Binnie Barnes in which the new star is supported by Neil Hamilton, Grant Mitchell, Doris Lloyd and Eugene Pallette.

Paramount's new activity, "Wagon Wheels," is a western with Randolph Scott and Gail Patrick in the featured roles, supported by Billy Lee, Leila Bennett and Raymond Hatton. Similarly the newly starting Mascot feature, "Crimson Romances," is an outdoor feature in which Ben Lyon is teamed with Sari Maritza in the leading roles and Erick von Stroheim and Hardie Albright are featured.

At Warner, the new starting feature is "Just Out of College," a modern light comedy romance in which Franchot Tone, Jean Muir, Ann Dvorak, Margaret Lindsay and Nick Foran will be seen. "A Girl Must Live," likewise a comedy romance in which Dorothy Wilson, Charles Starrett and Guinn Williams are the principal players, was put before the cameras.

Monogram's "A Successful Failure," romantic comedy, features William Collier, Sr., and Lucille Gleason, with Gloria Shea, Russell Hopton and William Janney heading the supporting cast. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Helen Hayes and Brian Aherne starred, picks up the dramatic trend with "What Every Woman Knows."

"Merry Widow" Completed

Of the currently completed productions, MGM's "The Merry Widow," Franz Lehar's operetta, appears to be the most important. With Jeanette McDonald and Maurice Chevalier in the leading singing roles, the cast includes a host of known names such as Minna Gombel, Edward Everett Horton, Una Merkel, Sterling Holloway, George Barbier, Dorothy Grainger, Dorothy Wilson, Fifi D'Orsay and Dewey Robinson. Its other completed picture, "Have a Heart," is the first starring vehicle for Jean Parker.

At Warner, a mystery, "The Case of the Howling Dog," was completed with Warren William, Mary Astor, Helen Trenholme, Dorothy Tree and Gordon Wescott as the principal players. "Big Hearted Herbert," an adaptation of a current successful stage play, in which Guy Kibbee, Aline MacMahon, Patricia Ellis and Phillip Reed will be seen, was transferred to the cutting room.

Paramount's completed feature, a theatre life tinged romance drama, "You Belong to Me," featured Lee Tracy, Helen Mack and Helen Morgan in a cast which includes David Jack Holt, Arthur Pierson, Lynne Overman and many of the studio's younger players. Radio's finished picture, "Age of Innocence," again teams John Boles and Irene Dunne, and has Julie Hayden, Laura Hope Crews and Lionel Atwell in the cast.

"The Human Side," new Universal feature, has Adolphe Menjou, Doris Kenyon, Dickie Moore and Reginald Owen. At Mascot, William Haines comes back to the screen in "Young and Beautiful," heading a cast which includes Judith Allen, John Miljan, Franklin Pangborn, Vince Barnett, Warren Hymer and Ted Fio Rito.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

FURTHER RECOGNITION

Nothing that we may say in favor of the Quigley Awards can be as convincing as the following from the statement released by Mr. J. J. Fitzgibbons, General Manager, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, referring to the recently announced promotion of Gene Curtis, formerly manager, Palace Theatre, Montreal, and recipient of the May plaque.

" . . . the Quigley Award was unquestionably a great factor in helping us decide whom we were going to appoint and trust with the responsibility of being our General Manager of Ticket Sales."

Thus, in the most concrete of terms, is confirmed the absolute dollars and cents value of participation by managers in the Quigley competitions.

True, Gene Curtis' reputation as an able showman has been long established, but what may be said to be the most important advancement of his career was made possible by the recognition he has gained and earned as a Quigley winner, and as a consistent finisher in the First and Honorable Mention groups since the very start.

To those who regard the Awards with indifference and to the competing theatremen yet to land one of the Big Prizes, we point with pride to the undisputed evidence. Every manager is offered through the Quigley project the very same opportunity for promotion so wisely and eagerly seized by the new—and we salute you—General Manager of Ticket Sales, of the far flung Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

AGAIN THE BONUS

The bonus plan for managers more than once suggested in these pages as the most practical means of stimulating the efforts of theatremen receives a bit of encouragement with the announcement by RKO theatres that the idea is being tried out this month. Quotas have been set for August and to all managers and publicity men achieving these figures during that period will be given an additional week's salary.

The circuit executives, according to the report, have adopted this plan of stepping up the midsummer grosses rather than resort to the "so-called Summer Entertainment Festivals and other stunts of that nature."

Although this initial step may be construed as experimental, the RKO executives are to be commended for attempting a stride in the right direction. We have always contended that showmen who deliver should be paid as are good salesmen in any other line—by a percentage rather than a flat salary.

Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt's NRA salary report shows that the bonus form of compensation has long been in vogue in the production, distribution and exhibition branches.

The able theatreman whose efforts are largely responsible for the earnings that make possible these bonuses has every right to expect the same method of remuneration.

ANIMATED DISPLAYS

They have proven definite in drawing power. They are unexcelled as attention-attractors. These are a few of the cogent reasons Louie Orlove devotes so much time and energy to the creation of animated lobby displays.

Some weeks ago in these pages we had the pleasure of publishing the working plans of two of this member's animations which were received with so much interest that Louie was requested to send on a few more. On a following page will be found the first of the new series.

There are other members no doubt utilizing this form of display with great success. We invite them to forward their ideas for publication in the hope that, by so doing, the value of movement in theatre advertising will receive serious consideration from managers not yet sold on its possibilities.

WELCOME ASSISTANCE

Millions in good will advertising are reported to be spent by major companies for the purpose of selling, or reselling motion pictures to the buying public.

When an opposition house was about to open its doors, Manager T. S. Wilson, of the Beyer Theatre, in Excelsior Springs, Missouri, graciously ran an ad welcoming the newcomers and complimenting the virtues of the competing theatre.

There are more than a few "Wilsons" among theatremen who realize the importance of building the industry's good will, and the above instance is one of the many gaining additional prestige for showbusiness.

The campaign to be inaugurated by the producers should do much to advance the efforts of individual showmen.

Drachman Localizes Exploits of Villa

To the southern border states and those adjacent, Pancho Villa remains something more than a legendary figure, and this was taken into consideration by Manager Roy P. Drachman, Fox Theatre, Tucson, Ariz., on his "Viva Villa" campaign. As nearly as possible, Roy endeavored to localize his sales angle, at the same time building up Villa as a romantic and important person in the history of the continent.

This was accomplished to a great extent by the splendid participation of the local newspapers which conducted a search through the files of the 1916 editions to find actual stories regarding Villa's exploits. From these Drachman used excerpts to fashion a long and interesting feature story published by the paper and illustrated with a two-column cut from the picture.

Use Actual Villa Stories

The same paper cooperated further by making a window display of some of the full page spreads given over to the bandit's raids. Roy had these blown up and with actual photos of Villa and other shots taken from the newspaper files created a flash that was talked about all over town.

Also featured was a four-column full combination ad, institutional copy stressing the efficiency of the newspaper in covering Villa in 1916 as well as today's news and also advertising the attraction, scene cuts being used generously to make the flash more colorful. Two well executed co-op pages were also sold by Drachman, one in the local Mexican paper and the other in the evening daily, the latter reported to be the first page of its kind put over locally in four years.

Enlargements of actual Villa war pictures were obtained and used as the basis for a display (see photo) in one of the best windows in town. Local residents who had campaigned with the bandit were also interviewed by the paper and were present at a special "Republic of Mexico" night, to which were invited the Mexican consul and other leading Mexican residents.

And to round out his very excellent campaign, Drachman obtained from a Mexican music store old time records of songs popular in the southern republic at the height of Villa's reign and these were used on a Villa broadcast and were played over the house P. A. system.

Rodney Toups Ties In Merchants for "Party"

Several merchant tieups netted Rodney Toups, Loew's State, New Orleans, La., some good publicity for "Hollywood Party," one being a department store plug that featured styles worn by Lupe Velez in ads and in windows.

Chase and Sandborn representatives planted strips in grocery stores, also bannering trucks. Strips featured Durante headlining the Sunday coffee broadcast. Royal Gelatin also placed cards in grocers' windows on "The Baron," tying in with the feature, and drug stores and newsstands were covered in a citywide fan magazine tieup.

In the papers that featured the star system, Toups ran ads headed "Again We Have All the Stars." Music stores plugged tunes and special ballyhoo record was used over theatre p. a. system.

Nautical Gags Aid Strand "Navy" Date

New York went quite nautical last week on "Here Comes the Navy" at the Strand Theatre, where Charlie Einfeld's Warner ad crew touched off a 21-gun exploitation campaign that effectively blanketed the metropolitan area.

The theatre front of course was decorated in true navy fashion with animated cutouts of Cagney and O'Brien wigwagging from either end of the lobby, while mechanical planes and ships passed in review on an endless chain, accompanied by a sound effect record of ships' guns firing. Other decorations included a crow's nest atop the marquee, port and lee lanterns, ship's clock, dummy turret with guns and battery of searchlights that swept the sky.

Regulation recruiting "A" boards were used with the "Join the World and See the Navy" picture poster on one side, and the navy slogan "Join the Navy and See the World" on the other. Well executed also was a bannered battleship float (see photo) with loud speaker and girls in middie outfits who distributed heralds.

Tieups included distribution of bottle hangers by Borden's, navy windows in department stores, Gloria Stuart coiffure in beauty shops and Postal Telegraph hookin. For laugh purposes, theatre announced free admission to any sailor in uniform who had tattooed on his chest, back or arms any song or poem, the stunt suggested by an actual scene in the picture.

Engages Thin Man for Bally on "Thin Man"

A conservatively dressed and unusually tall young man was the street bally used by R. W. Waterson, Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind., for "The Thin Man." Chap carried a lettered book measuring three by four feet along streets and beach two days prior. Circus type heralds were stuffed in papers in exchange for which the newsboys were permitted to see the picture gratis.

A tie-up with a style shop netted window display of Myrna Loy stills which were mounted on cardboard covered with same material displayed in dresses in window.

Waterson also tied in with dairy for a window by showing stills of O'Sullivan drinking milk on the set. Blowups of the star with picture title, cast and playdates were used in window next to theatre and other strategic spots. For trailer mention, the dairy company distributed hangers.

Sedge Coppock Now Stationed in Bermuda

After deliberating on a number of propositions offered since his resignation as manager of the Paramount, Staten Island, New York, Sedge Coppock, well known Round Tabler whose contributions have appeared frequently in these pages, has accepted the post of General Manager of the Bermuda Moving Picture Company, and is now settled in his new assignment, overseeing the operation of ten theatres and a film exchange.

The local papers gave him a splendid welcome, with a flock of page one stories on the change in management and long accounts of Coppock's career in and out of showbusiness. Sedge followed that up with some fast action, immediately running large display ads to announce price and policy changes, and inviting the public to make suggestions and criticisms.

His first picture campaign was directed to the opening of "Scarlet Princess," and in addition to a vigorous newspaper and exploitation drive, letters were sent to a select mailing list calling attention to the fact that the picture was an especial prerelease.

We join with the membership in extending to this able showman every good wish for an unqualified success in his new assignment. Sedge sure will tell 'em how. Here's how, boy.

Quigley Winner for May Made Ticket Sales General Manager for Famous Players Canadian; Fitzgibbons Credits Awards

Indicating definitely that the awarding of the Quigley plaque for May to Gene Curtis had much to do with the promotion of the former manager of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, to an important publicity post, Mr. J. J. Fitzgibbons, general manager, Famous Players Canadian Corp., in a letter to this department supplements his announcement released last week of Curtis' assignment to the newly created position of General Manager of Ticket Sales.

"Although Gene Curtis has been generally known as a capable merchandiser and showman," says Mr. Fitzgibbons, "the Quigley Award was unquestionably a great factor in helping us decide whom we were going to appoint and trust with the responsibility of being our General Manager of Ticket Sales which is to supplement the regular Publicity Department.

"Mr. Curtis will publish our own magazine that will be distributed direct through our theatres—not in the sense of a giveaway, but on direct mailing lists and other methods which will bring the publication directly into the homes of potential patrons. This will be similar to the fan magazines, but, in our opinion, will have greater reader interest plus the fact that here in Canada there is considerable interest in the British studios and we can secure information that does not come through the usual fan magazines. . . ."

The news of the promotion has been received with gratification by Curtis' friends in and out of the industry, congratulatory wires having reached him from all parts of the United States and Canada. Gene's career in showbusiness covers important assignments on both sides of the border. He will headquarter in Toronto.

Davis Also Goes Jungle On "Tarzan" Street Bally

Walter F. Davis, RKO Capitol, Winnipeg, Can., built a five-foot high shadow box, three deep and three wide with floor in the middle and large glass opening for his showing of "Tarzan." With the aid of his staff he took some old fur and part of a coat sleeve and designed a small animal (?) about four inches in diameter and 12 inches long. It was placed crouchingly in the corner as though hiding, with its back to the street.

An electric motor was rigged up to give breathing effect and a few pieces of licorice and saucer of water was placed before the "animule." Card reading "The only live watchermacallit in captivity" and stills of Weissmuller and O'Sullivan drew crowds. Walt says the illusion was baffling and brought constant comment. Humane Society was tipped off that gag was only dummy.

Davis also promoted truck with regular circus wheels (see photo) and built a circus float in which lion was placed. Team of horses guided by two uniformed drivers paraded bally around town. In front of house Davis planted an animated Leo, which worked mechanically, moving head from side to side, opening mouth and uttering growls.

June is the month for brides, so Leonard Goldberg, State Theatre, Quincy, Mass., engineered a stage wedding at his house and got a group of merchants to contribute gifts to the couple. After the wedding a supper party was held at a well-known rathskeller with the proprietor playing host.

Lenny says the stunt went off beautifully, having stressed the whole affair with dignity, running an ad congratulating the happy couple on day of wedding together with participating merchants' ads.

Goldberg is now working on a free trip to the World's Fair and a four-week Carioca contest which shall be detailed in the pages as soon as the report comes through.

Imaginary Gift Contest Staged by Forester

A gag that created a furore for Eddie Forester, Rivoli, Hastings, Neb., was a full-page cooperative ad on "20 Million Sweethearts" done in two colors, to tie in a contest he put over. In order to win prizes, consisting of passes, readers had to submit to the theatre a list of the gifts they would select for Rogers and Powell from merchandise advertised. At least one article from each merchant had to be mentioned together with the name of store. Readers were invited to inspect any of these articles at the various stores.

Another smart gag was a dummy hooked up to the public address system with announcer hid from sight. Eddie had the dummy hold conversations with passersby plugging the attraction, a stunt which he reports created tremendous curiosity.

Neat Display Built by Reynolds and Eichenbaum

Display which was highly colored was constructed of beaverboard and produced the jungle atmosphere without the usual trimmings.

Superstitions Exploited By Kelly on "Black Cat"

A huge black cat cutout made realistic with illuminated green eyes was an important part of Manager George Kelly's advance lobby piece on "The Black Cat" at the Oritani, Hackensack, N. J. On either side were planted figures of Karloff and Lugosi in red, with the title set in front of the figures to give an effect of depth. Entire display was placed atop marquee during the runs.

George made his trailer more interesting with two boys in cat uniforms under green spots on both sides of screen. Boys were also used for street and lobby bally. "Hard luck" windows were also planted with "Friday the 13th" copy, broken mirrors, black cats, etc., making up these displays.

Curran Ties "Palooka" Strip to Campaign

Charlie Curran, United Artists Theatre, Detroit, Mich., tied in with the Free Press on the Palooka strip run in that paper for his showing of the same titled picture. For the special Saturday morning showing a parade was arranged for the newsboys, who formed at the paper's office and accompanied by two bands marched through the streets to the theatre carrying special banners. In front of house, bands gave a concert with cameraman covering event, clip being included in house newsreel.

Conley Borrows Pony For "Circus" Bally

Larry Conley, Bay Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., dug up a large tarpaulin for his showing of "Circus Clown," doubled it to protect carpet, spread it down length of mezzanine and promoted a small white decorative picket fence from a lumber company to close in the track. Sawdust was sprinkled profusely on tarpaulin and a small sign reading "The Saw-Dust Trail" was placed at entrance. Gentle pony was borrowed from one of the kids who was dressed in costume and made Equestrian Director (see photo), all children given free rides.

Larry tied in new drug store opening for free imprinted balloons, filled with gas and also built circus clown wagon piloted around town by three small boys who made all playgrounds and other places where children congregated.

Special circus front was built, using valances of cheap white cloth, painted in waterproof paint with large dots of various colors for background and lettered in red with black stripes through the letters. Varicolored balloons were tied to all lamps under marquee and a "Main Entrance to the Big Show" sign was used across entire marquee. Red circus box-office was built and barker announced the death-defying feats to be seen on the screen.

An additional highlight was an act put on by two highschool boys who were exceptional tumblers, these lads doing their stuff in costume in front of the theatre.

Jungle "Tarzan" Front Created by Rosen

Working on the premise that "to please the eye is a job half done," Bob Rosen, Loew's Orpheum, New York City neighborhood house, constructed a lobby display for his "Tarzan" date consisting of a jungle hut (see photo) surrounded by plants, palms, cocoanut trees, banana trees and a giraffe reaching for the fruit. Behind the hut, hidden from view, was a radio victrola with repeater attached to a record giving Tarzan's jungle cry and plug copy about the picture.

Bob also got out a green colored Jungle News distributed house to house, and grooved tracing pictures were given to school children. A float toured the streets, and the MGM caravan headed by "Mary, the Tarzan Rhino" was parked in front of theatre, while an old couple dressed in rube outfits provided comedy for the onlookers.

Personal Endorsement Used by Andy Anderson

Our good friend Andy Anderson is back in harness at the Empress in Owensboro, Ky., from where he sends us samples of his ads on recent pictures. For "Little Miss Marker" Andy used the personal endorsement gag in his ad, stating that the picture was "so good, we'll guarantee it."

On "20 Million Sweethearts" Andy's newspaper ads all read "Thank you, Owensboro, for your attendance and hearty approval of this swell picture."

Stein Makes Profitable Tieups for Kid Shows

Reported to be a definite box office draw for his kid matinees at the Ritz, Newark, N. J., was Manager Louis Stein's jigsaw giveaways secured from a local jeweler who had had these in stock for some time and was glad to cooperate. Louis obtained the puzzles at a fraction of their cost by placing jeweler's ad on the cover of each box, distributed at each Saturday matinee.

With the same merchant, Stein also promoted a children's popularity contest, prizes amounting to over $100 in cash, photographer also being hooked in to take photos of contestants free of charge.

"13" Stage Setting Gets Feature Story

Tying in with the local Hearst paper for their campaign on "Operator 13," Shake Davidson, manager Paramount Theatre, Omaha, Neb., and Claud Morris, M-G-M exploiteer, secured a special feature writeup on the largest studio stage set ever built for a picture. Daily also carried art layout of Davies and Cooper six days in advance of opening, ran serialization, used car cards, car bumper strips and a large float (see picture) as further bally.

A special front was created with airbrush portraits of the stars in 40x60 display frames, and overhead hanging piece over box office. Code cards were distributed to all downtown business offices in the city and also given out to patrons.

Radio stations gave the picture three announcements daily with fifteen minute special broadcast in evening. Leading drug stores gave window displays for Max Factor products and tieup stills.

ANOTHER ORLOVE ANIMATION

To right is illustration of the finished animated lobby display created by Manager Louie Orlove, for "Moulin Rouge," at the Uptown, Milwaukee. Below are shown the bird's-eye, back and side views of the working plan, which is self-explanatory.

Showmen Score High On "Little Man" Dates

A flock of fine exploitation is reported from various sections of the country on "Little Man, What Now," Manager Bob Rosenthal, Strand, Albany, N. Y., with the help of district chief Charlie Smakowitz promoting a full page ad on children's clothing by the town's biggest store, the full page streamer being title of picture. Store also went for full window on Margaret Sullavan Cinema Shop styles. News distributors tied in by stuffing magazines and bannering delivery trucks. Book store hookups also clicked. Universal-ite Al Nathan cooperated.

In Des Moines, Iowa—

Manager Don Allen, Des Moines Theatre, featured his drive with a newspaper tiein on a "Honeymoon Week." Paper announced in advance and during run that all couples married during date would be guests of theatre and paper. Presentation of marriage certificate was ticket of admission.

For lobby showing, Don used giant pastel and air brush panel heads of star, and in outer lobby planted five shadow box displays. Against this background, stylishly gowned good-looker distributed heralds. Duke Hickey, Universal exploiteer, assisted.

Then In Milwaukee, Wis.—

Stan Meyer effected elaborate book and magazine tieups by tying in the public library for displays in all branches and on distribution of book marks. Liberty distributors stuffed magazines with color photos of Sullavan.

Three leading stores cooperated on Cinema Shop and celebrity fashions giving flash displays and running display ads on the tieup. Stan also mailed 500 postcards to a selected list, and his front was in keeping with his usually effective displays.

Four Weeks to Go On "Clown" Contest

Hundreds of campaigns on the Joe E. Brown "Circus Clown" $250 exploitation contest are reported to have already been received by the Warner home office. Theatremen all over the country are forwarding entries and the contest promises to turn up a raft of ace exploitation.

Midnight of Saturday, Sept. 1, is the closing date of the competition, at which time entries must be at the Warner office in New York, or in the mails, in order to be considered.

The awards are as follows:

First prize, $100. Second prize, $50, and third, $25. Fourth to seventh prizes, $10 each, and eighth to fourteenth prizes, $5 each.

The contest is wide open, subsequent runs and houses with limited budgets will receive the same break as the big spots. Managers are again advised that campaigns on "Circus Clown" will be also given consideration in the Quigley Award. Entries on this picture mailed to the Quigley Awards Committee will, after being judged, be forwarded to the Warner offices.

Lampe Uses Color Ads First Time Locally

Two color newspaper advertising is still unusual and where it has not as yet been used is that much more effective. This is indicated by Gus Lampe, who went for it in his display ads on "Stand Up and Cheer" at the Eckel, Syracuse, N. Y., reporting this as a first time for such theatre advertising.

Gus got a lot out of a Shirley Temple dress tieup, cooperating store getting behind it with window displays, newspaper advertising and fashion show where small girls modeled the desses. This was also plugged in the regular store broadcast.

Another fashion angle that clicked was a hookin with the same store on the Cinema Shop national gown designing contest. Local Kresge stores came in on a lucky number gag, giving carnations to those holding duplicate numbers displayed in lobby. Same store plugged records and fan magazine tieup including distribution of colored star photos.

WHAT MANAGERS NEGLECT TO DO

Prominent Showman Gives First Hand Observations and Various Ideas on Putting Over Pictures

by LIONEL H. KEENE
Loew's Southern Representative
Atlanta, Georgia

We read in MOTION PICTURE HERALD what the managers did to build their business—every issue contains such stories, with photographs of their exploitation activities, but you do not hear what they did NOT do to put a picture over. In my travels in this business over a period of years, in my capacity with the Loew Theatres, I have made it a point to detect what, not only Loew Theatres, but the opposition houses, did not do, of which you rarely hear. In some instances, it is merely my personal viewpoint, but in a great many others, it indicates the individual manager was not alive to an opportunity, did not give the matter sufficient intelligent thought, or decided because the attraction was not a top-notcher, it did not deserve the effort.

The manager sometimes forgets he has in his charge a very important investment that should regularly show the best possible returns, if not in profit then in minimum loss. It is true the expense of advertising his program to the public should be regulated by his knowledge of the possible box office value of the picture, as inconsistent as this appears in our business, but it does not necessarily apply that good exploitation is not possible without an expenditure.

When a "weak" sister is a manager's lot, naturally a strong program of selected short subjects is booked to build it up, in which case, they should be played up in his screen, lobby and newspaper advertising. If a good selection of short subjects is not available that particular week, or at all, perhaps the manager can arrange locally to build up interest in his show. Most times, in most towns, it is available, such as possibly local radio favorites; a fashion show tieup or a kiddie revue which newspapers and local merchants would go for in a big way.

In one town, a local radio station had a contest for the purpose of forming an accordion band, with which the theatre cooperated, the final selection of some twelve odd accordionists being presented on the stage for a full week without any expense to the theatre. The publicity thru the radio station, and local newspaper carried for several months, the theatre always receiving due mention.

Marquee Copy Important

The copy that is placed in a theatre's marquee is important. It is a sales point, and yet, how many times haven't I read a theatre's announcement that indicated the manager had been reminded it was necessary to have some marquee copy for change-day, and, one, two, three, jotted down so many words, just enough to fill the space, failing to give it the advertising thought it deserves. And, to further prove my statement, I've noticed marquee copy with misspelled words indicating no single employee, let alone the manager, had even given this department of his advertising further attention after the copy was once laid out.

The writer of this article is a well known figure in the field of the theatre, especially in the South where he has filled for many years the important post of Loew's Southern Representative. His experience in showbusiness is vast and varied, encompassing every branch of theatre operation from front to back. He knows whereof he speaks.

The different matters taken up on this page by Mr. Keene are to be followed by additional articles from his pen on other theatre phases. We look forward with anticipation to their receipt. —MIKE

The lobby treatment by the local artist deserves especial attention on the part of the manager. Some of the theatre lobbies would indicate he leaves it entirely to the lobby artist. For instance, I have in mind an outstanding attraction that was given the same lobby treatment as an ordinary picture. True, the picture was of sufficient importance to do good business even under the circumstances, but it brought out the fact the manager had not given this department of his theatre operation the attention it deserved.

The mere completion of a lobby for change-day by the artist should not satisfy a manager. First, as previously mentioned, he should get together with the artist and plan the general layout, create new ideas occasionally, rather than become stereotype in its execution. Sales points should be considered. Which mean more to your box office on a particular picture—stars, title, director, author, etc., etc.—and always the producer should be included in the copy.

The selection of black and white stills, 11 by 14 colored photographs, has often been left to the artist, and he does not always use salesmanship in his displays. Some of the best photographs have been given the newspapers, and stores in window tieups, so what's left, the artist uses in his lobby frames. And, mind you, today, we all know the public "shops" for its entertainment just as it does for everything else, as little as it may be buying. So if your lobbies are not good salesmen, the theatre loses a customer.

It has always been my thought that where a lobby artist is not good on portraits of stars, rather than display a lobby card of a star that the public has to study to determine whom it might be, it would be better to cut out the heads from the very attractive lithographs available to the manager on most pictures, and work them into your lobby poster. This is particularly applicable to a house that has two changes a week, and lots of lobby frames to fill.

The expense of lobby work too plays an important part in a manager's operation. The regular use of special built-up fronts which cost money, lose their value. In a survey of his requirements, a manager may find he is crowding his theatre with advertising. The regular use of cutout letters on lobby posters—the use of many forms of tinsel, tinfoil, velour paper now available—all cost, and when that expense gets beyond a certain figure, it is high time for the manager to use his ingenuity in deciding, together with the artist, in what way assists our good old friend and member Pete Egan up at the Palace Theatre in Calgary, Alberta, Can. Dave's a pretty hard worker, acting as usher, exploiteer and assistant to Pete. He's no stranger to our pages and under the able tutelage of Pete, we're willing to wager we'll be hearing great things of Bayne. Here's hoping.

HERBERT MUELLER
joins the club in proper style from the Texas Theatre in Seguin, Tex. where he is the assistant manager. He sends for his club pin and promises to submit some "hot" campaigns soon. We'll be waiting for them, Herb, so don't disappoint us.

manager of the Broadway Theatre in Dover, N. H., joins the Club after reading and taking advantage of our department for the past three years. Lloyd has worked his way up all right, having started as usher, assistant, operator and now is managing the Broadway. So since he has taken advantage of many of the stunts publicized on our pages, we are hopeful he will dig down into his bag of tricks and tell us a few.

is up in Bridgeport, Conn., where he manages the Poli Theatre. Matt comes from the same town as our good friend and active member, Morris Rosenthal. Nothing could suit us better than a little lively competition from these two contributors. What say, Matt? Want to start something in the pages? Morris can take and give it.

is the manager and proprietor of the Pratt City Theatre in Pratt City, Ala. Well, Joe, you are the first member from your city, so a lot of responsibility rests on your shoulders so far as keeping your town represented in our columns. Remember signing on the dotted line doesn't end your obligation to the Club: you've got to pass on a few of your recent stunts for the other boys.

acts as assistant to one of our members, Sam Handler, at the Riviera Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. You're working for a great guy, Barney, and can probably learn all there is to learn from him. Glad to know you enjoyed the last get-together we had and are in favor of another. As soon as the Fall comes around, we'll be having one, so as the saying goes, it won't be long now. In the meantime, if you find yourself in our neighborhood, be sure to come in and say hello.

I. GOLDSTEIN
manages the Strand in Perth Amboy, N. J., and we have slews of members over there. Listen, Goldstein, you're not so far from Club headquarters that you can't come over and pay us a visit some time, are you? If you come up to the reputation of our other Jerseyite members, you'll be an active and valuable one, so here's hoping.

they can have just as effective a lobby at a lesser cost.

Some of the theatre's newspaper ads would indicate the manager does not give their makeup enough thought. Sometimes it would appear just because the manager has so many inches he has been in the habit of using certain days, he uses that amount of space, not necessarily to good advantage. Sometimes a smaller ad would be more effective. Sometimes a picture does not merit the space ordinarily used, particularly if it is a good sized ad, and I refer more particularly to that period of the week when the manager has been able to determine the box office value of his current picture. I do not mean by this a manager should let down altogether on advertising a picture, but certainly if your next picture looks like box office, I'd rather conserve my funds and spend the savings the following week. On the other hand, I find some houses, when they get to the last two days of the picture, their newspaper announcements are almost negligible.

Then there is the manager who will make up his ads for a whole week in advance, which I think is a mistake. It prohibits local color that makes the difference between a good and stereotyped ad. The audience reaction, as well as the newspaper critic's reviews, may give you a thought that you would want to incorporate in your ad—or may even suggest a different type of ad than you planned.

hails from Dayton, Ohio and is the manager of the Ohio Theatre there. Howard comes by his theatrical heritage honestly, because he tells us his father was connected with some of the greatest theatrical enterprises here and abroad. Howard just this past year put "flesh" into his house and reports that things are going very well indeed. Let's hear from you frequently, Berg, we think you'll make a very active member.

We had the pleasure of meeting Howard when he was up in New York a few years ago and hope to see him again. Incidentally, we haven't heard from you in a few weeks. You're not doing right by Nell, are you?

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 234.—(A) What is the area, in fractions of an inch, of one square millimeter? (B) What is meant by the "mil-foot standard of resistance"? (C) How would you calculate the resistance of an electric arc, voltage and amperage being known? (D) Suppose you have 110-volt current, a 60-volt arc, and four 45-ampere, 220-volt fixed resistance available. You want 60 amperes of current. How nearly could you arrange to get it, and how would you hook the resistances up? (The rheostats are regulation 220-volt resistances made for projection work.) (E) Just what inspection do you make of your wires inside the lamphouses, and how often? What condition do they have to be in to receive your O.K.?

Answer to Question No. 228

Bluebook School Question No. 228 was: (A) Just what is a candle meter? (B) Quote the law relating to light intensity at different distances from an open light source and explain its operation. (C) Upon what is the law based? (D) How can we easily prove the law?

Danielson; B. Doe; N. L. Tomlinson and G. Lathrope; L. Grant and R. Geddings; I. H. Lifton and B. L. White; L. B. and D. H. Palmer; M. F. Fallon; D. Lally and F. Ferguson; M. L. Spooner; F. I. Lirral; F. L. Savlor and G. N. Guidotti; H. Hughes and T. E. Mantol; G. L. Bancroft and L. T. Jones; E. L. Arnold; D. L. Patterson; P. O. Brent, J. Collins and C. Martin.

Darned good list for the hot weather slack spell. I'm really proud of you! There were more than 400 correct answers to Section A, though some were more complete than others. Our friends Rau and Evans say, "A candle meter is the measure of illumination supplied by a 'standard' candle at a distance of one meter." Definition of a standard candle will be found on page 45, volume 1, of your Bluebook.

Rau and Evans also say, "The law is: 'light intensity decreases inversely as the square of the distance from its source,' which means that if the light received by a given area from an open light source be 10 candle-power at a distance of one foot, then the light received by the same area at a distance of two feet would be only one-quarter as much, or 2.25 candle-power."

Danielson quotes the law correctly and adds, "This means that light two units away from the light source would have only one-quarter the power or brilliancy it would have if only one unit away, and that at three units distance the illumination would be only one-ninth of that at one unit."

Arntson replies thus: "Light varies inversely as the square of the distance from its source. Light leaving an open source will radiate in every direction, continuing so to do until intercepted by some opaque object. [Not quite correct there. There are translucent objects, transparent objects, etc. —F. H. R.] The distribution of light at different distances might be explained or illustrated as follows: If we have a tank one foot in area filled with water to a depth of one foot, and this water be transferred to a well having four square feet area, we would find the water to be very shallow. There would be 1,728 cubic inches in the one-foot well. In the four-foot square one there would be 27,648 cubic inches, therefore it would take sixteen times as much water to fill the larger area well. It is the same with light and surface area."

Quite an ingenious illustration.

(C) T. Van Vaulkenburg says, "The law in question has its base in the fact that from each point of an open light source rays go forward in all directions 'in sight' of it. These rays therefore are all diverging and since light travels in straight lines, it follows that their power of illumination, viewed as a whole, diminishes as distance from the source is increased."

Personally I am unable to imagine a more lucid, explanatory answer than this, though G. E. Doe also puts it very well. He says, "The law is based in the fact that (1) light rays travel in absolutely straight lines when traversing a perfectly transparent medium of equal density throughout, which subject does not of course exist, but is imagined for the purposes of the law. (2) Rays leaving an open source spread out or diverge, which action is always the same regardless of the character of the light source. The divergence is, under the imaginary condition above described, always exactly the same, therefore with each added unit of increased distance from the source the rays have diverged further, hence their power of illumination per unit of area is less."

(D) J. R. Walker says, "To prove the law, place an incandescent bulb in a tin pan in one side of which a hole has been drilled with the smallest drill obtainable—a jeweler's drill by preference. [A hole one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter will serve if no smaller drill be available—F. H. R.] At a distance of nine feet from a white wall project the beam from this hole and interrupt it at a distance of exactly 2.25 feet from the can, using a cardboard for the purpose. Since the point of interruption is exactly one-fourth of the distance from can to wall, it will be discovered that the area of the illuminated area on the wall will be 16 times as great as the illuminated area upon the cardboard. This in the very nature of things proves that there would be 16 times as much light incident upon one square inch of the cardboard illuminated area as upon one quare inch of the wall area located four times as far away from the source as is the cardboard."

By way of explanation, may I once again say that I rewrite almost all answers.

Brilliant PERFORMANCE

EVERY fine performance on the screen depends upon certain earlier performances . . . not by the cast alone, but by the film in the camera. Because of the dependability and artistic opportunity it affords . . . because of its unfailingly brilliant performance . . . most cameramen and producers prefer Eastman Super-Sensitive Panchromatic Negative with gray backing. DR. DE MILLE ON SEX

SEX, that everblooming hardy perennial of motion picture controversy, was charmingly discussed before a group of newspaper men by Mr. Cecil Blount DeMille, the other day, according to a Hollywood dispatch to Film Daily.

Perhaps it is audacious of us, but we disagree with the master. One may not question what Mr. DeMille knows about sex, but one may question what he says about sex and the screen.

"For some unknown reason those critics who are striking at Hollywood seem to blame the screen for creating sex," said Mr. DeMille.

No one, not even the most fanatic of the reformers, has appeared with a charge that anyone created sex, or that it was per se blameworthy.

"Motion Pictures can not be made without sex. Take it away from films and you take their very life," continues Mr. DeMille.

No one has ever suggested that sex as a factor in life should be taken away from the screen. Mr. DeMille might consult the Production Code under which he has been presumed to be working these several years on that point. The Code appears in full in this issue of The Herald.

"They (motion pictures) must have normal sex," declaims Mr. DeMille.

With that neither we, the Production Code, the Legion of Decency, the exhibitors nor the box office customers could reasonably disagree. However, pardon us for mentioning the matter, but the word normal seems to have been brought up and for the moment our mind's eye is all a-whirl with memories of that celebrated bit of demillinery known now to tradition of the screen as "that Lesbian dance."

"As I remember," continued Mr. DeMille, "this sex business all started in the Garden of Eden with the act of Jehovah when he provided the apple. To blame all that on motion pictures is unfair."

Personally we do not remember that far back, but our reading of history has indicated that it was not Jehovah but in fact his predecessor, Yaveh, who was in charge in the apple era. Yaveh, all the accounts indicate, was rather more stern and lusty, like his people of the period. But even if Mr. DeMille was historically correct, we would share his feeling that the motion picture should not be dividing responsibility for anything with Jehovah.

"To blame the beauty of a woman's body, which neither Lubitsch nor I would ever have the brains to create, is sheer nonsense."

In his own and Mr. Lubitsch's behalf Mr. DeMille is in this passage pleasingly conservative. But he is confused again because brains are not involved in the process. Furthermore he might well have included several other good directors.

"Motion pictures didn't start immodesty. From the time they started to put clothes on a woman's body immodesty began."

Possibly in this Mr. DeMille is correct. We were not present at the time. Also he surely can be credited with an effort to set things back to the original primal norm by reversal of the process.

"Screen critics will have to look further back in the records than motion pictures to locate the cause of sex. As far back as Troy sex played quite a part."

The antiquity of the function of sex is not importantly questioned and has, so far as we are aware, no bearing on any of the issues of the day. But even as far back as Troy there were those that held that some of the functions of sex, however lawful, were not to be performed upon a dais before the populace—or in the Trojan equivalent of Macy's window.

"Irregularities in sex likewise did not originate in Hollywood," said Mr. DeMille. "I seem to remember in the Bible a story about Sodom and Gomorrah and a lot of sex there."

It is true that irregularities in sex did not originate in Hollywood, but the idea of what is called "nance comedy" for the screen did. And as for Sodom and Gomorrah, we seem to remember from that same Bible that they got hell and lots of it. They survive today only as two somewhat disagreeable words. We do not want Hollywood to become the name for something like that.

Mr. DeMille, as all who know him for his acute intelligence and considerable cultural and educational background will appreciate, does not of course appear for himself in the interview quoted here. He steps forth rather as an apologist for a Hollywood school of thought, or what passes for thought.

There is a disposition, which we discussed on this page last week, to purposely misunderstand and distort the meaning of the Production Code which this industry adopted, more or less, more in New York and less in Hollywood, March 31, 1930. That disposition is manifest both within and outside the industry. Inside the industry the Code has been disputed, evaded and finnagled by those who preferred to adhere to the courses of conduct which got them and their industry into trouble.

The Production Code acknowledges sex as a dramatic element and defines somewhat clearly the limits of its treatment for the benefit of those who have to be told what is either good taste or common decency.

NO PLAGIARISM

Dismissing the plagiarism suit of Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes against MGM, federal judge John M. Woolsey in New York held that the Sheldon-Barnes stage play "Dishonored Lady" and the MGM film "Letty Lynton" were inspired by a similar actual happening. . . .

DEFEND FILM LENGTH

Cleveland's Exhibitors Association, through business manager G. W. Erdmann, has advised all local distributors that it will be deemed unfair trade practice to reduce the footage of any feature from its original length as received from the producers, with the exception of such cuts as are ordered by the Ohio Board of Censors. . . .

TRENDLE TAKES OVER

Detroit's George W. Trendle has taken over control of the Paramount in the auto capital from the Kettering Land Company and plans to reopen September 1, probably with stage shows besides pictures. The State, another Trendle deluxe holding, is to reopen at that time. . . .

GREEK IMPROVEMENT

Of comparative interest is the U. S. Department of Commerce report that the 1933-34 film season, just ended in Greece, was considerably better than the previous season, with attendance up 25 per cent, releases 25 per cent greater, taxes sharply dropped, and most exchanges and theatres closing the year with substantial profits. A total of 250 sound films were released during the past season in the country. . . .

PLANS STAGE UNITS

Into a new venture has gone Phil Tyrrell, as producer and booker for a group of southern theatres which will offer a 12 to 14-week route for stage units of 22 to 53 people. Mr. Tyrrell was booking manager for the Radio City theatres under Harold B. Franklin, later for Detroit-Publix. He plans to produce 10 units out of his office, with a field man to handle independent units. . . .

HAPPY YOUNGSTERS

Pittsburgh's film Variety Club, cooperating with Leo G. Altmayer, called "Watermelon King," entertained 20,000 youngsters from 148 institutions last Sunday. A 90-piece orchestra, a talk by Lowell Thomas, clerical addresses, a huge choir, featured the event. Mr. Altmayer first had the idea 15 years ago. . . .

BARRING BROADCASTS

With MGM the latest to take action, most of the Coast producers are understood to be trying to prevent contract players from broadcasting, and concerted action is expected before long. Exhibitors thus see results from their protests that star broadcasts keep theatre patrons at home. . . .

NEW OWNER GROUP

Foreshadowed is formation of a statewide Wisconsin independent exhibitors' association, in the appointment of a committee, Ross Baldwin, Merril Devine, James Boden, to contact prospective members. Present officers and directors of the Allied Independent Exhibitors' Association may resign to permit election of a new slate and selection of a new association name. Already several houses have left the MPTO of Wisconsin to join the Milwaukee group. . . .

GERMAN FILMS WIN

Film theatres in Alsace and Lorraine will be permitted to play German pictures within certain fixed quotas, provided they have obtained the regulation ministerial visa, writes assistant trade commissioner E. A. Masuret, in Paris, to the U. S. Department of Commerce. . . .

BONDHOLDERS SCORE

A point was won by bondholders of General Theatres Equipment Corporation in their suit against Chase National Bank when Supreme Court Justice Steuer signed an order granting a judgment that part of the collateral received by the bank on a loan to the company is held for the bondholders on the ground the security was advanced in violation of the terms of the trust indenture. The action was filed against the bank both individually and as trustee of $30,000,000 in GTE bonds issued April 1, 1930. . . .

DROP PRODUCTION

Producing only "second rate pictures," we "might as well wipe it out," last week declared Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, Canada, announcing the discontinuance of government film production as an economy move. Closed is the studio at Trenton, Ont., its long time director, Major George E. Patton, and his staff given notice. . . .

CENSORS OUT

Ontario's economy wave has rolled over three members of the provincial censor board, veteran chairman J. C. Boylen, Mrs. Edmund Phillips and Mrs. Pearl Thorneloe having been asked to resign by Premier Mitchell Hepburn. Three others are on a temporary service basis. Otter Elliott, former chairman and party worker, is expected to be the new chairman. . . .

STRIKE THREAT

Threatening a strike in Mexico City which may involve film houses in general, the actors' and theatre attaches' union there is fighting to prevent conversion of two houses to the motion picture. Back pay claims are made against both the Iris and Politema. Report has it that the $5,000,000 National theatre may show films to return to a paying basis. . . .

WITHDRAWS SUIT

Harold Auten, sailing for England, said he had withdrawn his action against British International Pictures for "services rendered," after direct negotiations between Mr. Auten and John Maxwell, head of the British company. . . .

CENSOR HEARING

Pressure for a report on the Breibart bill providing for special censorship for films to be shown to children in New York state has brought a public hearing order by the committee on education of the Assembly. . . .

FIGHT OVER CLEARANCE PENALTIES FOR DUALS BROUGHT TO NEW YORK

Test of Boards' Rights to Penalize Double Bills Will Be Made at Code Authority Session in New York Thursday

Mutual agreements among exhibitors to outlaw the showing of double features were being formulated this week for four more territories, St. Louis, Kansas City, New Jersey and New York, while independent exhibitor and independent distributor proponents of the policy were preparing to go to the Code Authority on Thursday with an appeal challenging the right of Local Clearance Boards in the field to penalize double bill houses by writing in longer clearance for them in new zoning schedules.

Most all clearance schedules filed by the 32 Local Clearance Boards penalize duals in one form or another, and a test of the boards' right to effect such a penalization of the system will highlight the meeting of the Code Authority in New York Thursday. The Milwaukee schedule will be the first exhibit offered by those defending the policy. Their basic defense is that there is no clause in the code governing the control of doubles and that it was decided at the Washington code conference that there would be no attempt made to control them.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox, will sit as chairman of the Code Authority on Thursday when the appeal is made against the schedules which, beginning with 1934-35 releases, will set back the clearance for all houses indulging in the practice.

Monogram Leads Fight

Leading the independent exhibitors in the fight is Monogram Pictures. W. Ray Johnston, speaking this week in Hollywood both as president of Monogram and as the independent producer-distributor representative on the Code Authority, warned that independents the country over will protest and appeal direct to the Code Authority the decision of the various Zoning and Clearance Boards penalizing dual programs.

"It is almost a certainty," said Mr. Johnston, "that the members of the Code Authority do not want to be a party to any ruling that is definitely in restraint of trade and will bring down the Department of Justice on their head. The Zoning and Clearance Boards have, in my opinion, far exceeded the authority set out for them in the motion picture code (by penalizing dual bill theatres in clearance schedules).

"The provisions of the code," continued Mr. Johnston, "which set up these boards definitely define the functions that they are to perform and these local boards have gone far afield from their duties set forth under the code.

"I have no doubt but that the restrictions placed by the boards, in so far as they pertain to duals, will be thrown into the waste basket at the next meeting of the Code Authority in New York."

While the decision was being awaited, action was being taken independently by exhibitors in the four sectors to effect a ban on the system, beginning with the new season's product. Circuits are cooperating.

In St. Louis, following months of negotiations, an agreement was signed by Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO of St. Louis, for his members, and by Nelson Cunliff, head of St. Louis Amusements, representing 25 houses, and Fanchon and Marco, with five houses, whereby double features will be eliminated with the advent of the new show season, in September.

One of the first mutual anti-dual agreements entered into by exhibitors in the East will become effective September 3, some 55 independents and all of the large circuits operating in the New Jersey territory adjacent to New York having so agreed. Acting for the independents were Allied States of New Jersey.

All of the Jersey participants appear to be of the opinion that the high cost of film makes it inadvisable to play two features on one program. The circuits interested are Warner Brothers, Loew's, RKO and Skouras Brothers.

New York independent exhibitors met Wednesday to discuss the single film policy.

Injunction at Cleveland

A threatened weakening of the single feature agreement effected some time ago in Cleveland was averted this week when a temporary injunction was granted M. B. Horwitz, of the Haltnorth theatre, prohibiting the Singer-Kaplan Family theatre from showing duals because the Family interests had signed the agreement eliminating the practice in that territory last July 8. Submission of briefs was ordered by Judge Lee Skeel. Loew's, Paramount and RKO in Kansas City this week eliminated duals.

The Code Authority officially informed the motion picture industry last week that the Local Clearance Boards finally have prepared schedules of clearance and zoning, applicable exclusively to release of 1934-35. Decisions of each board and the schedules enacted by them will be furnished to any exhibitor by the secretary of the Clearance Board in his territory.

These decisions complete the work of the boards on the new season schedules, but any party aggrieved by the decision of any board has the absolute right of appeal therefrom to the Code Authority, provided such appeal be filed or mailed by registered mail or delivered in writing to the Code Authority not later than five days after the decision of the local board.

Appeal Right Unqualified

The right of appeal is unqualified and is extended also to non-assentors to the code.

As soon as possible the Code Authortiy will make public the dates of the appeal hearings for the various territories. It is proposed that some of the appeal hearings will be heard locally by a properly and duly constituted committee established by the Code Authority. Others will be heard in New York. Dates of the New York hearings will be announced sufficiently in advance to give every one an opportunity to travel eastward to be heard.

"Fully cognizant of the fact that the selling and buying season for feature pictures for 1934-35 has already commenced, the Code Authority, as a constructive service to the industry at large will expedite the appeal hearings and make the final decisions in order that every interest shall be served as quickly as possible," said John C. Flinn, secretary of the Authority.

All apealed Clearance and Zoning Board decisions shall be ineffective until final decision is made by the Authority.

The Clearance Boards are now inactive and will remain so until reconvened on call by the Code Authority on or about Nov. 1, 1934.

Some 86 cities and towns and parts of territories have had clearance and zoning schedules established to date, as follows, the exchange being shown in each instance in capital letters:

Independent exhibitors protested the Cincinnati schedule, and a new draft for Cincinnati, Dayton and Columbus has been drawn. The final form of the Detroit schedule is expected this week. Kansas City exhibitors have complained about their new schedule. Los Angeles is still under protest, complaints having been filed by MGM, Warners and by independents. Salt Lake City ruled that non-theatrical accounts, including traveling motion picture shows, shall be held to 365 days' clearance over the last regular theatre account.

E. S. Young, operating two theatres in Kansas City and a premium user, announced his intention of defying the vote which ruled out rebates after October 27 in a six-county area, including Kansas City.

What the Production Code Really Says

by TERRY RAMSAYE

The Production Code, the motion picture industry's Magna Charta of official decency, is herewith presented in its official entirety and as news—news, despite the fact that it was adopted March 31, 1930.

It is on the basis of a re-avowal of purpose to adhere to this Code, effective July 15, that the organized industry has arrived at an adjustment with the Legion of Decency movement and thereby expects also to meet the concurrent tide of restrictive movements of the professional militants and censorship advocates.

The Code—now some four years and four months old—is still news to too many persons in the motion picture industry, who have been and are supposed to be operating under it, and to a legion of the external critics and foes of the screen.

Debates Based on Presumptions Arising Out of Ignorance

Most of the debates of the day bearing on the Code and its applications are conducted entirely upon prejudiced presumptions of its content and purposes and the presumptions upon which it was compiled, but in entire ignorance of it.

The document is simple enough, plain enough, but, in common with other written messages, it gets nowhere without the reader.

Certain production factors rode the motion picture headlong into the ordeals and problems of the summer of 1934 by their four-year evasion of the Production Code, in Hollywood. Meanwhile, from New York through these same four years much was heard about the Code from time to time but exceedingly little of the Code itself, its contents and specific purposes and provisions.

The storm of '34 has brought the renewal of the promise of the day of its adoption by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., that cold day in March, 1930.

Commonest among the outcries of today, coming from some places within the industry and from among commentators outside, is the plaint that "America wants redblooded drama" and that now we may have, under the Code, only "sweetness and light and pollyanna production."

No Such Restrictions Found In Any Provision of the Code

One may best reply to that by reference to the Code itself. The original document, as compiled and accepted by the industry, cannot be found to contain any such provision.

One may readily enough find room in Code ruled drama for all the dramatic violence and sins of the flesh that any art might demand. There is prescribed only the general restriction that the spirit of the production on the whole should be sympathetic to civilization and the continuance of society on the basis of the current notions of decency.

Nothing in the Production Code is calculated to prevent the dramatic use and introduction as plot material of murder, rape, harlotry, seduction, adultery, arson, burglary, highway robbery, sedition, treason, piracy, or petit larceny.

The Code does provide and suggest that these violent activities shall not be condoned, promoted or advocated.

The Code does in the main suggest that the motion picture should not be made a device for the vicarious participation in crime.

But no part of this Code can be found to suggest that these elements of human conduct may not be used on the palette of the screen dramatist.

The subjoined official presentations of the content of the Code appear in two parts—first, a working abstract of the Code which has been widely accepted as the complete Code, and, second, the Code proper, which has been referred to as "Reasons Supporting a Code".

TEXT OF THE PRODUCTION CODE

REASONS SUPPORTING CODE

Reasons supporting a code to govern the making of motion and talking pictures formulated by Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., and The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

REASONS SUPPORTING PREAMBLE OF CODE

1. Theatrical motion pictures, that is, pictures intended for the theatre as distinct from pictures intended for churches, schools, lecture halls, educational movements, social reform movements, etc., are primarily to be regarded as entertainment.

Mankind has always recognized the importance of entertainment and its value in rebuilding the bodies and souls of human beings.

But it has always recognized that entertainment can be of a character either helpful or harmful to the human race, and in consequence has clearly distinguished between:

a. Entertainment which tends to improve the race, or at least to re-create and rebuild human beings exhausted with the realities of life; and

b. Entertainment which tends to degrade human beings, or to lower their standards of life and living.

Hence the moral importance of entertainment is something which has been universally recognized. It enters intimately into the lives of men and women and affects them closely; it occupies their minds and affections during leisure hours; and ultimately touches the whole of their lives. A man may be judged by his standard of entertainment as easily as by the standard of his work.

SPECIAL MORAL OBLIGATIONS CITED

So correct entertainment raises the whole standard of a nation.

Wrong entertainment lowers the whole living conditions and moral ideals of a race.

Note, for example, the healthy reactions to healthful, and moral sports, like baseball, golf; the unhealthy reactions to sports like cockfighting, bullfighting, bear baiting, etc.

Note, too, the effect on ancient nations of gladiatorial combats, the obscene plays of Roman times, etc.

2. Motion pictures are very important as art.

Though a new art, possibly a combination art, it has the same object as the other arts, the presentation of human thought, emotion, and experience, in terms of an appeal to the soul through the senses.

Here, as in entertainment:

Art enters intimately into the lives of human beings.

Art can be morally good, lifting men to higher levels. This has been done through good music, great painting, authentic fiction, poetry, drama.

Art can be morally evil in its effects. This is the case clearly enough with unclean art, indecent books, suggestive drama. The effect on the lives of men and women is obvious.

Note: It has often been argued that art in itself is unmoral, neither good nor bad. This is perhaps true of the thing which is music, painting, poetry, etc. But the thing is the product of some person's mind, and the intention of that mind was either good or bad morally when it produced the thing. Besides, the thing has its effect upon those who come into contact with it. In both these ways, that is, as a product of a mind and as the cause of definite effects, it has a deep moral significance and an unmistakable moral quality.

Hence: The motion pictures which are the most popular of modern arts for the masses, have their moral quality from the intention of the minds which produce them and from their effects on the moral lives and reactions of their audiences. This gives them a most important morality

1. They reproduce the morality of the men who use the pictures as a medium for the expression of their ideas and ideals.

2. They affect the moral standards of those who through the screen take in these ideas and ideals.

In the case of the motion pictures, this effect may be particularly emphasized because no art has so quick and so widespread an appeal to the masses. It has become in an incredibly short period the art of the multitudes.

3. The motion picture, because of its importance as an entertainment and because of the trust placed in it by the peoples of the world, has special moral obligations:

A. Most arts appeal to the mature. This art appeals at once to every class, mature, immature, developed, undeveloped, law abiding, criminal. Music has its grades for different classes; so has literature and drama. This art of the motion picture, combining as it does the two fundamental appeals of the looking at a picture and listening to a story, at once reaches every class of society.

B. By reason of the mobility of a film and the case of picture distribution, and because of the possibility of duplicating positives in large quantities, this art reaches places unpenetrated by other forms of art.

C. Because of these two facts, it is difficult to produce films intended for only certain classes of people. The exhibitor's theatres are built for the masses, for the cultivated and the rude, the mature and the immature, the self-respecting and the criminal. Films, unlike books and music, can with difficulty be confined to certain selected groups.

D. The latitude given to film material cannot, in consequence, be as wide as the latitude given to book material. In addition:

a. A book describes; a film vividly presents. One presents on a cold page; the other by apparently living people.

b. A book reaches the mind through words merely; a film reaches the eyes and ears through the reproduction of actual events.

c. The reaction of a reader to a book depends largely on the keenness of the reader's imagination; the reaction to a film depends on the vividness of presentation.

Hence many things which might be described or suggested in a book could not possibly be presented in a film.

E. This is also true when comparing the film with the newspaper.

a. Newspapers present by description, films by actual presentation.

b. Newspapers are after the fact and present things as having taken place; the film gives the events in the process of enactment and with the apparent reality of life.

F. Everything possible in a play is not possible in a film.

a. Because of the larger audience of the film, and its consequential mixed character. Psychologically, the larger the audience, the lower the moral mass resistance to suggestion.

b. Because through light, enlargement of character, presentation, scenic emphasis, etc., the screen story is brought closer to the audience than the play.

c. The enthusiasm for and interest in the film actors and actresses, developed beyond anything of the sort in history, makes the audience largely sympathetic toward the characters they portray and the stories in which they figure. Hence the audience is more ready to confuse actor and actress and the characters they portray, and it is most receptive of the emotions and ideals presented by their favorite stars.

G. Small communities, remote from sophistication and from the hardening process which often takes place in the ethical and moral standards of groups in larger cities, are easily and readily reached by any sort of film.

H. The grandeur of mass settings, large action, spectacular features, etc., affects and arouses more intensely the emotional side of the audience.

In general, the mobility, popularity, accessibility, emotional appeal, vividness, straightforward presentation of fact in the film makes for more intimate contact with a larger audience and for greater emotional appeal.

Hence the larger moral responsibilities of the motion pictures.

REASONS SUPPORTING THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES

1. No picture shall be produced which will lower the moral standards of those who see it. Hence the sympathy of the audience should never be thrown to the side of crime, wrongdoing, evil or sin.

This is done:

1. When evil is made to appear attractive or alluring, and good is made to appear unattractive.

2. When the sympathy of the audience is thrown on the side of crime, wrongdoing, evil, sin. The same thing is true of a film that would throw sympathy against goodness, honor, innocence, purity or honesty.

Note: Sympathy with a person who sins is not the same as sympathy with the sin or crime of which he is guilty. We may feel sorry for the plight of the murderer or even understand the circumstances which led him to his crime. We may not feel sympathy with the wrong which he has done.

The presentation of evil is often essential for art or fiction or drama.

This in itself is not wrong provided:

a. That evil is not presented alluringly. Even if later in the film the evil is condemned or punished, it must not be allowed to appear so attractive that the audience's emotions are drawn to desire or approve so strongly that later the condemnation is forgotten and only the apparent joy of the sin remembered.

b. That throughout, the audience feels sure that evil is wrong and good is right.

2. Correct standards of life shall, as far as possible, be presented.

A wide knowledge of life and of living is made possible through the film. When right standards are consistently presented, the motion picture exercises the most powerful influence. It builds character, develops right ideals, inculcates correct principles, and all this in the attractive story form.

If motion pictures consistently hold up for admiration high types of characters and present stories that will affect lives for the better, they can become the most powerful natural force for the improvement of mankind.

3. Law, natural or human, shall not be ridiculed, nor shall sympathy be created for its violation.

By natural law is understood the law which is written in the hearts of all mankind, the great underlying principles of right and justice dictated by conscience.

REASONS UNDERLYING APPLICATIONS

By human law is understood the law written by civilized nations.

a. The presentation of crimes against the law is often necessary for the carrying out of the plot. But the presentation must not throw sympathy with the crime as against the law nor with the criminal as against those who punish him.

b. The courts of the land should not be presented as unjust. This does not mean that a single court may not be represented as unjust, much less that a single court official must not be presented this way. But the court system of the country must not suffer as a result of this presentation.

REASONS UNDERLYING PARTICULAR APPLICATIONS

Preliminary:

1. Sin and evil enter into the story of human beings and hence in themselves are dramatic material.

2. In the use of this material, it must be distinguished between sin which repels by its very nature, and sins which often attract.

a. In the first class come murder, most theft, many legal crimes, lying, hypocrisy, cruelty, etc.

b. In the second class come sex sins, sins and crimes of apparent heroism, such as banditry, daring thefts, leadership in evil, organized crimes, revenge, etc.

The first class needs far less care in treatment, as sins and crimes of this class are naturally unattractive. The audience instinctively condemns and is repelled.

Hence the important objective must be to avoid the hardening of the audience, especially of those who are young and impressionable, to the thought and fact of crime. People can become accustomed even to murder, cruelty, brutality, and repellant crimes, if those are sufficiently repeated.

The second class needs real care in handling, as the response of human natures to their appeal is obvious. This is treated more fully below.

3. A careful distinction can be made between films intended for general distribution, and films intended for use in theatres restricted to a limited audience. Themes and plots quite appropriate for the latter would be altogether out of place and dangerous in the former.

Note: In general the practice of using a general theatre and limiting its patronage during the showing of a certain film to "Adults Only" is not completely satisfactory and is only partially effective.

However, maturer minds may easily understand and accept without harm subject matter in plots which do younger people positive harm.

Hence: If there should be created a special type of theatre, catering exclusively to an adult audience, for plays of this character (plays with problem themes, difficult discussions and maturer treatment) it would seem to afford an outlet, which does not now exist, for pictures unsuitable for general distribution but permissible for exhibitions to a restricted audience.

I. Crimes Against the Law

The treatment of crimes against the law must not:

1. Teach methods of crime.
2. Inspire potential criminals with a desire for imitation.
3. Make criminals seem heroic and justified.

Revenge in modern times shall not be justified. In lands and ages of less developed civilization and moral principles, revenge may sometimes be presented. This would be the case especially in places where no law exists to cover the crime because of which revenge is committed.

Because of its evil consequences, the drug traffic should not be presented in any form. The existence of the trade should not be brought to the attention of audiences.

The use of liquor should never be excessively presented even in picturing countries where its use is legal. In scenes from American life, the necessities of plot and proper characterization alone justify its use. And in this case, it should be shown with moderation.

II. Sex

Out of regard for the sanctity of marriage and the home, the triangle, that is, the love of a third party for one already married, needs careful handling. The treatment should not throw sympathy against marriage as an institution.

Scenes of passion must be treated with an honest acknowledgment of human nature and its normal reactions. Many scenes cannot be presented without arousing dangerous emotions on the part of the immature, the young or the criminal classes.

Even within the limits of pure love, certain facts have been universally regarded by lawmakers as outside the limits of safe presentation.

In the case of impure love, the love which society has always regarded as wrong and which has been banned by divine law, the following are important:

1. Impure love must not be presented as attractive and beautiful.
2. It must not be the subject of comedy or farce, or treated as material for laughter.
3. It must not be presented in such a way as to arouse passion or morbid curiosity on the part of the audience.
4. It must not be made to seem right and permissible.
5. In general, it must not be detailed in method and manner.

III. Vulgarity; IV. Obscenity; V. Profanity hardly need further explanation than is contained in the Code.

VI. Costume

General principles:

1. The effect of nudity or semi-nudity upon the normal man or woman, and much more upon the young and upon immature persons, has been honestly recognized by all lawmakers and moralists.

2. Hence the fact that the nude or semi-nude body may be beautiful does not make its use in the films moral. For, in addition to its beauty, the effect of the nude or semi-nude body on the normal individual must be taken into consideration.

3. Nudity or semi-nudity used simply to put a "punch" into a picture comes under the head of immoral actions. It is immoral in its effect on the average audience.

4. Nudity can never be permitted as being necessary for the plot. Semi-nudity must not result in undue or indecent exposures.

5. Transparent or translucent materials and silhouette are frequently more suggestive than actual exposure.

VII. Dances

Dancing in general is recognized as an art and as a beautiful form of expressing human emotions.

But dances which suggest or represent sexual actions, whether performed solo or with two or more, dances intended to excite the emotional reaction of an audience, dances with movement of the breasts, excessive body movements while the feet are stationary, violate decency and are wrong.

VIII. Religion

The reason why ministers of religion may not be comic characters or villains is simply because the attitude taken toward them may easily become the attitude taken toward religion in general. Religion is lowered in the minds of the audience because of the lowering of the audience's respect for a minister.

IX. Locations

Certain places are so closely and thoroughly associated with sexual life or with sexual sin that their use must be carefully limited.

X. National Feelings

The just rights, history, and feelings of any nation are entited to consideration and respectful treatment.

XI. Titles

As the title of a picture is the brand on that particular type of goods, it must conform to the ethical practices of all such honest business.

XII. Repellant Subjects

Such subjects are occasionally necessary for the plot. Their treatment must never offend good taste nor injure the sensibilities of an audience.

Marie Dressler's Maid Gets $50,000

Marie Dressler remembered the faithful services for over 25 years of her maid, Mamie Cox, and the maid's husband, James, when she wrote her will, leaving them $50,000, Mamie receiving $35,000 and James $15,000.

Miss Dressler's will was filed in Los Angeles last week and while the value of the estate was not given it was said to total in excess of $300,000. Alan B. Walker, who with his wife cared for Miss Dressler during her last illness, was made executor of the estate, the bulk of which will go to Miss Dressler's sister, Bonita Ganthony, who lives in England.

MILLS ANSWERS EXHIBITOR THREATS OF RETALIATION ON MUSIC TAX RAISE

American Society's Executive Charges "Smoke Screen" by Large Interests, Lawyers and the "Professional" Leaders

Organized and unorganized exhibitor protests against the publicly announced plan of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to increase the music reproduction fee charged theatres, commencing October 1, were heard in New York this week from all principal theatre centers.

The protests crystallized into nothing more than threats of retaliation voiced unofficially by members of the Exhibitors' Emergency Council, and independently by others, that:

(1) Wholesale cancellation of exhibitor agreements with the Society would be affected in a countrywide strike against the higher scale;

(2) Congressional action to regulate or to take away the rights of the Society will be asked at the next session;

(3) An anti-trust suit will be filed in the federal courts seeking dissolution of the Society;

(4) The Department of Justice will be asked to investigate ASCAP.

To all this the society replied, through E. C. Mills, its general manager: "They can't scare us."

"The large interests, the lawyers and the 'professional' exhibitor leaders are setting up a smoke screen of propaganda to blind the rank and file of exhibitors as to the true situation," said Mr. Mills. "The large interests are trying to get the little fellow to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for them, while neither the lawyers nor the exhibitor leaders can be successful unless the industry is engaged in controversies. The exhibitors are always eventually assessed to foot the legal bill for these fights."

Says Courts Have Spoken

Sitting calmly in the society headquarters in the Paramount Building overlooking Times Square, Mr. Mills said he was prepared to battle, singlehanded, with any army of expensive legal talent that may be drafted for the attack.

"Exhibitors cannot cancel their agreements with us, because those agreements are legal contracts," he said. "And, if they do cancel and then infringe upon any of our 6,000,000 copyrighted musical numbers we will sue them for judgments—and collect. Our position has been upheld in the courts too many times to leave any doubt as to the outcome on this score. Furthermore, if the infringement is deliberate they are liable to criminal action."

He warned that the members of any exhibitors' committee who urge exhibitors to infringe upon copyrighted numbers are liable to criminal action too. They could be charged with conspiracy, he said.

However, the plan for cancellation in its present, highly tentative form calls for the elimination, both in studios and theatres, of copyrighted music and the substitution of either music written and composed by the producers' own music staffs or of music recognized to be in the "public domain." It has even been suggested that theatre owners eliminate from their booking schedules all films containing copyrighted music, the exhibitors to pay for but not play such pictures. Such action is held unlikely, even though the amount of copyrighted music in features at present is called negligible.

Copyright Law Upheld

The possibility of exhibitors getting Congressional action to have the copyright laws revised to regulate or dissolve the society was belittled by Mr. Mills, who pointed out that the copyright law under which the 45,000 ASCAP members are protected has been upheld in virtually every country in the world.

"Nor will the courts uphold any charges of illegality," he added. "The broadcasters now have pending a suit charging monopoly. There is no need of the industry wasting time and money on a similar action. The decision in the broadcasters' case will settle the point for all interests. And we're not afraid of the outcome."

The Exhibitors' Emergency Council, in New York, has been studying the broadcasters' complaint, written by Newton D. Baker, and if such a suit is decided upon it is expected the exhibitors' complaint will closely parallel that of the broadcasters, who seek dissolution of the society as a monopoly in restraint of trade.

Answers Inquiry Threat

Reports from exhibitor quarters in the East that the Federal Trade Commission or the Department of Justice will be asked to investigate the society were dismissed by Mr. Mills with the statement "The Department of Justice has been investigating ASCAP for two years."

"We have been over the same ground before," said Mr. Mills, "and I think it is an imposition on exhibitors to raise a lot of money from among them to pay highpriced lawyers and exhibitor leaders for such actions as those which are said to be under consideration."

Although legal procedure against the society under the anti-trust laws is said to be favored by the Exhibitors' Emergency Committee, which was formed to oppose the music tax increase, the actual procedure will be left to an outside law firm to be retained within the next few days, it was decided Tuesday at a meeting in New York.

Walter Vincent, chairman, appointed a permanent legal committee whose first business will be to agree on the law firm to be retained for the court battle. On the committee are Leopold Friedman, Loew's, chairman; Edwin G. Levy, MPTOA counsel; Abram F. Myers, Allied States counsel; Milton C. Weisman, ITOA counsel, and I. E. Lambert, RKO.

When the exhibitors' counsel has been engaged, the Emergency Committee will reconvene to select a nationwide committee of 100 exhibitors who will formulate sectional plans for contacting U. S. senators and representatives and candidates at the fall elections to enlist support for new legislation. This field committee will also aid in developing a financing plan.

Legal moves also may be undertaken to obtain a reversal of the federal court ruling the ASCAP's activities are not interstate.

Warns Against "Victimizing"

Mr. Mills later reiterated a warning to the owners of small theatres not to be "victimized" by the large interests, which, he said, are trying to involve them, unnecessarily, in the fight. He again reminded the industry that the present music royalty fees paid in exhibition are not equalized, all owners paying the same basic rate of ten cents a seat, regardless of the extent to which they employ music. Mr. Mills said that the large theatres will be hit hardest by the new scale, "as they should be," whereas the new rate for small houses comes pretty close to that which the small owner is now paying.

The increase runs as high as 1,000 per cent over present payments for large houses.

To the large interests Mr. Mills offered the suggestions that they (1) openly admit that the Society's members have rights; (2) admit that these composers and authors do contribute considerably to the industry; (3) admit that they should be paid something for that contribution.

"The Exhibitors' Committee in its last discussion with our people not only evidenced the arbitrary attitude that they won't pay any increase for the use of our properties, but that they should not have to pay anything for the music in the first place."

Charges Lack of Ethics

Mr. Mills charged that those who are leading the fight against ASCAP, and who have participated in the discussion prior to announcement of the increase, lack "good business ethics and good business morals."

"Our door is wide open to talk with any committee that is reasonable," he added.

"The excuse given by the large interests that they are in receivership and cannot afford to pay any increase does not and will not get any sympathy from us," Mr. Mills declared. "In the first place, they themselves are responsible for the receiverships. They were not satisfied with film rentals alone, but set out selfishly to monopolize exhibition, overseating the country and ruining the business almost everywhere. They wanted to be hogs and beat the little fellow."

GAUMONT INVADING U. S. MARKET IN EXCHANGE, THEATRE, HOLLYWOOD

23 Branches Expected by Middle of September, Production Unit Before End of Year; Roxy Theatre Deal Near

Gaumont-British, England's most powerful producer-distributor-exhibitor company and capitalized at millions of pounds sterling, is ready to enter the motion picture market in this country on a scale comparable with the large American companies, constituting the most important invasion of this market ever made by British interests. By the middle of September there are to be at least 23 Gaumont exchanges set up in key cities. A Gaumont production unit may be established in Hollywood before the end of the year. To this end, Michael Balcon, Gaumont production executive in London, will arrive within two months. Jeffrey Bernerd, general manager of Gaumont-British, is already on the scene, having arrived in New York over the week end to set up the corporate structure of the new American company. Mark Ostrer, Gaumont-British president, will arrive in New York August 15, to conclude the final details.

Gaumont is going after not only a corner but a very appreciable portion of the whole market in this country, and is confident it can win it, Mr. Bernerd said. "We shall proceed in a small and quiet way and try to gain the confidence of American exhibitors," he explained.

As to any possibility that the American industry might attempt to "squeeze out" Gaumont from this market. Mr. Bernerd indicated that while such action might place the company's plans in a "very serious position," American distributors would do well to remember that Gaumont-British controls nearly 400 theatres in Great Britain alone.

Asks "Fair Chance"

"We are not anxious to enter the exchange and theatre business in America, but we have to do it to get representative bookings," he declared. "The company has 26 features set for 1934-35 release and the best offer it has been able to get from an American distributor is for five," he added.

It is Mr. Bernerd's contention, as well as that of Mark Ostrer, Gaumont-British executive, that British motion pictures can bring as much money into the American box office as can American product, "if given a fair chance."

The barrier to British films thus far in America, Mr. Bernerd said, has been the exhibitor himself, and not the public. American exhibitors have been almost unanimous in making up their minds before the showing of a British film that their patrons are not going to like it, he declared, with mediocre exploitation a resultant, an attitude often caught up by the public.

"If the American public is given a fair chance to see British films I feel certain the exhibitor will find that, given proper treatment, he will make as much money with them as he can with native product," Mr. Bernerd declared.

Calls Quality Comparable

Great Britain has demonstrated that it can make pictures comparable in quality and technique to those turned out by Hollywood, he said, with the quality standard in many instances even considerably higher.

There is no such thing as an "English accent," he said; persons either speak English or they do not. As Mr. Bernerd expressed it, the American "dialect" is far more difficult of comprehension by the British public than English as spoken by Englishmen to the average American audience.

The whole problem, he said, is one of poor timing, and any possible failure of British players to "get across" in this country has been due almost entirely to their rapidity of speech.

"Clarity and timing is the answer," he declared. "The British public managed to master the intricacies of American dialects and slang and accepted them. If the pictures are good enough, which they are, and if exhibitors in this country will try to sell them, the American public will accept British films, accent or no accent."

"I honestly do not believe 'Cavalcade' failed to click in the rural sections of America because of the 'English accent'," Mr. Bernerd said. "I think it was due entirely to lack of appreciation or, possibly, misunderstanding of a back-slapping patriotism of a strange country."

Mr. Bernerd explained that Gaumont plans to make pictures which will find in American audiences some semblance of that apparently lacking appreciation. American stars and featured players will be engaged, if necessary. Already George Arliss has been signed for three Gaumont productions in 1934-35, and two other American stars who rank in the same class with Mr. Arliss have been approached. Gaumont plans to have available at least half a dozen stellar American names.

Roxy Theatre Deal Near

Mr. Bernerd confirmed reports that Gaumont planned to take over the original first-run Roxy theatre on Seventh avenue as its main show-window. He said he hoped to have the matter settled by the end of this week. As to acquisition of other theatre properties throughout the country:

"We have enough theatres in England to worry about. What we're chiefly interested in is selling pictures and not in exhibition in this country."

Gaumont's established policy of trade showing all product before selling is to be maintained in America, he said. That exhibitors should have to buy film sight unseen is an unfair practice, he said, blaming it to poor quality of pictures.

Mr. Bernerd said that if American producers, with very few exceptions, continue to make the type of films that have come out of Hollywood the last year, they will find themselves in exactly the same position in England as did British producers up to two or three years ago.

Jeffrey Bernerd, General Manager, Says Exhibitor Himself Has Been Barrier to British Product, Not the Public

"We were up against it three years ago," he said. "The quality of our pictures was nothing to boast about and we actually could not sell them to our own exhibitors. If the same sort of 'tripe' which has been coming out of Hollywood all this past year continues, American companies are going to find themselves in the same predicament. The British public will not stand for it much longer."

With him Mr. Bernerd brought seven pictures: "Chu Chin Chow," "Jew Suss," "Little Friend," "My Song for You," with Jan Kiepura; Evelyn Laye in "Princess Charming," "Unfinished Symphony" and "Man of Aran." In two months, he said, George Arliss will start work in England on "Iron Duke," a story of the Duke of Wellington.

Fox Profits for Six Months Top $1,199,214 Mark

Consolidated net profit of Fox Film Corporation in the first half of the current year totaled $1,199,214 after federal taxes amounting to $190,000, equal to 49 cents a share in the 2,436,409 combined Class A and B stock, the company reported last week.

In the first half of 1933, there was a loss of $482,406. The company was reorganized on April 1, 1933.

For the 13 weeks ended June 20, 1934, the net profit was $393,866 after charges and taxes, equal to 16 cents a share on combined stocks, against $805,376, or 33 cents, on the previous quarter, and a profit of $74,717 after charges but before Federal taxes on July 1, 1933.

Consolidated earned surplus at the end of June, 1934, stood at $2,913,312, contrasted with $1,674,354 at the end of 1933, which has all been accumulated since the reorganization, the report pointed out.

Penna. MPTO Protests MGM's Trailer Plans

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania this week protested against the plan of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to distribute its own trailers beginning January 1, 1935, on the grounds that it means added operating costs to the theatre man, which today's economic conditions will not permit.

Machinery Created For Labor Peace

General Hugh S. Johnson has finally created the official NRA machinery which places in all Code Authorities the power of adjusting labor disputes within their own industries without having to depend upon outside adjudication by the present NRA agencies.

At the same time, Division Administrator Sol Rosenblatt, in charge of amusement codes, warned that while violence in theatre labor disputes is for state and local authorities to handle, it becomes a federal matter when it assumes aspects of racketeering and will be turned over to the Department of Justice.

Modification of existing procedure to harmonize code machinery for the adjustment of labor disputes and complaints with that established in the recently created National Labor Relations Board was explained by General Johnson in the following Administrative Order, which automatically becomes part of the NRA law:

Text of Administrative Order

1. With respect to labor complaints:

A. Code Authorities that have not already done so, are requested to submit to the Administrator for approval, plans for the handling of labor complaints. Until such plan has been approved, a Code Authority is not authorized to handle labor complaints, with the exception of complaints voluntarily registered with the Code Authority.

B. Complaints may be handled by a bi-partisan committee, if desired; or, if such method is not deemed practicable or desirable, by a committee composed of impartial members. In either event, the plan of organization and the personnel of the committee are subject to approval by the Administrator.

C. In many instances, it will be found practical for groups of related trades or industries to cooperate in establishing a single committee. In view of the potential resulting economy, efficiency and elimination of overlapping, serious consideration of this type of plan is urged.

D. If an industry, due to small size or other good cause, prefers that labor complaints should be handled by the Compliance Division of the NRA, a request to that effect will be considered and a decision reached in the light of the facts involved.

2. With respect to labor disputes:

A. This Administrative Order does not affect boards heretofore authorized to deal with labor disputes.

B. Industries are not necessarily required by NRA to set up boards under codes, for the handling of labor disputes. Any industry contemplating such a board should study Public Resolution 44 of the Seventy-third Congress and the subsequent Executive Order No. 6763 of June 29, 1934, creating the National Labor Relations Board and should consult said Board and the Administrator.

C. Cases heard by boards heretofore or hereafter authorized to deal with labor disputes may be reviewed by the National Labor Relations Board. Moreover, such boards may be designated as special boards or otherwise effected by the President.

Questionnaire on Wage Scale

The first meeting of the socalled "fact-finding" committee named recently by Mr. Rosenblatt to study the New York operators' situation, was held and it was decided to send questionaires to all parties interested in establishing the proposed basic wage scale.

Laboratory Code Is Up Next Week

Public hearing on proposed amendments to the NRA's approved code of fair competition for the motion picture laboratory industry, together with the Code Authority's proposed budget and basis of contribution to defray the cost of code administration, will be conducted by Acting Division Administrator William P. Farnsworth, on Tuesday, August 14, in the Raleigh Hotel at Washington.

The proposed budget totals $21,157. The code provides for contributions to be made by industry members on the basis of number of employees.

Two schedules of amendments are proposed; one by the Motion Picture Laboratories Association of America, Inc., original proponents of the code, and the other by the National Recovery Administration. The last named proposals take the form of a revised code. The present code was approved last September, and its form is more or less obsolete when compared with codes now being approved, according to the NRA.

The present code makes the board of directors of the Laboratories Association the Code Authority. The Administration now proposed a Code Authority composed of four representatives of the association and four representatives of non-members of the association. An impartial chairman would be included.

The Administration also proposes a general $1.00 per week increase in the minimum wage scales, except for skilled employees already classified in the code, and a 35-hour week.

The association's chief recommendation also is directed at the Code Authority, it being proposed that the board of directors shall nominate 9 persons, to be voted on by the members of the industry.

Court Halves RKO Allowances

A petition for interim allowances totaling $225,000 filed by Irving Trust Co., and Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard for services in the RKO receivership were more than halved by Federal Judge William Bondy in entering a final order on the petition in New York last week. The total fees allowed by the court aggregated $105,000.

Irving Trust, RKO receiver, asked for $100,000 and was allowed $35,000. The Donovan firm, attorneys for the receiver, petitioned for $125,000 and were allowed $70,000.

These fees are partial allowances only, covering the period from Jan. 27, 1933, to June 1, 1934.

School Boards As Censors Proposed

Local school boards would be held responsible for all pictures shown to children in their communities under a proposal discussed in Washington by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The Congress stated that pictures for juveniles "should be produced, distributed and exhibited by educators, dramatists and playwrights of professional standing, instead of those motivated solely by a desire for personal profit."

The plan also will include an attack upon the industry and support of legislation to control such trade practices as block booking.

"The parent-teacher organization will cooperate with educational institutions and government departments to secure improvement in the selection and treatment of subject matter used in film productions," said Mrs. Robbins Gilman, national chairman. "We shall not cooperate with companies conducting recreation for profit, either by previewing or by listing theatrical films in any connection."

"Reports this week indicated that 13,000,000 Catholics have signed Legion of Decency pledges to boycott pictures adjudged indecent. This means that the drive has been organized in two-thirds of the 105 dioceses.

In the field, Legion of Decency activities were reported as follows:

Eighty-two films were approved by the Buffalo Legion.

The Chicago Legion condemned as unfit 20 films. Legion vigilance committees visited theatres continuing to show blacklisted films.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate in Ohio promised, if elected, to use his power to "improve movies."

Houston Baptists joined the Legion movement.

The Catholic Register of Kansas City stated Joseph I. Breen does not represent the Church and charged that producers conside it "good politics" to have appointed him because he is a Catholic.

The book sponsored by Motion Picture Research Council, "Our Movie Made Children," was characterized by Dr. Kimball Young as "distinctly unfair" to sociologists and misleading to the public.

"Advertising superlatives" and "salacious films" were attacked at a New Orleans Better Films Council meeting.

Frank L. Newman, head of Evergreen States Theatres, told a Seattle radio audience that clean films are a certainty from now on.

Vitaphone Bookings Increase 35 Per Cent

Vitaphone's summer bookers' drive has bettered last year's campaign by 35 per cent, according to Norman H. Moray, director of sales for the trailers and short subjects.

Warner deals, including features, have been closed with the Butterfield circuit of 31 Michigan theatres, William Keyes of Dayton, Ike Libson of Cincinnati and Louisville, Milton Feld, Charles Olson and Fred Dolle in Indiana.

British Agent

Warners production and release. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Screen play by Laird Doyle. From the novel by H. Bruce Lockhart. Photography, Ernest Haller. Cast: Leslie Howard, Kay Francis, William Gargan, Phillip Reed, Irving Pichel, Walter Byron, Ivan Simpson, Halliwell Hobbes, Arthur Aylesworth, J. Carroll Naish, Cesar Romero, Alphone Ethier, Tenen Holtz, Doris Lloyd, Marina Schubert, George Pearce, Gregory Gaye, Paul Porcasi, Addison Richards, Walter Armitage. Previewed, July 31. Running time, 72 mins.

Superb artistry and distinguished craftsmanship in every department combine to make 'British Agent' a picture of quality, fulfilling every requirement for high class entertainment and a smash hit. With Leslie Howard and Kay Francis heading a splendid cast for the draw, and direction which outstandingly develops a powerful, dramatic story, this love tale of opposed conspirators against a background of Russian revolution comes to the box office with big initial momentum.

Howard and Francis are strikingly effective in their restrained, but emotionally rich handling of the top roles, and every member of the company, including the smallest bit, has been tellingly assigned in an exceptionally smart job of casting. Deserving special honors are William Gargan, Phillip Reed, Irving Pichel, Halliwell Hobbes, Ivan Simpson, J. Carroll Naish, Walter Byron, Tenen Holtz, Gregory Gaye and Doris Lloyd.

Laird Doyle has done a fine dramatic writing job in liberally adapting the Russian wartime memoirs of H. Bruce Lockhart. Dialog is crisply selective and advances the story with smooth and powerful precision.

Michael Curtiz turns in what is probably his best job of direction, sweeping along intimacies of romance and larger movements of riot and political upheaval with unerring dramatic instinct. He contributes his large share of good taste to a picture which never once deviates from refinement and sense of eye-witness reality.

The main scene is the dangerous, critical life in and around British diplomatic offices in Petrograd and Moscow when the Allies strove to prevent Russia from making separate peace and to stave off the red revolution. Howard is a consul general, operating secretly, loving and being beloved of Kay Francis. She, a confidential secretary and spy for the commissars and Cheka police, betrays him in the name of patriotism, but political amnesty in the end saves them for each other.

Suspense builds tremendously through fateful episode and character clash, and the weakest spot in the picture is the end, where the lovers are kept alive for the sake of general audience satisfaction, perhaps, instead of meeting the artistically demanded death they expect.

One of the high merits is the way the revolutionary political phases have been handled to keep them valid and potent without offense. Technical direction and photographing also rate high praise, as does the orchestration of Leo F. Forbstein.

Loew 40-Week Profit Is More Than Doubled

Loew, Inc., reported a profit of $5,750,750 for the 40-week period ending June 7, 1934, comparable with a profit for the same period in 1933 of $2,336,027.

Operating profit for the period in 1934 amounted to $9,631,012. In 1933 the operating profit was $5,695,809.

Depreciation and taxes in the 40-week period ended June 7 was $3,880,262, wihle in 1933 it was $3,359,782.

The profit for the 40 weeks amounted to $3.45 a share on the common stock, as compared with $1.11 for the corresponding period in 1933.

SMPE Nominates Tasker President

Homer G. Tasker, of United Research Corporation, Long Island City, was nominated for president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers for 1935 at a meeting of the board of governors. Since Mr. Tasker was the only nominee for president, his election, to be held soon by mail ballot, is assured. This is also true of nominees for other executive offices since only one nominee each was chosen for the offices of executive vice-president, editorial vice-president, convention vice-president, secretary and treasurer. The nominees were, respectively, Emery Huse, J. I. Crabtree, W. C. Kunzmann, J. H. Kurlander and T. E. Shea.

Nominees for the board of governors were: Max C. Batsel, RCA Victor; Sidney K. Wolf, Electrical Research Products; Terry Ramsaye, Quigley Publications, and Harry Rubin, Paramount Publix. Election of all officers will be announced at the fall meeting at the Pennsylvania hotel, October 29. Their duties begin January 1.

Hudson Joins Trendle Circuit

Earl Hudson left New York Tuesday by motor for Detroit to take charge of publicity and exploitation for the circuit of Trendle theatres.

Mr. Hudson, a former magazine publisher and newspaper man, was associated with First National in an executive production capacity for seven years, and was assistant to J. D. Williams when Mr. Williams was general manager of First National. He was associated with the Angus Company in the operation of Motion Picture News, until 1930.

Warner To Sell Fay Film

"Fool's Advice," produced at the Columbia studio by Frank Fay two years ago, will be released on the new Warner program. The film, with Fay as star, is understood to have been recommended to Warner by Father Couglin, Detroit radio priest.

NEW METROPOLITAN CIRCUIT BID WAITED

Loew-Warner Overtures Withdrawn; Independent Interests Strengthened by a Merger

The Loew-Warner bid for Fox Metropolitan Playhouses in New York was withdrawn late last week and it immediately became apparent that new outside bids might be brought into the reorganization proceedings of the circuit. The only official reason given for the Loew-Warner withdrawal was that the bidders had decided the deal would be "unprofitable." It was understood, however, that the bidders and the Fox Metropolitan bondholders' committee had reached an impasse.

Legal actions of minority bondholder groups seeking reorganization under the new bankruptcy laws furnished further complexities to the situation. Too, the Department of Justice at Washington has maintained a skeptical attitude toward the negotiations, the feeling being that consummation of the Loew-Warner deal might result in a virtual monopoly in the New York theatre field by these two. Unofficial reports this week indicated that the Department had brought pressure to bear.

$3,000,000 Bid Prepared

An unidentified group is preparing to make a bid of $3,000,000 for the Fox Metropolitan circuit, it was revealed this week by David W. Kahn, New York attorney who has been connected with various theatre interests. Mr. Kahn would not name the clients for whom he is preparing the bid.

Also the possibility of Warner making an independent bid in the event the circuit goes through a foreclosure sale was disclosed this week by that company's legal department.

There is a possibility that Warner may bid only for the 18 New Jersey houses in the Fox group. Under the withdrawn joint Loew-Warner bid, Warner was prepared to participate up to $900,000 of the total $4,500,000, and was to acquire the Jersey holdings only.

Any new bids would likely be withheld until the end of this week,when Fox Metropolitan is required to file an answer to the petition of a minority group of bondholders for reorganization under the new bankruptcy laws.

Independents Merge

Independent theatre interests of Greater New York this week were fortifying themselves for a fight against the established major circuits. The first move in this direction came in the form of a merger between Springer & Cocalis and Consolidated, the two largest unaffiliated circuits in the territory, the former having 36 theatres and Consolidated 14 houses. The chief beneficiary under this deal will be Consolidated, which has been unable to demand concessions on playing time in RKO and Loew booking situations.

Pooling deals among Skouras, Randforce and RKO, which have been in force for two years, came to an end last week, and there were indications that Skouras might enter the Springer & Cocalis and Consolidated pool.

Regardless of the Loew-Warner withdrawal from Fox Metropolitan negotiations, RKO in New York is continuing its plan of expansion. More than a dozen additional theatres have been acquired by the Keith-Albee-Orpheum group of RKO the past two months and about six deals for theatres in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Long Island are soon to be concluded.

Pooling negotiations between Prudential and Century circuits in New York, which had been dropped temporarily, were resumed last week and consummation is expected at an early date.

Warner Adds Four in New Jersey

Continuing its program of theatre acquisition in New Jersey, Warner last week took over operation of four Bratter & Pollock theatres: the Rex, Irvington; Rahway, Rahway; Ritz, Lyndhurst; and Lincoln, Arlington.

In Milwaukee and the surrounding territory, Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises, Inc., is strengthening its hold with the acquisition of the Alhambra, operated by Fred S. Meyer until its closing a month ago; the Oriental and Tower and the Shorewood and the Downer, all neighborhood houses.

In Ohio, Famous Theatres Corporation has taken over eight theatres to be operated by subsidiaries.

350 Day-and-Date Openings Set for Joe Brown Picture

Some $200,000 will be expended by Warner and national advertisers in a nationwide exploitation campaign signaling 350 simultaneous openings of Joe E. Brown's "Six Day Bike Rider," the week of October 3.

Thirty national magazines will carry a $130,000 magazine campaign, which will be augmented by the distribution of $50,000 worth of bicycles in a national arrangement with Quaker Oats.

S. Charles Einfeld, director of Warner publicity, who organized the plan, now has his home office force at work on cooperative displays for the picture and the bicycles.

Donahue & Coe, Inc., Again Enlarges Offices

Donahue & Coe, Inc., New York advertising agency, handling many motion picture accounts, has leased for a term of years, approximately two-thirds of the 22nd floor of the Paramount building, 1501 Broadway, in addition to the space which they have occupied since November of last year, comprising the entire 21st floor of more than 10,000 square feet.

This additional space was acquired because of a considerable increase in personnel and new business. Also the recent expansion of this agency into radio broadcasting activities has made necessary the installation of a soundproof audition room, to include facilities for rebroadcasting programs to the executive offices, and the manufacture of electrical transcriptions of auditions.

U. S. MARKET OPEN, SAYS WILCOX, HOME

British & Dominions Executive Warns Studios Against English Accent and Musicals

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

"In a year or two British producers will regard the United States as a part of their normal market, and if they don't sell regularly to America it will be the fault of the pictures," said Herbert Wilcox of British Dominions, summarizing his New York impressions at a Dorchester press reception on his return to London. According to this British director and executive, the American attitude is one of "complete understanding and sympathy," but British concerns must shed their fixed ideas and recast their production policies, if they are to benefit from a "magnificent opportunity."

Calls Market Wide Open

His own policy was stated by Mr. Wilcox in the words: "I will never make another 'English' picture." America, he said, did not like the "English" accent, and it did not understand the British musical comedy formula. Exhibitors wanted star values and they wanted the picture supported at the box office. Observation of the way in which United Artists followed the picture to the public had led him to the decision to inaugurate a similar exploitation policy here. B. & D. is also entirely recasting production policy. It will use American stars and if necessary American technicians and, if the story calls for it, they will produce in New York.

"I refuse to recognize America as a separate market," said Mr. Wilcox. "It is wide open."

Frankly admitting that many American exhibitors were up against British films and were taking advantage of their code right of 10 per cent cancellation to eliminate these films, Mr. Wilcox said it had to be recognized that this attitude was born of bitter business experience. Against it, one had the fact that "Henry VIII" had been a big success, which had helped Hollywood as well as Great Britain by stimulating the box office, and that "The Scarlet Pimpernel" from the same studio had been booked by the Loew circuit before production. Another instance of American willingness to get behind worth while films was the fact that United Artists had allocated $60,000 for publicity for British films.

Cites Mass Production Failure

The big opportunity for British films in America is to be seen, in Mr. Wilcox's opinion, in the failure of Hollywood's mass production theories and in the triumph of individual pioneers like Rene Clair and Alexander Korda. America will stop sending her program pictures to Great Britain and the tendency will be for American sales to the United Kingdom to fall as British sales to America rise.

"There is not an artist of reputation in Hollywood who would not be glad to come to England," said Mr. Wilcox, in announcing that all B. & D. casting in future would be done in consultation with United Artists, and that B. & D. would reduce its output from 12 a year to eight and spend as much on the smaller number of pictures. This policy would operate this year. He declared British producers must quit using "spent" stars and think in big names—as big as Garbo. "She would be wise to come," he said.

"British films, in England, are overpraised by the press and over-patronized by the public," was a Wilcox comment on the fact that B. & D. could not expect to increase its grosses in England, and therefore meant to make better pictures in order to get American revenue.

Labor Trouble Looms

The labor situation becomes decidedly more threatening as a result of the rejection, by the National Association of Theatrical Employees, of the scale of wages and hours drawn up by the Joint Conciliation Board for the trade, although it still seems that a peaceful settlement ultimately will be reached.

Threat of a national campaign for legislative restriction holds awkward possibilities.

Addressing the N. A. T. E. Conference, the president, Mr. R. Finnigan, envisaged ultimate establishment of an international labor organization to cover all grades of employees in the theatre, cinema and studio in all parts of the world.

Next day, Gaumont British advertised that in order to anticipate pirates it would show pictures of the fourth England-Australia Cricket Match two nights before the event took place. Incidental reference to the "pinching" of this event by rival concerns, jealous of GB's exclusive rights, indicate that competition is getting razor keen in this field. At previous Australian matches, forests of scaffolding arose outside the ground, from which "unofficial" cameramen got their picture.

Code Authority Wins Court Tilt With Exhibitors

Judge Henry W. Goddard, sitting in United States district court, New York, ruled late last week that the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of which Harry Brandt is president, is not entitled to a temporary injunction, pending trial, requiring the Code Authority to accept the complaints of non-assentors of the code against assentors and requiring the Code Authority to desist from accepting assentors' complaints against non-assentors. The court said:

"Aside from the fact that the position of the plaintiffs (ITOA) seems inconsistent in contending that they themselves are not subject to these provisions of the code so as to permit complaints of its violations by them to be entertained, yet that they are entitled to its benefits and to file under the code complaints against their competitors notwithstanding they declined to assent or to pay their pro rata expense of administering it; I do not think that the papers disclose clear and convincing grounds for the granting of the extreme remedy of a mandatory injunction before trial, or that plaintiffs are suffering or threatened with irreparable injury. Exactly what the various complaints may be, whether they have merit, are reasonable or not, and whether the defendants exercise reasonable discretion, are matters that should be developed by trial."

The ITOA had sued for the injunction naming the members of the Code Authority as defendants, together with the members of the Local Grievance and Clearance Boards of the New York territory. Representing the plaintiffs was Milton C. Wiseman, of Wiseman, Quinn, Allen and Spett; acting for the defendants was William D. Whitney, of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood.

An appeal is expected to be taken from Judge Goddard's decision by the exhibitors' association, and it is quite likely a complaint will be filed with the Federal Trade Commission against certain allegedly unfair industry practices which it is said have been legalized by the code.

Amendments to the industry's code, dealing with the power of the Code Authority to levy assessments upon members of the industry and to sue to collect, and exempting the members of the Authority from responsibility for the actions of their fellow members, were made public Tuesday by the NRA.

Incorporated as additions to Article II of the code, the amendments provide that:

"Upon approval by the Administrator of an itemized budget of such expenses and an equitable basis of contribution thereto, each such member shall be legally obligated for and shall pay to the Code Authority his or its respective equitable contribution, subject to rules and regulations pertaining thereto issued by the Administrator. Failure to pay such equitable contribution shall constitute a violation of this code. In addition to all rights and remedies with respect thereto, the Code Authority shall have the right to institute legal proceedings for the collection of any such equitable contribution.

"Nothing contained in this code shall constitute the members of the Code Authority partners for any purpose. Nor shall any member of the Code Authority be liable in any manner to anyone for any act of any other member, officer, agent or employee of the Code Authority. Nor shall any member of the Code Authority, exercising reasonable diligence in the conduct of his duties hereunder, be liable to anyone for any action or omission to act under the code, except for his own wilful misfeasance or nonfeasance."

Meanwhile, the Code Authority heard numerous appeals during the week from decisions of local boards in the field. Some 60 appeals have been disposed of by the Authority within the past month.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

MR. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST'S highly imaginative editorial writer, Arthur Brisbane, suggests, for a reason known only to his 70-year-old mind, that a fitting subject for filmization by Nicholas Schenck "or some other genius" in these "Pure Movie" days, would be the love for music of the dolphin, amiable member of the whale family. A smashing sequence in Mr. Brisbane's brainchild would show the female dolphin and child lying on their sides at the surface of the water nursing. We learn with amazement from Mr. Brisbane that this surface feeding "lets them both breathe." One can easily imagine some 80,000,000 excited movie patrons perched breathless on the edges of their theatre seats.

Editorialist Brisbane would tell in celluloid about the Greek myth that Arion, sweet poet and musician of the seventh century, B.C., was saved from the sea by a dolphin that had admired his singing and playing. It seems that Arion, while returning with his percentage of the gate receipts of a successful musical contest in Sicily, was set upon by the ship's sailors, determined to rob him, and told to kill himself on the boat or else jump into the sea.

Arion decided to jump, but, remembering his public, or somebody, asked permission to sing one last song, playing the accompaniment on his cithara. He sang, played and jumped. Imagine the sailors' surprise when they saw a large dolphin, that had listened, entranced, to the music, draw up alongside the ship, take Arion on his back and carry him to shore with the speed that lets a dolphin swim easily around a fast, modern steamer.

Right at this spot the United States Fleet could arrive on the scene under full steam (courtesy of Jack Warner), and land a party of American Marines on the ship to capture the bad sailor boys and rescue the purse of Arion (played by Bing Crosby), the while Ginger Rogers, the Captain's daughter, stood on the bridge of her father's flagship waving to Arion as he speeded toward her over the rolling waves atop of good ol' dolphin.

This is to halt other players, Fox executives and visitors petting and patronizing the child. The studio is committed under the contract to furnish many articles for her recreation and enjoyment. The Hollywood home and furnishings and the personal effects of the late Lew Cody went under the hammer last week, and with them went "Traffic," an eleven-year-old fox terrier that doesn't know what liquidating an estate means. Somebody made away with the famous autographed door which had been a prize of the noted actor, a door into which the autographs of more than 1,000 celebrities had been carved as they entered the Cody den.

The estate received only $10 from the sale of the house, which was built atop Beverly Hills by Pauline Frederick. It was sold for $15,010, but there were mortgages for $15,000.

Knocked down for the price of the proverbial song were a score or more of Cody's suits, 23 pairs of shoes and 29 hats, 53 shirts, 27 pairs of pajamas and 40 neckties, and Traffic, whose affection for Cody—so apparent even now, two months after his death—began when she was a squealing, helpless little puppy that had fallen out of a car. Cody had his chauffeur stop to rescue the frightened black and white bundle, some 11 years ago.

Of more interest was the interference by some moronic autograph-seeking hero worshipers who hurriedly produced handkerchiefs and dipped them in the blood spilled by Raft on the ground, to keep as souvenirs.

A TRUE MOTION PICTURE of American Revolutionary times would never pass the censors. Such is the conclusion of J. P. McEvoy, noted humorist, after a month of research in preparation for adapting the script of Paramount's "Pursuit of Happiness."

McEvoy found that nudist weddings were legal in America as far back as 1776!

Laws provided that every husband had to take responsibility for his bride's premarital debts, unless she came to him "with nothing." In order to conform literally to the statute, the bride, after disposing of all her property, would remove her clothes, stand in a closet and put her hand through the door opening while the wedding was performed

Another custom, according to McEvoy, was for the bride to step naked onto a ladder outside the window and there don her wedding garments. When she came down she was supposed to be "starting anew."

"King's highway marriages" were common. They took place on the highroads at night, the bride wearing nothing but a slip. The theory was that when she left the road married and fully clothed, with her husband, she was "another woman" and her creditors could pursue her no farther.

We predict there will be no such weddings in Paramount's picture.

McEvoy also found that Washington's army fought only when paid. When it didn't arrive the soldiers deserted. Washington used to drink plenty. The women talked back and fought the minister. The Revolution was tremendously unpopular with a great many, and "there was a great deal of immorality among the supposedly Puritanical," according to the McEvoy findings.

The Daughters of the American Revolution will probably be mobilized and ready to attack by nightfall.

PARAMOUNT CLAIMS PROCEDURE OUTLINED

Court Order Brings End of Bankruptcy Closer; Claims Must Be Filed by Sept. 15

Steps preliminary to consummation of Paramount Publix Corporation's discharge from bankruptcy were taken this week when the United States district court in New York ordered all claims of creditors against the corporation to be filed at 140 Nassau St., New York, on or before September 15.

Paramount's trustees also have made application to proceed with the plan for reorganization of Paramount Broadway Corp., the subsidiary holding title to the New York Paramount Building and theatre. Special master John E. Joyce was scheduled to hear the petition August 9.

1. Time for filing claims. All claims of creditors herein shall be filed and evidenced, in the manner hereinafter set forth, on or before the 15th day of September, 1934 (or such later date as the Court by order made on or prior to the 15th day of September, 1934, may determine), and no claim of any creditor not so filed and evidenced may participate in any plan for the reorganization of the Debtor except on order for cause shown.

2. Place for filing claims. All claims of creditors herein shall be filed in the office of the Referee in Bankruptcy of this Court, Room 805, 140 Nassau Street, New York City, New York.

3. Manner in which claims shall be evidenced. Except as otherwise provided in this order, all claims of creditors shall be evidenced as follows:

(a) Each proof of claim shall consist of a statement under oath, in writing (such statement being sometimes hereinafter referred to as a "deposition"), correctly entitled in this Court and in these consolidated proceedings, signed by the creditor. Said deposition shall set forth the claim: the consideration therefor; whether any, and, if so what, securities are held therefor; whether any, and, if so what, payments have been made thereon; whether any, and, if so what, set-offs or counterclaims exist thereto; and that the said claim is justly owing from the Debtor to the creditor.

(b) Whenever a claim is founded upon an instrument of writing, such instrument, unless lost or destroyed, shall be filed with the proof of claim. If such instrument is lost or destroyed, a statement of such fact and of the circumstances of such loss or destruction shall be filed under oath with the proof of claim. Such instrument may be withdrawn by permission of the Special Master at the time acting under this order, upon leaving a copy thereof on file with the claim.

(c) When a deposition is made to prove a debt due to a partnership, it must appear on oath that the deponent is a member of the partnership. When a deposition is made by an agent, the reason the deposition is not made by the claimant in person must be stated. When a deposition is made to prove a debt due to a corporation, the deposition shall be made by a duly authorized officer of the corporation.

(d) Proofs of claim to prove debts existing in open account shall state when the debt became or will become due, and if the debt consists of items maturing at different dates, the average due date shall be stated, in default of which statement it shall not be necessary to compute interest on said claim. Each such proof of claim shall contain an averment that no note has been received for such account nor any judgment rendered thereon.

4. Additional requirements as to claims for the alleged breach of agreements relating to real property. Proofs of claims arising or alleged to arise out of the alleged breach of any lease of real property or out of the alleged breach of any guaranty or any indemnity agreement contained in or relating to a lease of real property, or out of the alleged breach of any agreement for the purchase of real property, shall contain, in addition to the matters required by paragraph 3 of this order, the following:

(a) An itemized statement of the exact amount claimed to be due in respect of such lease, guaranty, indemnity agreement or purchase contract, showing the date when each item is claimed to have become or to become due and payable, together with the amount of any interest claimed thereon, and in the case of any items not due and payable on June 16, 1934, the present value of each such item on June 16, 1934, such present value to be computed by discounting the amount of such item at the rate of 6% per annum.

(b) A detailed statement of all rents or other income, if any, received from such real property by the claimant subsequent to the date of the alleged breach of the said lease, guaranty, indemnity agreement or purchase contract by the Debtor, and prior to the date of the filing of said proof of claim.

(c) In the case of any claim arising or alleged to arise out of the alleged breach of a lease of real proptry or out of the alleged breach of a guaranty or an indemnity agreement contained in or relating to such lease, a detailed estimate of the income reasonably expected to be received from the demised premises for the remainder of the term of such lease, which estimate shall include a complete statement of the grounds on which the same is based and shall also include copies or detailed abstracts of any and all leases or other agreements relating to the occupancy of the demised premises made by the claimant or his predecessor in interest subsequent to the date of the alleged breach of such lease, guaranty or indemnity agreement by the Debtor and in effect at the date of the filing of said proof of claim.

(d) In the case of any claim arising or alleged to arise out of the alleged breach of an agreement for the purchase of real property, a detailed estimate of the market value of such property, which estimate shall include a complete statement of the grounds on which the same is based.

5. Manner of filing claims of creditors founded on Bonds of Debtor. All claims which are founded upon the 20-Year 6% Sinking Fund Bonds of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation issued under an Indenture between the Debtor and Equitable Trust Company of New York (now succeeded by The Chase National Bank of the City of New York) dated December 1, 1927, and upon the 20-Year 5½% Sinking Fund Bonds of Paramount Publix Corporation issued under an Indenture between the Debtor and The Chase National Bank of the City of New York dated August 1, 1930, or upon said Indenture, shall be filed within the time, at the place and in the manner set forth in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of this order; provided, however, that all claims of holders of such bonds duly filed in the proceeding in this Court entitled "In the Matter of Paramount Publix Corporation, Bankrupt, In Bankruptcy No. 56763" (other than claims which have been expunged by order of the Referee in the above-mentioned bankruptcy proceedings and claims not substantiated by the filing of the bond or bonds on which the same are based), shall be deemed duly filed in this proceeding and shall further be deemed to be amended so as to include, in addition to a claim for the principal amount of such bonds and of any interest coupons thereon which became due and payable prior to January 1, 1933, a claim for such interest as may be legally allowable thereon in these consolidated proceedings. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent any owner or holder of such bonds from filing a proof of claim entitled in these consolidated proceedings within the time, at the place and in the manner set forth in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of this order, whether or not a claim shall have been filed thereon in the above-mentioned bankruptcy proceedings.

6. Provisions as to claims filed in bankruptcy proceeding other than claims for the breach of agreements relating to real property and claims founded on Bonds of Debtor. All claims duly filed in the proceeding in this Court entitled "In the Matter of Paramount Publix Corporation, Bankrupt, In Bankruptcy No. 56763," except claims of the character set forth in paragraph 4 of this order, and the claims referred to in paragraph 5 of this order, and also except claims which have been expunged by order of the Referee in the above-mentioned bankruptcy proceeding, shall be deemed duly filed in these consolidated proceedings for the same principal amount set forth in such claims, unless such claims have been reduced by order of the Referee in the above-mentioned bankruptcy proceeding in which event such claims shall be deemed duly filed in these consolidated proceedings for the principal amount to which the same have been so reduced; and all proceedings with respect to such claims in the said bankruptcy proceeding which were pending undetermined on June 16, 1934, shall be deemed to be pending in these proceedings before the Special Master hereinafter appointed. All such claims, except (a) tort claims, (b) claims founded upon obligations as to which persons, firms or corporations other than the Debtor are primarily liable and which were not in default on June 16, 1934, and (c) claims which have been compromised and settled by allowance at a fixed amount, shall further be deemed to be amended so as to include a claim for such interest as may be legally allowable thereon in these consolidated proceedings. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent any claimant from filing a proof of claim entitled in these consolidated proceedings within the time, at the place and in the manner set forth in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of this order, whether or not such claimant shall have filed a claim in the above-mentioned bankruptcy proceeding.

7. Notice. Within fifteen (15) days after the entry of this order, the Trustees appointed herein shall cause a copy of this order to be mailed to all known creditors of the Debtor as the same may appear upon the books of the Trustees in Bankruptcy in the above-mentioned bankruptcy proceeding and upon the books of the Debtor. The said Trustees shall also cause a brief notice of the entry of this order and that copies hereof may be obtained from the Trustees to be published at least twice during the month of August, 1934, in the New York Herald Tribune, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in the City of New York, New York, and in the Daily News Record.

8. Procedure with respect to the allowance of claims; reference, etc.

(a) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to constitute an allowance of any claim against the Debtor. The provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, and the General Orders in Bankruptcy of the Supreme Court, as amended, with respect to the procedure for the allowance or disallowance of claims of creditors, shall apply to the claims of creditors herein.

(b) All questions as to the allowance of claims against the Debtor arising in these consolidated proceedings up to and including the 10th day of September, 1934, or such other date as the Court may determine, are referred for consideration and report to John E. Joyce, Esq., as Special Master. The said Special Master shall report upon all matters so referred, including matters pending before him at the expiration of the period of reference herein provided. Notice of hearings before the Special Master on questions relating to the allowance of claims shall be given to the claimant, the Trustees appointed herein, the Debtor, and any other party to these consolidated proceedings who shall have filed objections to such claims. If the Trustees, the Debtor, or other objecting party or parties, or the claimant, shall desire to object to any report with respect to claims made by the Special Master, such objecting party shall, within ten days from the date of the mailing by the Special Master of notice of the filing of his report, file with the Clerk written objections to such report setting out the error complained of, and serve copies of such objections upon all adverse parties who have appeared at the hearing, and upon the Special Master. Upon the filing of such written objections, the Special Master shall forthwith certify to the judge sitting in the bankruptcy part of this Court at the time such certificate is filed, the questions presented, a summary of the evidence relating thereto, a copy of the report of the Special Master thereon, and a copy of the objections thereto.

(c) The said Special Master shall maintain a docket of claims filed in these consolidated proceedings. Upon the filing of satisfactory proof of the assignment of a claim proved and entered on the docket of the Special Master, he shall immediately give notice by mail to the original claimant of the filing of such proof of assignment; and, if no objection be entered within ten days after the giving of such notice, the assignee shall be subrogated to the original claimant. If objection shall be made, the Special Master shall hear the same, on notice to the original claimant and to the assignee, and shall report thereon, in the manner provided in subdivision (b) of this paragraph 8.

(d) All terms and provisions of the General Order of Reference made and entered the 28th day of June, 1934, not inconsistent herewith shall apply with full force and effect to the reference herein provided for.

(e) The Court hereby expressly reserves any right conferred by Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act, upon objection by the Trustee, the Debtor, or any other party to these consolidated proceedings, or upon its own motion, to scrutinize the circumstances of any assignment of future rent claims and the amount of the consideration paid for such assignment in determining the amount of damages allowed the assignee, and to scrutinize and disregard any limitations or provisions of any depositary agreements, trust indentures, committee or other authorizations affecting any creditor and to enforce an accounting thereunder or restrain the exercise of any power which it finds to be unfair or not consistent with public policy and to limit any claim to the actual consideration paid therefor, irrespective of whether a new or amended or supplemental proof of claim shall hereafter be filed in respect of any such claim or whether a proof of claim shall have heretofore been filed in respect of such claim in the bankruptcy proceeding and deemed filed in these proceedings in accordance with this order; and for the purpose of the exercise by the Court of any such right nothing contained in this order shall be deemed to affect or prejudice any question as to whether any such claims are claims "filed" by a "committee member or agent" (as said terms are used in subdivision (b) of said Section 77B).

9. Reservation of jurisdiction. This Court reserves full right and jurisdiction to make from time to time such other and further orders as the Court shall deem proper amplifying, extending, limiting or otherwise modifying this order, including, but without limitation of the generality of the foregoing, such other and further orders as the Court shall deem proper determining the time and manner in which the interests of stockholders of the Debtor may be filed and evidenced, the manner in which claims may be allowed, any and all questions relating to claims filed by The Chase National Bank of the City of New York as Trustee under the indentures referred to in paragraph 5 of this order, and, for the purposes of the plan and its acceptance, the division of creditors and stockholders into classes according to the nature of their respective claims or interests.

The order was signed by Judge Coxe.

CHINESE LEADER BLAMES STUDIOS FOR CENSORS

Lo Ming Yau, in America, Calls Directors Ignorant of His Land; Charges Negligence

Placing the blame squarely upon American motion picture directors and producers for the barring of many Hollywood-made films in China, Lo Ming Yau, sometime described as "the Will Hays of the Far East," arrived in New York recently for the specific purpose of "investigating" the American film industry. Mr. Yau also will "investigate" Europe.

"Many ask me why some American films are barred in my country," he said. "Such films as 'Shanghai Lil,' 'Shanghai Gesture,' 'Shanghai Express' and 'The Bitter Tea of General Yen,' are typical of a dozen or more which have been rejected in the past.

"The American director," he explained, "has no conception of our customs, psychology, characteristics and costumes. They depict China at its very worst. They are untrue to our natures, of which your directors are utterly ignorant."

Mr. Yau officially is a delegate of the Minister of Industry of the Republic of China in his investigation of conditions cinematic abroad. Also he is president of United Photoplay Service, Ltd.; United Photoplay Service (Overseas) Ltd.; South China Cinema & Investment Co., Ltd., and Chinese American Film Co., with headquarters in Hong Kong and Shanghai.

Accompanying the official is Moon Kwan, Chinese poet and director of United Photoplay Service, Ltd. They arrived from Shanghai, May 9, and after a visit to San Francisco went to Hollywood for three weeks.

The two are making a survey of all the principal film centers of America and Europe, studying distribution, exhibition and production.

"Our companies in China are producing about 30 pictures annually at the present time and have been in business only about four years," Mr. Yau said. "Since establishment of United Photoplay Service, the motion picture has taken an important part in the social, educational and industrial life of the Chinese people. Particularly are we cooperating with the government in the making of newsreels and educational and historic subjects."

Mr. Yau's companies control about 150 of the 300 motion picture theatres in China, with admission price for the first class houses ranging from 50 cents to $2. The companies also have four studios, three in Shanghai and one in Hong Kong.

Moon Kwan, the poetic director, concurred in Mr. Yau's sentiments regarding American directors and producers.

"I am a director," he said, "but, unlike your American directors, before attempting to make a picture of your country and its people, I would seek the advice of someone who knew the locale and the atmosphere and customs of the persons I wanted to put on the screen. It would be foolish for me to go to Boston to do a picture there and start grinding without any other background than having read one or two books on the city. You could not expect me to do a film of your slums here and draw on my imagination to present poverty and horrors which do not exist. That is what your directors have done with Shanghai and other parts of China, and as the scenes are as untrue as the scenarios they are naturally banned by my government."

"Communism is not spreading in China," Moon Kwan digressed. "The young Chinese, when Japan invaded Manchuria, were astounded that the League of Nations did not use force instead of a scrap of paper to stop the invasion. When they saw the great nations of the world refusing to help them—a weaker nation—they naturally grew indifferent and became fertile soil for Red doctrines. But the government is rapidly stamping out the Communists."

Take Three Colorado Houses

Pueblo Theatres, Inc., organized at Pueblo, Colo., by T. B. Noble, Jr., Frank L. Dent and George A. Crowder, have taken over three local houses. The Rialto was acquired from J. J. Goodstein, and the Chief and Pueblo from Westland Theatres, Inc., of which the three men are also officers.

Borg Leaves Exchange

Russell C. Borg has resigned as manager of Consolidated Film Distributors, independent Kansas City exchange. J. Erwin Dodson, former National Screen Service representative, has been added to the local Consolidated sales staff.

Installation of standard Western Electric equipement in the Artigas theatre, Montevideo, Uruguay, and of standard wide range equipment in the Gonzales theatre, Managua, Nicaragua, marking the first installations in those countries, were announced last week by Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Judge Priest

(Fox)

Comedy-Drama

If ever a picture deserved the utmost showmanship enthusiasm, "Judge Priest" should be so considered. Accepting the preview audience reception as a measure, it has everything in the entertainment line that any class of patronage could desire. Likewise, it is a showman's exploitation goldmine, affording endless opportunities for utilizing the quality of its story, the prestige of its author, Irvin S. Cobb, and director, John Ford, the box office value of the star, Will Rogers, and supporting cast, in arousing maximum popular interest.

There's merit to every marketable quantity in the picture. Irvin S. Cobb's story series has made the character of Judge Priest, his cronies, servants and political enemies familiar to millions. They know his trials and triumphs. They know his kindliness, his homy wit and humor, his deft ability to turn the tables on those who plot against him. They know the peaceful locale of the stories and the atmosphere of the times in which they are told—a little Kentucky town in 1890 when Civil War animosities still ebbed and flowed. Most of them know Will Rogers just as well and the caliber of entertainment which he represents. The principal supports are familiar screen names.

Supplementing these assets, the quality of entertainment in "Judge Priest" has often proved its value. It's hokum with heart appeal. Naturally there are barrels of comedy. Also there is touching romance, vivid drama, tender pathos, tense suspense, action that thrills, bits of choral old South music and the final triumph of justice over injustice. All are bound together coherently. They provoke gales of laughter, sometimes bring a tear. Always they hold attention.

The story is completely human, theatric without seeming so. Much of the early part is devoted to illustrating Judge Priest's character, first on the bench, then in his idle hours, fishing and at home. Though it brings him into friendly conflict with sister Caroline, he fosters the young lawyer Jerome-Ellie May romance. There's fun in his associations with his old war comrades as they live again the glories and disasters of the Lost Cause, and a howling roar as Rogers mimics the Stepin Fetchit voice.

All leads to a courtroom scene where Gillis, defended by young Jerome, is to be tried for murderously assaulting Flem Tally. Audiences know the reason for the occasion. Bombastic Maydew demands that Priest leave the bench. He does and his self-spoken defense should live long in the memories of those who hear it. The case, thrilling, dramatic, though made comic in spots by the unerring accuracy of Juror Number 12, is closed with conviction of Gillis seeming sure.

That night Judge Priest and Ashby Brand meet and talk. A letter is written and delivered next day to Maydew. Gloating on its contents, a final clincher for him, he demands the case be reopened for the presentation of further evidence. The act permits Priest to come in as young Jerome's associate. Brand is put on the stand. His saga of the heroism and martyrdom of a famous Virginia regiment will get under the skins of those who hear it just as it did under the jury of old Confederate veterans who were trying the case. By inference they know that Gillis was a hero among heroes in the cause for which they fought and lost. There is no need for a judicial decision. Maydew again is frustrated. Gillis, revealed as Ellie May's father, is foremost in the parading veterans' ranks. Sister Caroline could think of no other girl than Ellie as young Jerome's wife.

Only the mere telling patrons of what "Judge Priest" means for them should be necessary, but the more emphatically and sincerely it is told to them through every available exploitation means and contact, the better.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

One More River

(Universal - James Whale)

Dramatic Romance

Problems testing astute showmanship ability must be overcome if this attraction is to be a general box office success. It offers many easily discernible commercial advantages. There are also many features constituting handicaps.

In theme it's dramatic romance incorporating elements that have consistently proved their box office value. It's realistic in its novel and powerful presentation of an unique triangle situation. The cast includes many wellknown names. The title, exclusive of its author and book familiarity, is of little value and practically meaningless in relation to the theme. Finely produced, intelligently acted and directed, its chief selling point, however, as far as the American market is concerned, is story quality.

It's completely upper-class British in atmosphere and cast. It deals with matters, points of view, social customs and legal procedure that are distinctly modern English. There is no question that it will have a strong appeal among the socalled intelligentsia in both big and small town theatres. How the profit-producing masses will respond is, without doubt, the most important question.

Here is the plot in brief. Understood solely through dialogue, Clare, her love crushed, has left her husband, Sir Gerald, because of his suspicious cruelty. Aboard the boat bearing her home she meets Tony and affection is mutual. In England, atmospheric sequences illustrating the stern British antipathy towards divorce unless under the most necessary circumstances are graphically portrayed. The Clare-Tony romance, despite the foreboding of friends and relatives, grows. In this and the manner in which it is spied upon by Sir Gerald's agents, the comedy relief of the picture occurs.

As divorce is the only alternative, the dynamic punch of the story is found in the courtroom sequences where the Sir Gerald instituted case is tried. British legal and judicial procedure being graphically depicted, the fundamental drama is accentuated by the manner in which the opposing counsel, Brough and Forsythe, conduct the case. On the stand, justifying her actions and defending her own name and character, dramatically refraining from injuring her husband's reputation, the while protecting her lover, Clare is the complete woman, fighting, sacrificing, losing. Sir Gerald's plea for divorce granted, Clare, feeling the tragedy she has brought Tony, would surrender her body to him. More than anything that is the blow that hurts the boy. Fleeing from her, he leaves her alone overnight. In the morning both see from different and purer viewpoints. The climax leaves the picture's auditors to understand that real love will be consummated.

Lacking the action punch ordinarily appealing to the rank and file, the picture offers a story by a well read author. It is tastefully and intelligently produced. Most of the principal names are favorably known. Still the atmosphere and morale of the picture, foreign to the ordinary American mind, erects a hurdle that necessitates a high caliber of showmanship in leaping. It should be sold with dignity and force, the kind of publicity usually associated with a prestige picture, all the time making a strong bid for feminine support.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

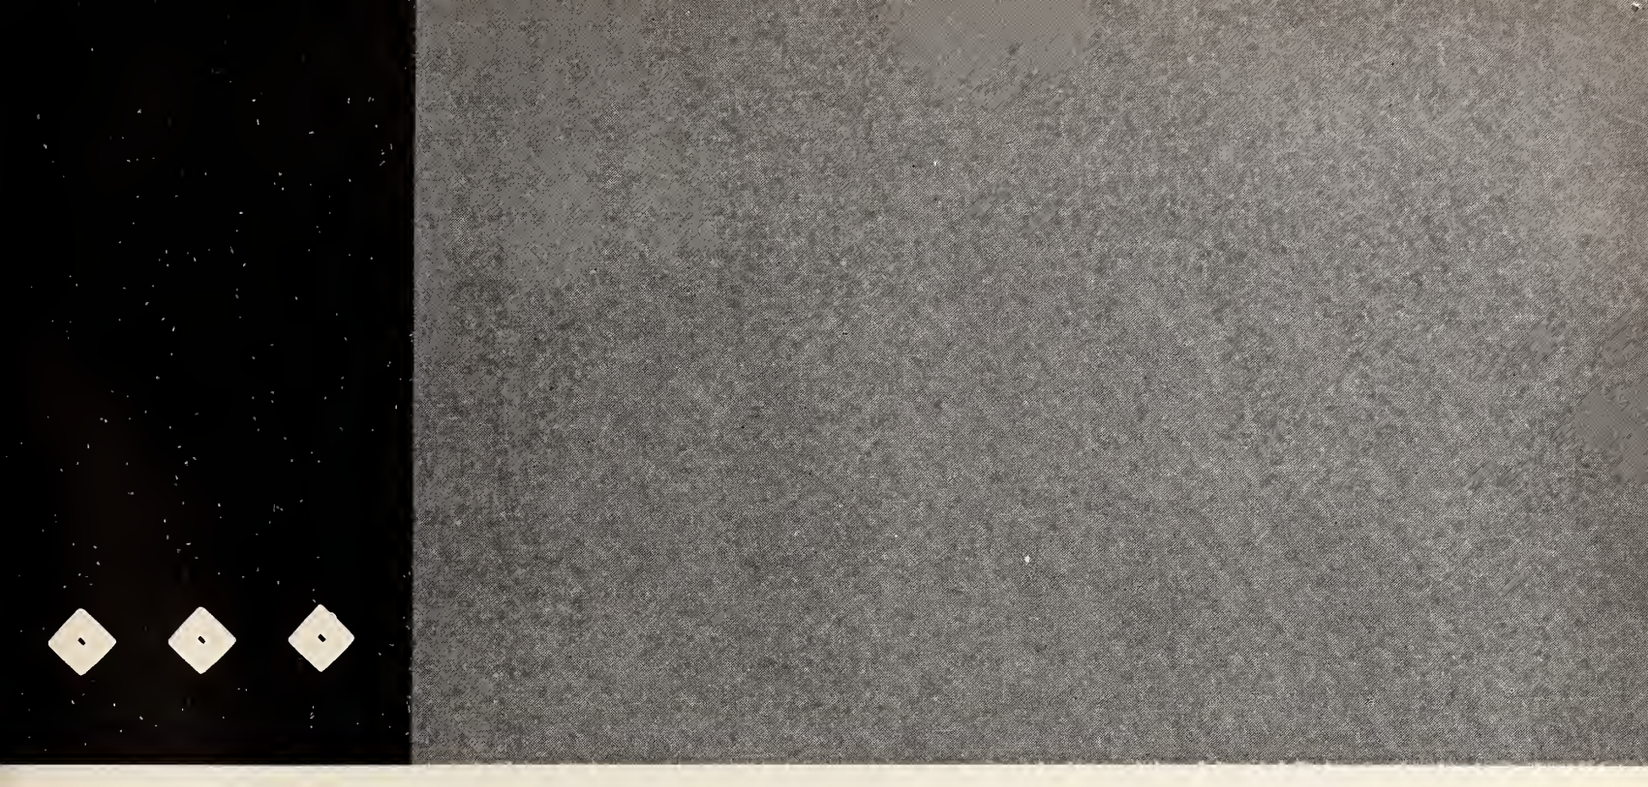
British Agent



(Warner - First National)

Drama

This is the story of a dangerous love told against a thrilling background of the Russian Soviet revolution. There is both the attraction of modern topical history and the charm of two persons in love, their affections conflicting with the human considerations of patriotism and duty. It parades noted personalities and familiar events. Either of the two motivations is equally compelling as entertainment. The historical is a theatrical presentation of the reasons why Russia made separate peace. The romantic presents the seeming paradox of an official unofficial agent, Stephen Locke, falling in love with Elena, flaming exponent of the Red cause he tried so hard to defeat.

Moving with realistic punch, the picture first re-enacts the events leading up to the Russian deflection. Looked upon by his gray-bearded temporizing superiors as a visionary fanatic, Locke espouses the cause of any stable Russian government. Various temporary governments falling, Locke is in St. Petersburg when Lenin's Reds come into power. The wisdom of his predictions understood, Great Britain appoints him its unsupported agent to prevent the peace treaty. Having saved Elena's life, they fall in love. Not knowing her true identity, Locke pleads with Lenin and Trotsky to keep in the fight, promising English support. Deserted and betrayed by his country, he is betrayed by Elena, but her treachery cannot stifle his love.

Together, plotting with the agents of other countries, he moves to Moscow and on his own responsibility uses British consular funds to finance anti-Bolshevik activity. His support leads to an attempt on Lenin's life. Suspected by Pavlov, head of the Cheka, who insists that Elena's love of country is greater than her love for man, Locke is trapped in a munitions filled garret as Elena, presuming upon his affections, wrings from him the proof that he has been the man behind the counter-revolution.

As Locke is about to be blown to pieces, Elena, realizing the strength of her love, goes to him, that the fate that she brought to him may be hers. In the meantime Lenin has recovered. He grants amnesty to political suspects, which makes it possible for the lovers to go to England and happiness.

Embellished by a continual suspense, there is a virile thrill to almost every foot of "British Agent." It affords unusual opportunities for ingenious interest-creating showmanship. Having plenty of strength in name values, there is also story attraction, modernly familiar. There being action and punch to hold the attention of men, there is also a romance with which to interest the women. One is the counterpart of the other.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Romance in the Rain

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance

An audience picture because it's all entertaining fun, a showman's picture because it is full of adaptable showmanship ideas, the production is clean, fast-moving, hectically exciting, telling a complicated romantic story against modern topical backgrounds. It has value in both theme idea and the way in which it is presented. Given a lively motivation and centering its interest in a group of oddly eccentric characters and series of similar situations, it makes no pretense of being anything other than a light, laugh-laden comedy romance.

Its hero, Charlie, writer of torrid love stories for pulp paper magazines, is hit on the head by the falling slipper of the eventual heroine, Cynthia, and conceives the idea of promoting a "Cinderella" contest with the idea of leading his lady to fame and also making easy the path to her heart. Selling the idea to his boss, Blank, who also sees in it a grand opportunity for boosting himself with his own sweetie, Gwen, the contest is put on in full blast to the tune of super-high pressure ballyhoo. As the rivalry between Charlie and Blank leads to much comic intrigue, Charlie is a better fixer and Cynthia is the winner.

As a follow-up an equally flamboyant contest to find a "Prince Charming" mate for Cinderella is underway. Television is used as a means to judge the entrants, with Rex emerging as the victor. To top the hullabaloo a public wedding is arranged in a great sports stadium. But as Prince Charming is making romantic progress with Cinderella, and Blank is doing everything possible to make his star writer's life anything but a bed of roses, Charlie plays hob with the big event. Kidnaping Cynthia, he holds her under the showers in the dressing room while Gwen, who hasn't been letting any grass grow under her feet, tricks Blank into marrying her lest the great public ceremony be a flop and work havoc on his publications.

Adaptation of the many ideas contained in the picture to the furthest extent possible, emphasizing the colorful and exciting comedy character of the story and playing up its romantic appeal, should create a lot of interest. Its two contests are natural exploitation features for any progressive showman, to be put on in the way they are in the picture.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Romantic Drama

Romantic love interest, given a dramatic twist and contrasted by light topical comedy, is this picture's entertainment essence. Its theme, building to two conflicting triangles, is told mainly against the background of a California drive-in restaurant. While certain imagination-stretching situations crop out in its narration, there is an understandable continuity preserving the basic plot.

After a character identifying prologue, Sally Bates and her decrepit "T" model land in front of Bill Cutler's barbecue. The girl, first befriended and then fed by Bill, frustrates a hold-up and is taken into his home and motherly welcomed by Mrs. Cutler. Working as a waitress, she and Bill find affection growing. Their romance is menaced by the wealthy Clara, who is rather keen for Bill, and by his mother. It's further complicated by the antics of Clara's wastrel brother, Jack, who tries to ace himself in with Sally. Mrs. Bates, by means of innuendo, forces Sally to believe that Clara, not she, is the girl for Bill. Sally accepts an invitation to a night club party. Clara embarrasses Sally. Desperate, she goes to Caliente with Wally and is married. But as Bill follows, the meeting of the three winds up in a brawl resulting in Wally's death.

Bill, charged with murder, is freed as a blackmailing witness reneges on identifying either him or Sally as party to the crime. Disgusted with the treatment she has received in hospitable California, efforts at amends by Clare and Mrs. Cutler, Sally starts back to her Texas home only to have Bill catch up with her at the desert gas-station scene of the prologue and fetch her back to what is real happiness and marriage.

The picture can be suggested as standby family entertainment.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Hide-Out

(MGM)

Romantic Comedy

"Hide-Out" is a human interest romantic comedy inspired by the colorful personality of a big-shot racketeer. If the screen is to retain the gangster premise as an acceptable entertainment idea, this is due to demonstrate one of the ways in which it can be intelligently done. In it much of the exciting thrill, punch, dramatic menace and suspense of the old line "gangster" is retained. Along with these elements, however, and completely dominating them, is a pleasing boy and girl romance, the picture's real motivation; a thread of down to earth, homey farm life comedy and a regenerative moral that give the show a compelling appeal. It has the strength in cast values and unique entertainment idea to make it something more than a good family attraction.

As the story includes various elements of proved popular appeal, its acting and direction demonstrating that more than usual care and thought was utilized in its making, it adapts a unique principle to create and maintain interest. Lucky Wilson, first exhibiting his class as a racketeer contact man and dabbling a bit here and there with ladies of the night clubs, is wounded by MacCarthy's detectives. Escaping, he flees in a high-powered car and lands on a Connecticut farm. Ordered by Berrelli and the phoney doctor to stay there, rural quietude first bores him and then its innocent noises (cows, chickens, ducks, crickets, etc.), terrify him. Despite the care and solicitude of Pa and Ma Miller, who believe his fantastic yarns that he is a gangster victim, he wants to get away, until Pauline, the farmer's daughter, appears. Then it's love at first sight and gay romance brimming over with comedy to which all, particularly kid brother Willie, contribute, until nemesis MacCarthy again picks up his trail. Unable to believe that slick Lucky has been able so effectively to hoodwink his new-found friends, Mac is set to make a quick public pinch, until Lucky convinces him that everything is on the up and up, that the folks like him and the girl really loves him as much as he loves her. Knowing he's nailed, Lucky only asks that they keep his real identity secret. That's okay for all for a while, until Lucky eventually confesses to Pauline. The girl understands. He accompanies the cops back to New York to embark upon a business trip that will require at least eighteen months as a big house guest before he can return to the girl he loves, the soil and regeneration.

There is not a single objectionable element in the picture. Even the gangster atmospheric sequences are high comedy. Thus the principal consideration is how to best sell it to its maximum possibilities. Name power is adequate, with Robert Montgomery, Maureen O'Sullivan, Edward Arnold, Mickey Rooney, Alexander Carr and Henry Armetta. While there is an undeniable worth attached to the gangster character, it seems that the most effective current method would be to concentrate on the value of its romance, comedy, and effect of real simple life in accentuating the entertainment merit of the picture. Because of its predominant rural setting, it affords unusual opportunity for contrast exploitation and smart handling in gag stunt and printed publicity.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Produced by Hunt Stromberg. Screen play by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett. From the story by Mauri Grashin. Musical score by Dr. William Axt. Recording director, Douglas Shearer. Art director, Cedric Gibbons. Associates, David Townsend and Edwin B. Willis. Wardrobe by Dolly Tree. Photographed by Ray June and Sidney Wagner. Film editor, Basil Wrangell. Running time, 80 minutes as seen on coast. Release date, Aug. 24, 1934.

The Moonstone

(Monogram)

Mystery

An Oriental drug that makes the user perform strange sleepwalking maneuvers provides the surprise denouement for this production, from the novel by Wilkie Collins. The story's origin may be in itself worth emphasizing to the community. Development is rapid, with action from the start serving to build up suspense which is maintained to the end.

David Manners and Phyllis Barry, heading the cast, are the chief name values, and the familiar Gustav von Seyffertitz, with his wide experience in character roles, lends strength to the support work. Evelyn Bostock, as the maid, gives evidence of ability from which more may be expected later.

It's the story of a famous Moonstone diamond stolen originally from a Hindu temple. Manners brings it home to his fiancee, Phyllis Barry. Visiting the home is Jameson Thomas, who wants to marry her. Miss Barry leaves diamond pendant under her pillow. In the night someone takes it.

Story and character provide a number of plausible reasons for fastening the deed upon several individuals. There is the housekeeper, Elspeth Dudgeon, whose sharp tongue provides what little of comedy is to be found in the picture. When the lightning cuts the electric wires, Miss Dudgeon seizes the diamond, to save it from possible theft. Then there is Von Seyffertitz as the greedy money-lender. Evelyn Bostock is the former accomplice of Von Seyffertitz in one shady deal, but now she's going straight. And there is John Davidson, Oriental servant of David Manners.

Charles Irwin, as Inspector Cuff of Scotland Yard, carries the suspects through the questioning common to mystery pictures. Then the maid is found dead, apparently a suicide, but a note left by her directs Manners to look under a stone of the outside walk. There is his bathrobe, with marks from fresh paint in Miss Barry's room, and now suspicion points to Manners also. Von Seyffertitz and Jameson Thomas are permitted to leave.

Herbert Bunston, physician father of Miss Barry, has gone out into the storm on a case and on his return has collapsed, with pneumonia. Claude King, his assistant and under suspicion too because he has been working on a secret formula with Bunston, calls the Inspector when the dying physician in his delirium tells of having had the maid give Manners the drug to help him sleep. The next night another potion is mixed into a glass of milk for Manners, and they wait for developments. A necklace is knotted to resemble the diamond pendant and placed under Miss Barry's pillow. Manners in his sleep removes the necklace, goes into the hall, speaks words that show he had taken the pendant and entrusted it to Thomas. Von Seyffertitz and Thomas are apprehended as they prepare to sail, and Manners and Miss Barry are reunited.

The production can well be placed in a weekend spot.—Rovelstad, New York.

Distributed by Monogram. Produced by Paul Malvern. Directed by Reginald Barker. Adapted by Adele Buffington from the novel by Wilkie Collins. Photographed by Robert Planck. Story editor, Carl Pearson. Recorded by John A. Stransky, Jr. Running time, 62 minutes. Release date, Aug. 20, 1934.

The Crime of Helen Stanley

(Columbia)

Mystery

There are few audiences who do not like good mystery, and this product has elements of real mystery. With the added selling incentive of the setting, in a Hollywood picture studio, and the fact that from an audience standpoint it well nigh defies solution, the exhibitor should have little difficulty arousing considerable interest.

Ralph Bellamy plays the part of the masterful and highly efficient Inspector Trent, who eventually and logically solves the murder. Shirley Grey and Kane Richmond supply the insignificant romantic interest, while Bradley Page, Ward Bond and Vincent Sherman are probably familiar names. Gail Patrick plays the title role, in the unusual manner of being the victim of the murder. There are a sufficient number of motives, on the part of numerous individuals, suspicion falls in turn on many of the parties involved, and the solution is in no sense far-fetched.

There are interesting elements in the secretion of the murder weapon in a camera on the set on which the murder takes place, the fact that the shooting was disguised as part of a scene being taken, and the selling point that the picture gives something of an insight behind the scenes of the Hollywood studios.

The exhibitor should sell the picture as straight mystery, since the romantic angle is completely subordinated to the main theme of crime detection, with Bellamy virtually taking the leading role. The murder of a noted star on the set, during a scene, and the importance of a missing diary in the solution of the case are selling points which should attract the attention of mystery film fans.

Miss Patrick, high priced star of a Hollywood studio, is shot dead on the set during a scene in a cabaret. The scene called for a shot to be fired at her by one of the players. He shoots, she falls dead and the player commits suicide after a pursuit through the set. Bellamy arrives on the scene, and discovers that the shot fired at her was that of a blank cartridge. His investigation involves Miss Grey, revealed as Miss Patrick's sister; Richmond, cameraman, who had every reason to do away with Miss Patrick, since she stood in the way of his marriage to Miss Grey; Bond, electrician, who had lost a previous job through the antagonism of Miss Patrick; Page, her agent, who was in difficulty over certain funds of Miss Patrick; Sherman, her body-guard, Clifford Jones, as assistant director; and Lucien Prival, the director of the picture on which Miss Patrick was working.

Bellamy, by a process of elimination, arrives at but one conclusion, although the solution costs the life of Bond, in his attempt to forward to Bellamy accidentally discovered clues. Perhaps the least suspect of all those involved in the crime, the assistant director, is forced to reveal his own guilt, when Bellamy causes the re-enactment of the scene of the murder on the set.

To be sold as mystery, to mystery fans, the picture may well be played in a midweek position.—Aaronson, New York.

BRITISH PICTURES SHOWN IN LONDON

JAVA HEAD

Produced by Associated Talking Pictures, Ltd., and distributed by Associated British Film Distributors Ltd. Directed by J. Walter Ruben. Features Anna May Wong, Edmund Gwenn, Elizabeth Allan and John Loder.

The Hergesheimer novel provides a splendid character part for Edmund Gwenn as the sea-dog father of Gerrit Ammidon, the sailor who returns from a voyage with a Chinese wife who ultimately commits suicide in order to leave him free to return to his old sweetheart. The cast is strong all through, with good American values. Wong is particularly effective in Eastern sequences. There's good "period" atmosphere and it is well dressed.

Stranger Than Fiction

(Universal)

Interesting Novelty

In a sense supplanting the "Strange As It Seems" short series, this group, of which this is the first number, was edited by Allyn Butterfield, Universal Newsreel chief, and features James Wallington, wellknown radio announcer. The camera skips from place to place, noting a trained baby seal, baby gas masks used in Paris, two farm brothers replacing their worn-out horse, a hobo hotel in Fresno, Cal., the iron-skulled Canadian who uses his head as a sledge-hammer and like oddities. Interesting and entertaining material, and Wallington's delivery is intelligent and pleasant-voiced.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Penny A Peep

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

An entertaining novelty, this subject in the Pepper Pot series is set in the "Gay Nineties," and concerns the not-too-careful husband who took his wife and two children to the peep-show palace, and indulged in a penny's worth of wickedness. What he sees in the machine comes to life, and the chorus of yesterday struts its stuff. But when wifey comes to look, the girls suddenly change their dance to a classical number. Amusing.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Betty Boop's Life Guard

(Paramount)

Entertaining

There is lightly enjoyable entertainment in this animated cartoon subject, in which Betty Boop, taking to the surf, loses her life preserver and is rescued by her handsome life guard. During moments of unconsciousness she pictures herself a mermaid on the floor of the sea, pursued by hungry denizens of the deep. An entertaining subject.—Running time, 7 minutes.

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS

Paramount

As a stage play, this ran for more than a year on Broadway. It's a comedy romance. The time is that of the American Revolution and the locale is a New England town. Screen adaptation is by Stephen Morehouse Avery, noted short story writer, and Jack Cunningham. The dialogue and continuity are by John P. McEvoy and Virginia Van Upp. The director, Ralph Murphy, previously is credited with "The Great Flirtation," "Golden Harvest" and "Girl Without a Room."

The theme, atmosphere and production values of the story offer unusual opportunity for showmanship exploitation, and the same quality is to be found in the personnel. Francis Lederer, who made his screen debut in Radio's "Man of Two Worlds," has the lead. Opposite him is Joan Bennett of the "Little Women" quartet. Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, a team that already has become a favorite, will be seen in characteristic comedy roles as Miss Bennett's Colonial father and mother. Minor Watson, who played in "Twenty Four Hours" on the screen and since has met with success on the stage, will be seen. Adrian Morris, who played the role of Thad, the town political leader in the stage version, will appear in the same role. Others are Barbara Barondess, Walter Kingsford, all in the stage version, Spencer Charters and Paul Kruger.

As many of the early social, political and moral customs are portrayed, the story tells of a young Hessian soldier who, accepting Washington's offer for deserters, lands in a New England town. Intent upon becoming an American, he finds love and romance and also a very strong determination on the part of the townsfolk that he shall not become an American. In color and significance the story seems to have the quality that is more than ordinarily appealing on account of its novelty.

CHAINED

With Joan Crawford and Clarke Gable teamed, the spot showmanship of this picture is evident. Their records in "Dance Fools Dance," "Possessed" and more recently "Dancing Lady" are familiar. Additionally Miss Crawford has lately been in "Sadie McKee" and Gable in "It Happened One Night," "Men in White" and "Manhattan Melodrama."

The story, the title "Chained" emphatically reflecting its dramatic and romantic contents, is an original by Edgar Selwyn, noted Broadway play producer. The screen play is by John Lee Mahin, whose recent work includes "Eskimo," "Prizefighter and the Lady" and "Laughing Boy." Clarence Brown, noted for many successful pictures, is the director. He also handled Miss Crawford in "Sadie McKee."

Supplementing the leads, the supporting cast is composed of well-known players, including Otto Kruger, Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor, Marjorie Gateson, Akim Tamiroff (seen in "Sadie McKee") and Paul Porcasi.

The story is modern romantic drama, produced on a colorful and elaborate scale. Building to a tense triangular situation, it relates the experiences of a girl who, appreciative of a married man's kindness, falls in love with him. Marriage being temporarily impossible, she takes an ocean voyage and meets a man who becomes infatuated with her. His feelings reciprocated, momentarily, upon her return home she marries her now divorced first love. Drama again builds as youth calls to youth, and middle age, recognizing the eternal gap, steps aside. Locales are New York, Rio de Janeiro, Argentina back-country and Lake Placid.

Title, story content and personality are indicative of the type of applicable showmanship.

PURSUED

Localed in the steaming heat of tropical West Indies Islands, the entertainment essence of this story is dramatic and sacrificial love against a background of adventure, danger and intrigue. The yarn is adapted from a popular short story, "The Painted Lady," by Larry Evans. The screen play is by Lester Cole, who has contributed to several "Charlie Chans," and Stuart Anthony, associated with many Fox pictures. Louis King is the director.

Only six persons have active parts. Rosemary Ames, previously in "I Believed In You" and "Such Women Are Dangerous," is the heroine. Victor Jory, the heavy, appeared with Miss Ames in "I Believed In You" and most recently was in "Madame DuBarry." The picture's comedy contrast is in the hands of Pert Kelton, seen in "The Bowery," "Nana," and later in "Sing and Like It" and "Bachelor Bait." Russell Hardie, erstwhile juvenile stage star and currently in "Murder in the Private Car," is the hero. Others are the veteran George Irving and Torben Meyer.

Moving to fast action, keyed to tense drama and given an exotic background, the story deals with the star entertainer of a gaudy island resort who sympathetically nurses a young newcomer (Hardie) back to health after he has been blinded by the villainous Jory's henchman. As love comes to the boy, the girl, concealing her real character, palms herself off to him as one of a higher social plane. Later learning what she really is, the boy tries to forget only to be thrown into dangerous conflict with Jory, and as the story gathers strong dramatic action momentum builds to a thrilling climax.

The story suggests wide topical exploitation tieups reflecting the color of its strange locale and the formation of alluring catchlines.

WAGON WHEELS

Paramount

A Western in character, the type of story that made legions of picture fans, this is a Zane Grey story. The title is one of its showmanship features. The song "Wagon Wheels" is the theme music of the picture. Along with "The Last Round Up" and "Home on the Range," it is one of the current popular radio broadcast numbers.

The screen adaptation is by Jack Cunningham, a specialist in western transposition, as "Under the Tonto Rim," the latest "Thundering Herd" and "The Last Round Up" indicate; and by Charles Logue and Carl Buss. Direction is by Charles Barton, long experienced as an assistant director, now making his first picture on his own.

In theme, the picture is an adventurous historical romance, against which a danger-menaced love story is told. Its dramatic atmosphere is set against the occasion of the first wagon freight train breaking a trail from the Missouri to Oregon Territory.

Most of the players featured in the story have been identified with previous Western features, although there are two principals who are novitiates in this brand of entertainment. The lead, Randolph Scott, was seen in such door action adventure pictures as "Sunset Pass," "To the Last Man" and "Thundering Herd." Gail Patrick appeared with Scott in "To the Last Man" and was also featured in "Zoo in Budapest" and "Cradle Song." Raymond Hatton is well known. Monte Blue recently was seen in "The Last Round Up." Billy Lee is Paramount's new juvenile prodigy. Jan Dugan was seen in "The Old Fashioned Way." They and Leila Bennett are the most important players.

Additionally, this Western story is usually of the kind appealing strongly to juvenile patrons, as well as to lovers of out-door action entertainment.

Bruce Testing Out Musical Subjects

Robert C. Bruce, who recently completed production on the Coast of four subjects in the Musical Moods series for Audio Productions, Inc., is now in Europe with a three-color Technicolor crew, filming four new subjects. Mr. Bruce has already completed one subject in Ireland, and is en route to Italy, where he will produce the remaining three in the group.

The musical subjects, in the nature of experimental material, are said to employ a new technique and to be the first three-color Technicolor subjects filmed out of doors, combining recorded musical entertainment with visual accompaniment. The subjects are designed by the producers to inject a period of relaxation into the regular run motion picture theatre program, which they believe to be too fast-paced, and to supply an audience need for good music.

Glen Dickinson Quits Kansas City Exchange

Glen W. Dickinson, head of the circuit bearing his name in Kansas and Missouri, has withdrawn his interest in Consolidated Film Distributors, Inc., Kansas City state rights exchange, under a reorganization of the company. W. L. Norris is president of the company. Russell C. Borg also has resigned as vice-president, and is succeeded by M. G. Shackleford. The company's other officer is W. P. Humston, secretary-treasurer. J. Erwin Dodson, formerly with National Screen Service, has been added to the staff.

What the Picture Did For Me

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

CRIME OF HELEN STANLEY, THE: Ralph Bellamy—This is a very fine little program picture. Pleased nearly 100 per cent on Bargain Night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

DEFENSE RESTS, THE: Jack Holt, Jean Arthur—I know of no one on the screen that has been more consistent than Jack Holt over a period of years, but Columbia has fiddled around with their little, unimportant efforts until they have got him in the ninth hole. According to their campaign blast for the coming season, they have more elaborate plans for him but I'm afraid it's too late. One more like this and there will be no question about it. Poorest Saturday business in months. Played July 28.—William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—A wonderful picture which any exhibitor can be proud to advertise and play. It is clean, wholesome entertainment for the whole family. If all pictures were as clean as this one, there would be no need of the Decency Campaign. This is a modern comedy drama and although a little old, it will still please much better than most of the pictures produced in the last year. Business good. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 23-24.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: Rex, the Wonder Horse—A very good western. Everybody walked out with a smile and had a good word for the show. Business slightly above the average, and satisfactory considering conditions here. There will not be a bushel of grain harvested in the whole country. That's how dry it is. Running time, seven reels.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Edmund Lowe, Ann Sothern—Nothing big and not the musical it was supposed to be. Only two song numbers and one of them sung several times. Just an average picture. Played July 13-14.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LINE-UP, THE: William Gargan, Marian Nixon—A very good program picture. Average with most of them.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MAN TRAILER, THE: Buck Jones—Good western drama that satisfies the action fans. The kids think it's great. Played July 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Spencer Tracy, Loretta Young—This is supposed to be a special and bought at a special price. Business was less than usual. Biggest part of the audience disliked it. This is no picture for a small town. Running time, eight reels. Played July 19-20-21.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NINTH GUEST, THE: Donald Cook, Genevieve Tobin—A very interesting story and well acted. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

STATE TROOPER: Regis Toomey—Swell little program picture. Held interest. Fair business. Played July 25.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

First National

DARK HAZARD: Edward G. Robinson—A good drama in the not recommended list. A few minor changes would have made this acceptable. For example: instead of Glenda Farrell being pictured as a girl of easy morals, she could be pictured as a good scout of good moral character in love with Robinson. Also other minor changes which would not have weakened the picture from an entertainment angle. Average hot weather business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

REGISTERED NURSE: Bebe Daniels, Lyle Talbot—This is a good little picture that should please the majority of patrons. Nothing big, but a good program picture. It is a drama of the trials of a nurse in a city hospital with quite a bit of action, comedy, excitement and romance. This is strictly adult entertainment as several sexy scenes appear in the picture. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 25.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

REGISTERED NURSE: Bebe Daniels, Lyle Talbot—This is a dandy. Plenty of laughs and cries to please both types. This is a sweet Family Night picture. Better than average business. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 18-19.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers—A swell picture. It is clean except for one unnecessarily dirty crack. Business was pretty good for three days. Everyone commented that they were glad First National turned out a musical without Busby Berkeley's stuff. But leave it to First National. They certainly deliver the goods. This one is a knockout in every respect: business, entertainment, draw and satisfaction. Played July 18-19-20.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers—A new kind of musical that made them talk. The radio angle seemed to create interest and with the clean romance, catchy music and several song hits, the picture proved to be ideal entertainment. Pat O'Brien deserves a great deal of credit for a sterling performance as the know-it-all agent and talent scout. Played July 23-24-25.—William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson—Did not do much for us and "Going to Heaven On a Mule" is sacrilegious. We were disappointed at box-office and in the show. People are gradually tiring of musicals but guess they do a little above average. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 16-17.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson—A very big musical show. First National put forth every effort to make this surpass their other big musicals. This is marred by Al Jolson's dirty jokes, the kind which no doubt will be banned in new product. Aside from that Al Jolson works hard and should make good in other pictures. Al Jolson is the life of the party and can make good without recourse to questionable wisecracks. The big number, "Going to Heaven On a Mule," is a marvelous number, but no doubt will offend religious people, who will object to having Heaven treated in a joking manner, even to the extent of picturing a darky's idea of Heaven, regardless of the fact that the play, "Green Pastures," has been a success. As a play "Green Pastures" only reached thousands where a picture reaches millions. The same efforts and cost directed in other channels would no doubt have brought forth results that would not offend religious elements and have given something worthwhile to talk about. A good drawing card considering the hot weather when this was played.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Fox

ALL MEN ARE ENEMIES: Helen Twelvetrees, Hugh Williams—A nice piece of cake for walkouts. Had twelve before the feature had run two reels. Fox might just as well have put the story on in a subtitle and saved the patrons 80 minutes of time wasted. Played July 25-26.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

BOTTOMS UP: "Pat" Paterson, Spencer Tracy, John Boles—In spite of hottest weather in years this drew average business and pleased more than any of the long drawn out specials they rave about. Step on it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 8-9.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

BOTTOMS UP: Spencer Tracy, John Boles—Good clean show. A little above average business. Played June 27-28.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell—Poorest business we have had on any Gaynor picture. Hate to see Gaynor slip as she has always pulled them in for us. The picture simply wasn't up to her previous ones. James Dunn was the best of the cast. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 23-24.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers, Louise Dresser—One of the best pictures of the year. All reports have been nothing but good ones.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: George O'Brien, Mary Brian—This picture was all right as a program picture, but was it necessary for Mary Brian to have a baby even though she was married? A little spice and a few warm wisecracks are all right in a picture. In such stuff as this where it isn't even necessary to the story, I think reformation is necessary.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: George O'Brien—Played this one day on a double feature and the best single day's business in some time. The title is deceiving but the fans like O'Brien. Played July 10.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee, Alice Faye—I note that George White directed and supervised this picture. He had better go back to Broadway and let some one that knows how to keep a show moving without the castbacks and constant repetition of the former numbers. Inept direction and a lot too much of Jimmy Durante. This chap is an acute pain to most of our patrons and I may say all of them for that matter. He has the same old line in every picture. Cliff Edwards was good and has always been popular with our public. The picture flopped the succeeding days and I still insist that it was amateurish directing by a man who perhaps can stage reviews that go in New York but he does not know how to direct, if this was his effort. The dance reviews are spectacular and that is all that can be said for it. Vallee is no matinee idol either. He was decidedly ham and rather sappy looking. Another radio complex by the producers.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn—A good fast moving picture but poor business. But people say they like these reporter stories because they are fast moving. Played July 17.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers—Very fine picture that pleased the majority. Rogers has good box-office draw. Played July 22.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—Swell comedy. Shoot the works. Will please any and everybody.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Warner Baxter—Thought this was a good show but some of our patrons did not like it. Everybody liked the "Hill Billy" song. Stepin Fetchit funnier than usual. Consider above average box-office and did some extra business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 2-3.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Warner Baxter, Shirley Temple—Fair picture but patrons did not seem to care for it. Was advertised to be wonderful but it was not there.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

WILD GOLD: John Boles, Claire Trevor—We had this on a double feature and the show was too long. We dropped two reels of this and the audience could not tell it. I think they would have thanked us had they known.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

MGM

CAT AND THE FIDDLE, THE: Jeannette MacDonald, Ramon Novarro—Worst major production we have run this year. Poor business. Played July 1.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Lupe Velez, Jimmy Durante, Laurel and Hardy—Not much of a story but the customers liked it and the box-office sure was above the average so it must be a good picture. Played July 21.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Laurel and Hardy—Look out for this one. My second night hit a new low in spite of a very costly ballyhoo. Laurel and Hardy have about five minutes in the picture and almost save it, but not quite.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

LAZY RIVER: Jean Parker—Played on Bargain Night. Just a program picture. No stars to draw. MGM supposed to make big pictures for which they have charged big prices. But they are coming few and far between. Must have poor production supervision. Played June 29-30.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, William Powell—A good picture for both the masses and the classes. Favorable comment from patrons. Good performance from both Gable and Powell. Myrna Loy is improving. Our patrons don't like to see their favorites die. Played July 18-19.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy—A fine show. Powell gets the grapes and steals the show. Don't hesitate to boost it.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—Okay in every way. Details of hospital and operating room right up to standard. Doctors pronounced it great. Running time, 75 minutes.—B. C. Brown, Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

MURDER IN THE PRIVATE CAR: Charles Ruggles—It isn't a murder story. It's a much better comedy. Sell it that way. We turned out all the lights in the theatre on the ape scene and the people are still talking about it.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery, Elizabeth Allan—This is only a fair picture of the mystery type and due to the name did not draw here. Our patrons expected another horror picture and did not come out. It is a mystery together with comedy and romance and will please everyone if you can get them in to see it. This has a great supporting cast, but failed to do business here. What we need is better titles and less murders. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 19.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

OPERATOR THIRTEEN: Marion Davies, Gary Cooper—One of the best. Davies and Cooper always dependable ior jam-up performances. A cleanly woven story of the Civil War espionage system. Close attention to details. Direction top-notch. Had many favorable comments, but attendance very ordinary due to extremely hot weather. Played July 19-20-21.—William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—A high class society drama of the sophisticated type of story of the girl of easy morals. As such it is well done and holds interest. Drawing power just barely that of a program picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—This is an excellent picture from Metro. It is both dramatic and romantic and deals with the life and love of a girl. It is modern entertainment and a very interesting story that will appeal to everyone. Due to the sexy scenes this is not material for children but the adults will love it. An excellent supporting cast makes this A-1 entertainment. Business good two days. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 16-17.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHOW-OFF, THE: Spencer Tracy, Madge Evans—A good picture that did not draw film rental.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—We screened this picture on Friday and Saturday when the local firemen in cooperation with about 40 other companies held their annual carnival or street fair and doubled our business when rain drove everyone to shelter. The picture is fast moving and should entertain, I suppose. However, there are several factors that mystify me. How could such a nice girl like Maureen fall in love with an uncouth, jungle-wild man, and how did Johnny keep himself so well shaven? Nevertheless, I am compelled to agree with Miss Edith Fordyce of Selma, La., that this picture should do business if the business is there.—Rudolph J. Covi, Covi's Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Coal mining patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller—Advertised big and did exceptionally good business for our town. Everybody liked it. You'll make no mistake on this one. Simply let your folks know it's in town. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 11-12.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Better than the former picture in my opinion and also that of the audience. Good story and remarkable animal shots.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Exceptionally fine. Far ahead of any other Tarzan picture. Will please everyone. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 29-30-31.—B. C. Brown, Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery—Strictly Beery picture but a big one. This is as big as "The Birth of a Nation" and if you can get the ladies in they will say it's good. Running time, 115 minutes.—B. C. Brown, Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING: May Robson, Jean Parker—Very good. May Robson exceptionally fine in this. Good for Sunday or midweek. Story interesting and well produced. Running time, 80 minutes.—B. C. Brown, Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

Monogram

BEGGARS IN ERMINE: Lionel Atwill—This is an extra good picture and our patrons told us so when they left the theatre, and that is something nowadays.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

JANE EYRE: Colin Clive, Virginia Bruce—One of the reasons which proves that an independent producing picture company cannot make a special. Here is a picture that properly produced might have made the exhibitor some money, but the way Monogram made it it's so much waste of film. I have studied this picture carefully because I put on a very special campaign to put it over and ended up very badly disappointed. To me it seems that the director didn't know what to do with the story. Added to that, the producer tried to make a "quickie" out of a feature and sacrificed a lot of scenes that could have been made to mean something. Time and again throughout the picture it is evident that the picture was being made on a "quickie" basis. To top it all it seemed to me that Miss Bruce was sullen during the greater part of the time they were making the picture. (Don't know as I blame her). The best performance was turned in by Beryl Mercer, who is a seasoned trouper and is able to carry a scene without a director. Business below average, in spite of the fact that I tried every way in the world to get the church people out to see it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 29-30.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General and small town patronage.

MAN FROM UTAH, THE: John Wayne—This is a very interesting horse opera. Story is big and way ahead of the general run of westerns. This man Wayne is certainly clever. Our Saturday crowd ate it up and said best ever.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MAN FROM UTAH, THE: John Wayne—Here is another good western picture from Monogram with John Wayne at his best and as usual he drew a large crowd and pleased everyone. This is full of action, thrills and fighting. The scenes are excellent and help make this one of the best westerns to play here in some time. Wayne always draws well here. Played one day (Saturday) to good business. Running time, 55 minutes. Played July 14.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Paramount

GOOD DAME: Fredric March, Sylvia Sidney—A fair picture but business was very poor. The weather was cool but still they didn't come. These stars no draw here and those who want to see March as a tough guy aren't numerous enough. Played July 11-12.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

GREAT FLIRTATION, THE: Elissa Landi, Adolph Menjou, David Manners—Just why Paramount, who can make good pictures, made this one will probably always remain a mystery. Foisting it upon the exhibitor is unforgivable. The picture has absolutely no entertainment value whatsoever. Terribly overacted and the foreign accent very hard to understand. The patrons walked out on this one so fast that by the time the show was over there was practically no one left in the theatre. Business below average. Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 22-23.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General and small town patronage.

HIS DOUBLE LIFE: Roland Young, Lillian Gish—Sophisticated comedy which pleased the less-than-normal number of patrons. Played July 18-19.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KISS AND MAKE UP: Cary Grant, Genevieve Tobin—This is a good little picture but doesn't mean anything to the box-office. No stars and without them they might just as well have never made the picture. It looks like Paramount would get hip to themselves, stars, cast, names. Running time, 74 minutes.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Barbara Fritchie—Wish I could get 50 more like it. Receipts better than any special and pleased the crowd. And they quit making westerns. If your town doesn't like this kind of entertainment, I am sorry for you. Running time, 65 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Barbara Fritchie—A marvelous western, one that will be liked not only by western fans but by all who see it. When westerns like this can be made why must we have this "pump the blood out of the cellar" type that have so many impossible situations that they disgust an intelligent audience? Westerns like this are a pleasure for anyone to see and a great relief from most of the tripe we have to show. Played July 12.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—A very clean picture and business very good for two days. Lanny Ross drew the women but he can't act. Fortunately he can sing. Ruggles was the whole show. Nothing special about this show but it pleased everyone who came and there were enough of them to make two good days business. Played July 13-14.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck—We were all asleep on this one. Had we got behind it like we do on some, it would have broken this hot weather record. Second night better than first. Play it big. It's not big but clean and pleasing and amusing. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 17-18.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Carl Brisson, Kitty Carlisle—Pleasing musical built about a murder mystery, the crime taking place on the opening night. Splendid music, beautiful sets in which move the chorus of lovely girls. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 22-23.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Played this one on a double feature and the best single day's business in some time. This town likes these two wisecrackers but this sort of picture is what starts the Legion of Decency. Played July 10.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

TRUMPET BLOWS, THE: George Raft, Adolphe Menjou—A wonderful picture that is different from the usual run of pictures. It is a drama of two brothers in love with the same girl and localed in Mexico, with a thrilling bullfight for the climax. Raft and Menjou take their parts splendidly and beautiful Frances Drake adds much to the entertainment with her dancing. Played one day to poor business due to electrical storm. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 20.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard, Ethel Merman, Leon Errol—A satisfactory picture here. Hot weather caused receipts to drop alarmingly, but no fault of the picture. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 1-2.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

WITCHING HOUR, THE: Judith Allen, Tom Brown—This is only fair entertainment and slightly different from the usual murder story. It is melodrama with romance, drama, comedy and thrills. Too bad that the producers cannot produce a good show without the murder angle and courtroom scene. Here's hoping the new season will bring more suitable stories for the producers and get them away from the murder scene. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 27.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields, Buster Crabbe—W. C. Fields at his best. Our audience laughed more at this picture than at anything we have presented this season. Normal business. Played July 25-26.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields—A very good comedy. Much better than the Fields performance in "Six of a Kind" and a show that will please the light comedy patrons to a man. I did not have a kick on it. The last sequence is too drawn out but not enough to spoil the show. No smutty dialogue in it. Played July 15.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO

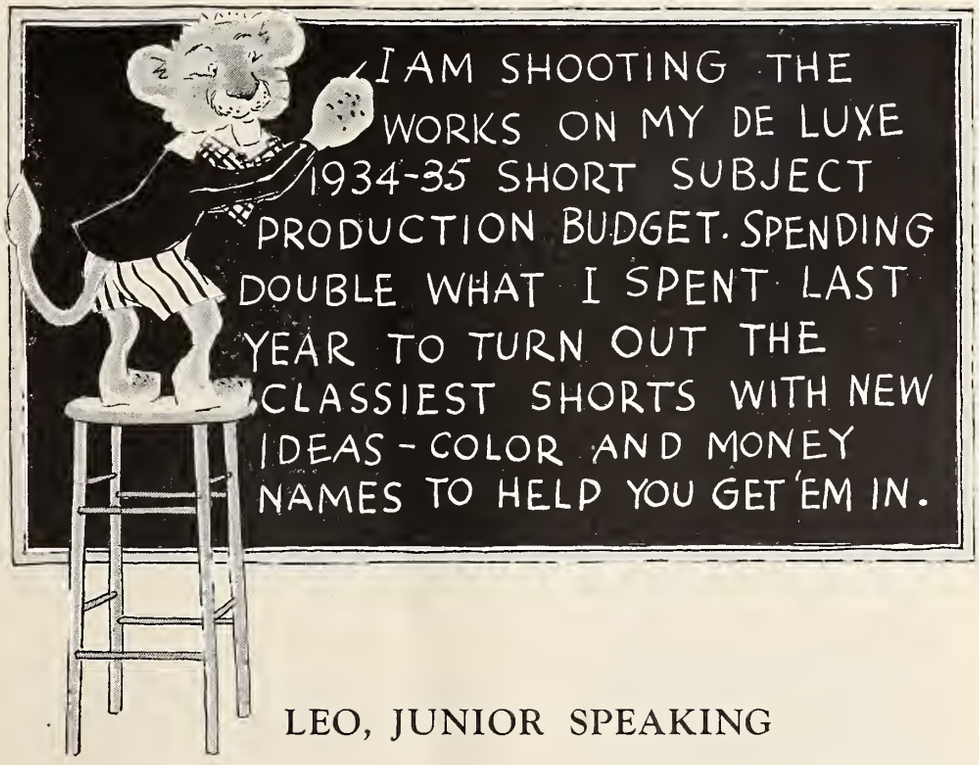
CROSS FIRE: Tom Keene—First time this western star has appeared here. Business good average. Played July 20-21.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

DIPLOMANIACS: Wheeler and Woolsey—This one was played late but business was average. It seemed to please my patrons. Some of them still think that Wheeler and Woolsey are too silly. Played June 7-8-9.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FLYING DEVILS: Ralph Bellamy, Bruce Cabot—This picture is old but made a very acceptable Bargain Night picture. Plenty of action and thrills. Pleased the Bargain Night crowd. Acting only fair and would not appeal to the sophisticates. Business average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 26-27.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General and small town patronage.

HEADLINE SHOOTER: William Gargan, Frances Dee—Nice little feature. Good for midweek but will not get any extra nickels.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS: Ann Harding, John Boles—Story interesting (of the kind) and well handled but we, took a terrible licking on the picture as it is one of the blacklisted and believe me these small towns are telling their congregations what pictures to not go and see. If they don't clean them up it will be curtain for us guys out in the sticks. An unfair fight for us small towners. Played June 22-23.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.



LOST PATROL, THE: Victor McLaglen—Expected some action and played Friday-Saturday to below average business. Action slow and majority of our patrons did not like it. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 6-7.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

MURDER ON THE BLACKBOARD: Edna Mae Oliver, James Gleason—Good little detective tale. Pleased our weekend audience. Clean. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 27-28.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—Don't think Hepburn will ever be very popular in small towns. Business poor but some of our patrons seemed to like it. We class this with the worst. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 9-10.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. malSl town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—A mighty good picture. Interesting story and a great actress. Gave good satisfaction. Played July 29-30.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn, Ralph Bellamy—This is a poor picture to the worst business in years. This is very poor entertainment and did not appeal to the few customers that did see it; as a matter of fact, many asked for a refund. Mickey Mouse means more to our box-office than Hepburn. Miss Hepburn and this picture may be great in other places but here they both are just a flop. Business very poor. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 26.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

STINGAREE: Irene Dunne, Richard Dix—A picture with both good and bad points, which puts it in the program class, its good points being very good acting on the part of the principals, some very good singing (although all female and of the higher class stuff), a swell love story and a good ending. Which should have put it in the top class had it not been for the fact that it is staged in Australia amid an era of dress that calls for bustles and such and added for a comedy relief a screeching female who thought she could sing but in reality gets very tiresome after the first laugh. Producers should learn that the public does not generally care for costume pictures. They want their stories down to earth and their comedy a little more slapstick. Will go better in a larger town than a small one. Very clean. Played July 22.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STRICTLY DYNAMITE: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez—Fair comedy-drama, with radio broadcast background. Clean. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 20-21.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRICTLY DYNAMITE: Jimmy Durante—Just a lot of nothing thrown together. Not even funny. If your patrons like Durante, they will like him no better after seeing this. Played July 4-5.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

TOMORROW AT SEVEN: Chester Morris—A very good mystery show from this producer. Nobody in the audience could identify the Black Ace until the end. McHugh and Jenkins as the dumb detectives furnished the comedy.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—Good picture of its kind. Some said it was good; others said that they just didn't enjoy a picture of this kind. Running time, nine reels. Played July 25-26.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomoton, Ala. Small town patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—A good picture of its type. Will chase a few women away because they see snakes on the paper, and will bring some people in who never come to anything but pictures of the authentic type. A good picture that does not drag as much as the first one did. Has two or three scenes that were obviously staged which hurts a little but at the same time add thrills. Entire show is narrated. Played July 19.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

State Rights

PASSION PLAY: This picture was played the week following Easter and this report is rather late, but better late than never. This picture is silent with synchronized sound and descriptive dialogue and is very good for its kind. Business above average but I did not make any money. If you get it next year, don't pay too much. Running time, seven reels. Played April 5-6-7.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

MASQUERADER, THE: Ronald Colman—Just a lot of bunk that only adults would understand. No good for children.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

PALOOKA: Jimmy Durante, Stuart Erwin—A good picture with enough names in the cast to pull them in. The cash customers were all pleased with this. So was I after a peek at the box-office statement. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 18.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII, THE: Charles Laughton—These foreign pictures just don't appeal to anyone. Poor business. Played July 8.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SORRELL AND SON: H. B. Warner—This may be a very fine picture but it is entirely too slow moving for the average audience. The lack of prominent names also weakens its drawing power. Played July 25.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Universal

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Patrons disappointed in this one as they do not seem to care for gruesome features. Story draggy. Won't make any extra money.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Edgar Allen Poe must have turned over in his grave when they made this. It is not a mystery and not very horrible either in the horror sense and besides that business was terrible. They had a chance to do something and muffed it. Played July 15-16.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

COUNTESS OF MONTE CRISTO: Fay Wray, Paul Lukas—This picture, while entertaining, will never break any box-office records, will do for fill-in nights but will not stand a run or pressure with advertising or exploitation. Was agreeably surprised that Paul Lukas talks in this so you can understand him. Fay Wray her same irresistible self, and a girl who plays the maid deserves special mention as well as many other players. Business the worst in fifteen years. Shown four days first part of week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

CROSBY CASE, THE: Wynne Gibson, Onslow Stevens—A nice little murder mystery that your patrons will enjoy if they like them.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres, Alice White—A most interesting melodrama that holds your interest pretty well all the way. This is on the list of not recommended pictures. A few minor changes would have made this acceptable. Drawing average hot weather business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GLAMOUR: Constance Cummings—Drama with considerable backstage locale. Constance as the singer who divorces one man to marry another, going back to her first love, when she finds the second unfaithful. Good acting but not much to act about. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 15-16.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

GUN JUSTICE: Ken Maynard, Cecilia Parker—Average western.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

HALF A SINNER: Joel McCrea, Sally Blane—Best picture from Universal to date. Clean, sensible and amusing. Even our church crowd liked it. I used it on Sunday and Monday when the specials go, and more favorable comment than any of the specials yet. One for the whole family, including the preacher. Legion of Decency won't bother this one and I call it entertainment for small towns and family audiences. Running time, 78 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—This was the first western we had played in several weeks and it drew business a little larger than we have been getting. Seemed to satisfy. Played July 28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—A good western picture, lots of action.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

I GIVE MY LOVE: Wynne Gibson, Paul Lukas—It's a swell woman's picture if you can get them in. I couldn't. But there were not a few wet handkerchiefs among those who came. Cast too weak to draw. Sell Vicki Baum story.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy—Have read many reports on this that were favorable and I add mine to this. It makes excellent entertainment, but was a box-office flop, with conditions favorable for real business. Three days last part of week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

LET'S BE RITZY: Lew Ayres, Patricia Ellis—Nice program feature good for midweek. Clean and nice entertainment.—W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb. Working class and farm patronage.

LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW: Margaret Sullavan, Douglas Montgomery—Sullavan can't hold the picture all by herself, especially when the plot didn't suit her. A couple more pictures like this and Universal will undo all the fine work they have done in building her.—Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW?: Margaret Sullavan—This one tried hard to reach the heights but what a mess. It does not come under the class of entertainment and it is a pitiful thing that just when Universal has brought out the greatest find in movieland in several years (Margaret Sullavan) that they select a picture that depicts all the rottenness in the world, like this one does. After seeing this you will wonder if tbere is anything good to live for. Personally I would say to Uncle Carl, if I had a chance, that if he wished to ruin Margaret Sullavan to cast her in just one more like this.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

LOVE BIRDS: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—Drew normal business and pleased those who enjoy this type of performance. Played July 21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MADAME SPY: Fay Wray, Nils Asther—Just one more program. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 3-4.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

MADAME SPY: Fay Wray, Nils Asther—A good picture but no draw at the box-office. Played this just when the hot spell moderated and should have done well. No names in the cast. Played July 8-9.—Robert Wile, Granada Theatre, Pearl River, N. Y. Small town and suburban patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY: John Boles, Margaret Sullavan—A few more seductions by Boles and he will be repulsive. Our little mountain town still thinks seductions, bastards, unfaithful husbands and wives fail to make entertainment. More power to the Catholic Church or any others that think they can rid us of such pictures. I get sick and disgusted with the business every time I have to face my patrons who have paid to see entertainment and come out and ask why did I show such a picture. Wherein is there any enjoyment in seeing a seducer repent of his sins and a girl suffer. Mr. Boles won't portray his prodigal ways on our screen again. Played May 13-14. Running time, 105 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

SMOKING GUNS: Ken Maynard—Held up to average business in hottest weather this year. Would say more care was taken in making this than usual western and makes satisfactory entertainment.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—Here is one of the best western pictures of the season. Ken Maynard at his best, but the wild horse furnished the show with thrills. This is above the average western and should thrill all western fans. The entire story is built around the wild horse and the fight between the two wild horses is a real thriller. We played this one Saturday to a very good business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 21.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WHEELS OF DESTINY: Ken Maynard—Thought this much better than "Honor of the Range." Pleased our patrons thoroughly. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 13-14.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner

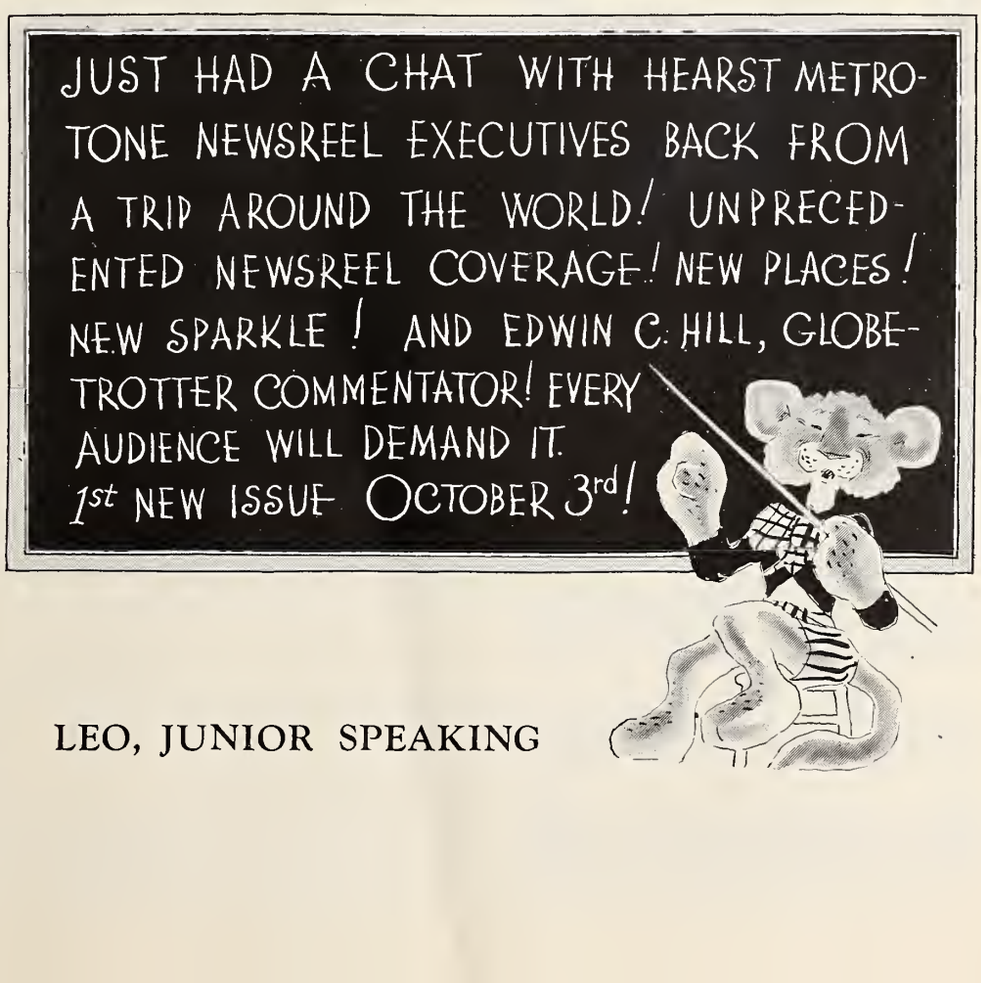
EASY TO LOVE: Adolpe Menjou—Very clever comedy. Hot weather. Dull business. Played July 15.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FROM HEADQUARTERS: George Brent, Margaret Lindsay—A very good picture. George Brent is always good and has a very attractive voice. Margaret Lindsay very pretty.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck—A good picture that drew very well and gave good satisfaction. Played July 26-27.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933: Warren William, Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell—A very good musical. Some of the patrons say this was the best musical shown here but business does not prove it. "Forty-Second Street" still holds the all-time record for attendance here. Business only average on this one. Played July 28-29-30.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HI, NELLIE!: Paul Muni—Here is a picture you can make a lot of fuss about and it will uphold all you promise for it and coming under the recommendation list should help some. Drawing power a fair hot weather average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.



I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER: Joan Blondell—Snappy little comedy. A bit risque. Played July 15.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

JOURNAL OF CRIME: Ruth Chatterton—A very good program picture. The star great and story interesting. Played July 19-20.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MERRY WIVES OF RENO: Glenda Farrell, Donald Woods—This one is a boney. Plenty of comedy and situations that made this one a very entertaining picture. Pleased 100 per cent. I notice this one condemned by Decency League. I believe its being condemned helped it here. Business average. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 26-27.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General and small town patronage.

SMARTY: Joan Blondell, Warren William—Just another little insignificant affair that didn't mean a thing and believe me we are getting plenty of these turkeys of late. If the idea is to absorb playing time for no good reason, then such as this fills the bill completely. Played July 26-27.—William Conn, Webb Theatre, Gastonia, N. C. Family patronage.

SMARTY: Joan Blondell—Nothing to it. A disappointment at box-office. Played June 25-26.—A. E.

Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

TELEGRAPH TRAIL: John Wayne—A very good western, well liked by my patrons. A little music in this and they certainly enjoyed it. Running time, six reels. Played July 13-14.—Martin Teker, Leith Opera House, Leith, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

UPPER WORLD: Warren William, Mary Astor—This is very poor entertainment of the murder type and will not please. The public is fed up with these murder pictures and here's hoping the producers will discontinue them for the sake of the exhibitors. This has an excellent cast but their efforts are entirely wasted on such a story as this. Here's hoping next season will bring better pictures. Business only fair. Running time, 72 minutes. Played July 18.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

UPPER WORLD: Warren William, Mary Astor—You'll have a hard time getting them in but they'll like it. Good program picture. Played July 25-26.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky.

WORLD CHANGES, THE: Paul Muni—Marvelous production but poor title. Just fair business. Played June 10.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Short Features

Educational

GOLD GHOST, THE: Buster Keaton—Not good, nor neither is it bad. Between the two.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

MGM

CRACKED ICEMAN: Charlie Chase—A very good two-reeler that will please everyone. This presents Chase at his best and will be one of the best of his this season. As a rule Chase always makes good shorts and here's hoping he will continue. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

ITALY, LAND OF INSPIRATION: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—This is a very interesting and educational one-reeler presenting scenes of Italy. The scenes are beautiful and this should be good entertainment. However, my patrons do not like this series of shorts and always walk out on them. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

JAIL BIRDS OF PARADISE: Musical Revues—These two-reel Musical Revues seem to get worse all the time. Nothing to them.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

ROAST BEEF AND MOVIES: Musical Revues—Worst colored short this year. No story to it. No laughs.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

ROPING WILD BEARS: Oddities—This is a very interesting and thrilling one-reeler showing just what the name indicates. Together with thrills are the famous remarks by the one and only Peter Smith. This adds much to the entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHERMAN SAID IT: Charley Chase—Just fair. Charley needs new gags and more comedy.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

CAN YOU TAKE IT?: Popeye the Sailor—Another of those Popeye cartoons that you know pleases for when it appears on the screen there is almost always a good round of applause. Running time, seven minutes.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General and small town patronage.

COLD TURKEY: Joseph Cawthorn—This is only a fair comedy from Paramount. Why is it that Paramount cannot make a good two-reel short? They only have one and they are the Bing Crosby shorts. Here's hoping they will put better two-reelers on the market next season. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LAZYBONES: Screen Songs—This is a very good one-reeler full of music and featuring Borrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Rascals playing the ever popular selection "Lazybones." The cartoon comedy in connection is very good and this is excellent entertainment for young and old. Running time, nine minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LET'S ALL SING LIKE THE BIRDIES SING: Screen songs—Paramount song hits all good so far.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

UP AND DOWN: Franklin Pangborn—Here is another poor two-reeler from Paramount. These two-reel shorts from Paramount are the worst on the market and next season they should center their efforts on these or stop producing them. I would prefer the last. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

RKO

HEY NANNY, NANNY: Clark and McCullough—A pretty fair two-reeler but our patrons do not care much for this pair. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY MOUSE: Did not draw any extra business for us. We bought these to get "Pigs," but so far proving bad investment.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

SILLY SYMPHONIES: Not worth the money for small towns. "Three Little Pigs" drew extra business. But, otherwise, just like the rest at box-office.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

Universal

BROADWAY VARIETIES: Mentone No. 7—I will admit the short reel market is overstocked with poor material and very little good stuff and this one comes under the classification of the poor variety.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: If you ask me, this is a marvelous reel to empty seats. So, if you are selling S.R.O. this will be just what you want between feature attractions.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

STUNG AGAIN: Louise Fazenda—I was stung and so was the crowd. Such comedies are tragedies for me.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. Family patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

AROUND THE CLOCK: Norma Terris, Four Eton Boys—Fair.— Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BORRAH MINNEVITCH AND HIS HARMONICA RASCALS: Melody Masters—A dandy short. Ideal for Friday-Saturday in small town.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

BUDDY'S DAY OUT: Looney Tunes—A very good cartoon that will please both young and old. I expected the public to tire of these cartoons but as yet they are holding out very good. Personally, I like them and would prefer them to the two-reelers. Runnine time, nine minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

GIRL TROUBLE: Mitchell and Durant—One of the best we have run. Color was beautiful.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MUSHROOMS: Harry Gribbon—This is a fairly good two-reel comedy of the slapstick variety. It seemed to please our audience and there were many laughs. Not as good as some of the others, but will please the average theatre goer. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

NOT TONIGHT, JOSEPHINE: Frank McHugh—Swell comedy. These colored reels are fine.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PICTURE PALACE: Hal LeRoy—A swell bit of dancing in this one. Very well received.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SERVICE WITH A SMILE: Leon Errol—A very pleasing colored short. Comedy fair and nice musical numbers. The whole idea very novel and good entertainment. Running time, 19 minutes.—H. M. Johnson, Avon Theatre, Avon Park, Fla. General and small town patronage.

THOSE WERE WONDERFUL DAYS: Merrie Melodies—Another good cartoon comedy with music and plenty of laughs. These cartoons are practically the best fillers on the market and provide excellent entertainment on any program. Here's hoping the public will not tire of these. Running time, nine minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

'TIS SPRING: Patricia Ellis, Allen Jenkins—Grand sound, color. Everything was perfect, including the hilarious comedy.—Alyce Cornell, Galewood Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FIVE MORE ENROLL IN REPORTING ARMY

Five new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week are: W. R. Boughn, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb.; Mel Thorley, Thorley Theatre, Cedar City, Utah; Rudolph J. Serials

Mascot

FIGHTING WITH KIT CARSON: Johnny Mack Brown, Noah Beery—This is only a fair serial and although it is full of action, thrills, fighting and gunplay, it is not as good as some of the other serials. I have one major objection to these serials. That is the repetition of scenes. I would like to know if Levine considers these scenes so wonderful that they should be repeated or if they are just to fill in the running time. You pay for 24 reels and get 12 reels of entertainment and 12 reels of repeated scenes. The first reel of each chapter is merely the repetition of the last reel of the preceding chapter. This seems to be in practice with all serials producers and something should be done to stop it, for the patrons' sake. Here's hoping this practice will be discontinued. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

WOLF DOG, THE: Rin Tin Tin, Jr., Frankie Darro—Starts out with plenty of action and thrills.—B. C. Brown, Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

Universal

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones—This held interest from start to finish.—B. C. Brown, Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

VANISHING SHADOW, THE: Onslow Stevens, Ada Ince—This serial is holding up good. Played first chapter with outstanding picture to big crowd and it pays to start them off in this way.—A. E. Christian, Wayne Theatre, Monticello, Ky. Small town patronage.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

55—CONTRACTS, PLAYING TIME, TRAILERS, UNION TROUBLE

QUESTION—(a) In signing new contracts do I have to buy the newsreel?

(b) Do I have to give the exchanges preferred playing time?

(c) My competitor, operating 12 miles away, every week distributes handbills in my town. Is this against the code?

(d) My theatre grosses one-sixth of what my competitor's theatre grosses, but I have to pay 33 per cent more for my trailers. Have I under the code any chance for relief?

(e) I do my own operating (projecting), but I have in the projection room a young man who is desirous of learning how to operate. I do not pay this man anything for his work in the operating room, but I do pay him $3.00 per week for helping around the theatre. Can I be criminally prosecuted for giving this young man a chance to learn a trade? The operators' union has asked the district attorney to remove the young man. If their charges are unjust, can I bring legal action against the operators' union?—CALIFORNIA.

ANSWER—(a) The code does not say an exhibitor must buy newsreels in signing new contracts, nor does the code say that a distributor cannot demand that an exhibitor buy newsreel as a condition of the contract. Nor are newsreels included in the code clause which says that a distributor shall not force an exhibitor, as a condition of a feature contract, to buy more short subjects than an exhibitor can use. The entire contract matter regarding newsreels is one which must be worked out by the exhibitor with the distributor in the negotiations and discussions involving the new feature contract.

(b) The code does not say that an exhibitor must give an exchange preferred playing time, nor does the code say that a distributor cannot demand preferred playing time from the exhibitor. It is a matter of bargaining between the distributor and the exhibitor in negotiating the new contract. However, there is a clause in the code which says that "No distributor shall require any specific day or days of the week for the exhibition of specified pictures or class of pictures, unless specifically provided for in the exhibitor's contract, and in no event if the rental fee is for a fixed sum only."

(c) The competitor, operating 12 miles away, is not violating the code by distributing handbills in the complaining exhibitor's town, unless the competitor's handbills advertise motion pictures to which the complaining exhibitor has a right prior. The code clause involved in this matter says: "No exhibitor licensed to exhibit a motion picture, subsequent to its exhibition by another exhibitor having the right to a prior run of such motion picture, shall advertise such picture by any means of advertising prior to or during its exhibition by such other exhibitor" who has the prior right to such pictures.

(d) The code cannot give any relief from the situation described whereby the complaining exhibitor pays 33 per cent more for trailers than the competitor pays. This is a matter to be adjusted by the complaining exhibitor with his trailer service.

(e) The situation described whereby the local union is complaining about the exhibitor teaching a young man how to operate a projection machine is not a code matter, except as it might involve the clause in the code which says that no person shall be employed in a theatre who is under 16 years of age. The code otherwise does not specifically prohibit the teaching of an apprentice. Because of the fact that the young man involved is not a regular theatre employee, only helping around the theatre occasionally, we do not believe that the minimum wage of 25 cents an hour, as stipulated in the code for theatre attendants, applies to this individual. It is suggested that the complaining exhibitor discuss with his attorney that part of the question involving the possibility of taking legal action against the operators' union for making a complaint to the district attorney.

56—REPLACING UNION MEN WITH NON-UNION MEN

QUESTION—Some time ago in this city a theatre was being operated by a well known circuit which employed union projectionists. It was the only theatre out of five that did so. The lease on this theatre was bought by a local theatre competitor who immediately discharged the union men on five minutes' notice, replacing the two union operators with one non-union projectionist at half the wages that the union men received. This theatre's operating hours averaged 50 per week, the one man working the complete 50-hour shift without relief. After two weeks the house was closed. Did the exhibitor violate the code?—OREGON.

ANSWER—There is no provision in the motion picture code which prohibits a theatre owner from discharging his union operators and replacing them with non-union men. However, it appears that the new owner was in violation of the code when he compelled the new non-union projectionist to work 50 hours per week, instead of the 40-hour maximum specified in the code.

Another possible violation of the code by the new owner was his reduction of wages for the new non-union projectionist to half of the scale formerly paid the union operators, provided that in making such reduction the exhibitor lowered the wages below the minimum wage scale that was in force in that theatre or that locality on August 23, 1933.

The code specifically says that operators' wages shall not be lower than the minimum wages in effect on August 23, 1933, and that their schedule of working hours shall not be longer than the maximum in effect on the same date, but in no event shall such maximum of hours exceed 40 weekly.

57—REGARDING PAYMENT OF CODE ASSESSMENT

QUESTION—I operate a 490-seat theatre in a town of 4,000 and was assessed $9 by the Code Authority for code expense.

I have not signed the code because this theatre is small, is operated as a family affair more than anything else, operates part time half of the year, and the village has less than 1,500 persons during the season between April and September.

This house has been placed in the Class A-1 column by the Code Authority for assessment purposes.

In the first place, I have not signed the code. Do I have to pay any assessment?

In the second place, this theatre has less than the necessary 500 capacity to fall in Class A. If I have to pay at all, can they force me to pay the $9 when it should be $6?

Will I violate the code and be penalized for it if I pay no installments, and operate on a "live and let live" basis?—NEW YORK.

ANSWER—If the exhibitor believes that the Code Authority placed his theatre in the wrong classification for assessment, and such assessment is, in his opinion, unfair, he may take his case before the Local Grievance Board in his territory, or to the Code Authority in New York for a hearing and adjustment.

Even though an exhibitor has not signed the code, but has accepted or has asked for any benefits under the code—such as the 10 per cent cancellation privilege—then the exhibitor must pay the assessment, and the Code Authority has ruled that if an exhibitor does not pay such assessment when he is subject to payment, then he may not show in his theatre any motion picture to which is attached the NRA Blue Eagle, and if he does he is in violation of the code.

Verschleiser, Lackey Now Monogram Producers

Robert Welsh, executive producer for Monogram, has announced that Ben Verschleiser and William Lackey have been raised to full Monogram producers, with a wider range of production responsibility. They had been associate producers.

Trem Carr, in charge of Monogram production on the Coast, has been discharged from the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Hollywood, following a major operation and confinement for six weeks.

New Censor Board of Nine Members Named in Seattle

An entirely new board of theatre censors, nine in number instead of five as formerly, has been named by Mayor Charles E. Smith of Seattle, who assumed official duties last month.

The new board includes Rev. Dr. Cyrus A. Wright, a leader in the "clean films" movement; L. Kenneth Schoenfeld, furniture dealer; Frank A. Donley, real estate dealer; Charles R. Watts, building material dealer; G. Roy Sumpter, president of the Seattle Property Owners' Association; Ellis H. Moehring, suburban shoe dealer; N. W. Federspiel, salesman; Charles Crickmore, motion picture projectionist and Mrs. George Faltico, active in Italian club circles. A chairman is to be elected shortly.

DEAR HERALD:

We are wondering if the directors of Western pictures will ever get a true vision of the real west. It is a common idea among picture makers that the West is composed of bandits, Indians and drunken cowboys, all of which might have been true years ago but which is a joke nowadays. There are more bandits within the city limits of New York than there are in the territory west of the Mississippi river. Out here the trees and telephone poles are too handy. A drunken cowboy nowadays is pretty generally a young punk from the East who comes west and puts on a pair of chaps, a couple of six shooters and a wide rimmed hat and imagines he is a "bad actor" until some cowboy takes it out of him. After that he goes back to mamma and tells of what he did in the west, if he can get anyone to listen to him.

Out here there are no posses chasing people over the hills and mountains unless they are after cattle rustlers, which rarely occurs these days, except as we see them in the pictures. The supposed "drunken cowboy of the West" is as much of a gentleman today as you will find in most communities east of the Alleghenies.

A Westerner would as soon expect to see a barroom scene out here as pictured in the movies as he would a rodeo at the corner of Broadway and 42nd Street, New York. We are civilized out here and Hollywood ought to find that out pretty soon. The nearest to a true Western we have seen in a long time was Jackie Cooper the other evening in "Lone Cowboy."

The man who directed this picture has evidently been out in the short grass himself and knows something of conditions, for in "Lone Cowboy" he picturizes the West as it pretty generally is, and he leaves out a lot of that nonsense that exists only in the mind of the studios. If you want to see something of the West, see Jackie Cooper in "Lone Cowboy." It's reasonable and it's entertaining, although somewhat overdrawn.

Ever since we were a boy in short pants (although that was so far back that we can't visualize ourself in short pants) we have been somewhat goofy about a circus and when Joe E. Brown came to town on the screen in "The Circus Clown" we were ready to carry water to the elephants if necessary to see the show.

Joe didn't play much of a "clown" part but he was strong on doing the lover part with one of the bareback riders.

He played a double role, the part of the father and son, and in his characterization of the father he especially pleased us because he looked very much like our old friend, Henry B. Walthall.

As an actor he is splendid. As an acrobat and tumbler he will pass without criticism. As a trapeze performer his double did some excellent work, but when it comes to "hick lovin" you've got to pass the mustard to Joe. The circus is an ancient theme for movie men, and it has been worked pretty hard, but it is always an interesting subject with us young people. Joe and "Leo" put on an act all by themselves, and there was one time when Joe got his feet washed as they should be.

A fellow said to us the other day, "Say, Colonel, you were out to Hollywood for three months and no doubt you were in the studios a great deal and met a lot of the people. Will you tell me the most handsome star you saw?" We thought a moment and then replied, "Well, if you will guarantee that we won't be shot, and will keep it strictly under your hat, we would say that it was Venus. And he said, "Venus, Venus, Never heard of her before."

We knew a fellow once by the name of "Teddy" who said to the striking miners in southern Illinois, "You go to mining coal right now or the government will." He didn't let the people freeze for the want of coal. But then there weren't as many voters in those days as there are now.

Out in front of a window where we are writing this we have a bird bath and there are some robins that will sit on this bath for an hour and not drink themselves but they will fight away the other birds that do want to drink. This makes us so darn mad that it causes us to wonder if it would be a violation of the game and bird law if we should get our gun and shoot some insectivorous birds with both barrels.

During the World War, while our boys were over in the trenches in France, being shot at at $30.00 per month, we were out in Seattle at the time the longshoremen and ship carpenters getting $8 a day struck for higher wages and the government paid them $12 a day, which wasn't enough for the chances they were taking in falling into the water and getting all wet.

Now the longshoremen at San Francisco have struck for $1 per hour. With beer selling at ten cents per glass the poor fellows ought to have it. We can pick up 100 men in two days out here who would be glad to work for $1 per day, and yet we have heard of some people who are dissatisfied with three thousand a week. We had a pretty good feed once at a bachelor's shack out on the plains huting and all we had was rye bread and sorghum molasses, with the flies so thick they looked like a swarm of bees. We were so hungry that it tasted like a banquet in the Brown Derby. It isn't what you are getting that makes you dissatisfied, it is what you think you ought to have, and don't get. Now, you take Ernie, for instance, he thinks this spasm is long enough and he will be perfectly satisfied if we quit.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 235.—(A) Are there ever more than two wires in an electric circuit, insofar as has to do with electrical action? Explain. (B) Explain, in detail, why in a three-wire circuit there are three separate circuits available. (C) Explain the different effects of these various circuits and what their effect is or may be on the generators connected thereto. (D) Tell us what is consumed when electrical power is produced. (E) Explain what happens in a rheostat connected in series with an electric arc. (F) Would or would it not be theoretically possible to operate an arc on 110-volt current without rheostatic resistance or something in lieu thereof? (Some of this series of questions may make you put on your very best thinking cap!)

Answer to Question No. 229

Bluebook School Question No. 229 was: (A) What do you understand by the "critical angle"? (B) Given a clean, perfectly transparent sheet of glass one-eighth of an inch thick, would it be possible to hold it so with relation to a light source that no light would enter or pass through it? (C) What is "chromatic aberration" and what is its effect? (D) Just what is white light?

Some of those listed may observe that I have stretched things considerably to enable them to "get by" on Section D. The following, with the foregoing notation, made good:

I have selected the reply of J. R. Walker to Section A for publication. He says:

"First let me quote the laws of refraction. When a ray of light is refracted in passing from one medium into another of different refractive power the following laws obtain:

"1. Light is refracted whenever it passes obliquely from one medium to another of different optical density.

"2. The index of refraction for a given substance is a constant quantity whatever the angle of incidence.

"3. Light rays are bent toward the normal when they enter a more refractive medium, and from the normal when they enter a less refractive medium.

"Now the critical angle is that angle between the incident ray and the perpendicular drawn to the surface in the medium of smaller velocity at the point at which total reflection begins to occur, and total reflection can take place only when light traveling in any medium meets another medium in which the speed is greater.

"The critical angle varies with the nature of the substance: thus, for water and air it is about 48.5 degrees; for crown glass, 42.5 degrees; for flint glass, 38.6 degrees; for diamond, 23.7 degrees.

"Bodies immersed in a medium more highly refracting than air appear nearer the surface of this medium, but they appear to be more distant if immersed in a less refracting medium. For example: a stick plunged obliquely into water appears bent, the immersed part appearing raised."

J. Richmond answers thus: "The critical angle, or limiting angle, as it sometimes is called, is that angle beyond which light rays no longer will enter the surface of a second medium, but are instead wholly reflected therefrom. This total reflection takes place only when the surface encountered is of less density than the one in which the light rays are traveling. Water has a critical angle of about 48 degrees, 30 minutes. If a light ray in water meets an air surface at a less angle than that, it will leave the water and enter the air. If the angle be 48 degrees, 30 minutes or more, it will not leave the water. Forty-eight degrees, 30 minutes is therefore the critical angle for water and air."

(B) G. E. Doe answers: "No. In the first place there is no such thing as a perfectly transparent sheet of glass. It is only 'perfectly transparent' from an optical viewpoint. [Well, isn't that perfectly transparent for our purpose?—F. H. R.] Also the critical angle applies only when light is incident upon a surface of less density than it is then in, and glass has greater density than air. It therefore would be impossible to hold a glass in such position that light traveling through air would not enter it."

(C) Oldham says: "Chromatic aberration is that quality of an uncorrected lens that causes it to separate white light more or less into its primary colors. The color at the edge of the spot on the projector mechanism cooling plate is due to chromatic aberration set up by the condenser lenses. The spherical aberration of the same lenses sends the color down into the spot, which to some extent detracts from its pure whiteness."

A. F. Sprafke answers Section C thus: "When white light is passed through a spherical lens, both refraction and dispersion occur. This causes a separation of the white light into the various colors, and causes images to have colored edges. This effect, which is most observable in condenser lenses, is due to the unequal refrangibility of the simple colors. But where we have a complete optical system, consisting of two condensers and an objective, it is possible to so construct the combination that practically no color is visible."

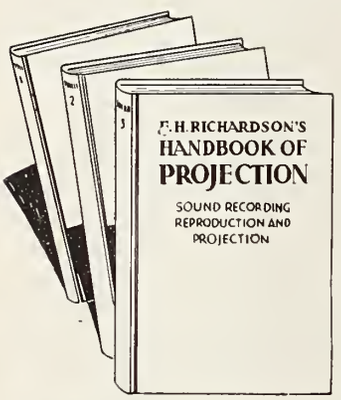
Two Theatre Men Condemn Contents Of Fan Magazines

Sharp denunciation of the general run of content of the so-called motion picture "fan" magazines was voiced recently by two southern exhibitors. From one, Vogel Gettier of the Liberty theatre, at Sedalia, Mo., came the expression, "yellow journalism," and from Arthur Swanke, manager of the Saenger theatre, at Hope, Ark., the phrase, "suggestive picture books."

Declared Mr. Gettier: "Your present-day fan magazine is the worst type of 'yellow journalism,' sex-ridden, all the filth and gory slime that can possibly be dug up about our stars and members of the film colony, and the good suffer along with the bad. . . . A little investigation will show just how few of our real fans read this trash. There are thousands of 'hearse chasers' in this broad land . . . but these are not the profitable customers, the regular patrons who make up our regular audiences."

With reference to cooperation between the theatre screen and the fan magazines, on the part of the theatre manager, Mr. Gettier was vehement in his warning against any such practice. "The manager who plays with the present-day fan magazine," he said, "is playing with dynamite, the same as when he failed to raise his voice against sex and filth in his picture."

Mr. Swanke, somewhat less harsh but none the less emphatic, leans very much in the same direction when he says, "They are not 'movie' magazines, but suggestive picture books and they are helping, with each issue, the cause of national censorship. . . . Their main stock in trade seems to be the publishing of hot scenes, love clinches and the like . . . 20 years ago we used to have two or three fairly decent movie magazines . . . but not now."



Mr. Swanke is equally decisive in his opinion that, in view of the type of material to be found in the regular run of fan magazines of today, any cooperation on the part of the exhibitor which looks to a buildup which must inevitably result in increased circulation for the fan papers, is, to say the least, unwise.

Gillham Bills 55,000 Sheets For Opening of "Cleopatra"

Robert Gillham, director of Paramount advertising, will complete this week a billboard campaign for the opening of Cecil De Mille's "Cleopatra," for which he is using the equivalent of 55,000 one-sheets pasted on boards in some 93 cities and towns in the Metropolitan district, embracing New York, Westchester, Long Island, New Jersey and Connecticut. The premiere, scheduled for the Paramount on Broadway, on August 16, will mark the beginning of a long run policy at that theatre.

Mr. Gillham's billboard campaign, which was routed by Alec Moss, his assistant, includes 350 28-sheets, 1,000 14-sheets, 2,000 6-sheets, 3,500 3-sheets and 8,000 1-sheets, representing 55,000 one-sheets covering a total of 15,000 boards. It is the company's first extensive billboard campaign since Marlene Dietrich's "Song of Songs."

Short Subject Facilities Expand Ruling on Doubles Brings Tilt; Ten Pictures Start, Seven Finish

WITH part fulfillment of a long overdue promise to eliminate double bills now brightening up the production and exhibition field, producers are letting no grass grow under their feet in expanding their short subject facilities. More time, effort and larger bankrolls are being entered into the one and two-reel budgets.

Some film producers already have armed to the teeth with exploitation and publicity campaigns ballyhooing the short product.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the ground breaker in the new move. Al Feinman is heading the eastern department of publicity and exploitation on short product. Don McElwaine and Tom Wright have charge of the publicity facilities on the coast.

Thirty-five per cent of the short output at this studio is being done in the new three-color Technicolor process. They already have established longer shooting schedules and bigger budgets.

The Hal Roach Studios, though their product is released through MGM organization, is branching out on its own hook due to the scheduled expulsion of duals. Plans are being formulated for a general expansion of personel and facilities. A construction program is being planned that will top the $100,000 mark. Seven new writers and an art director have augmented the staff.

Universal has been sitting tight awaiting decision of the local clearance and zoning boards. However, with the handwriting now on the wall the studio is talking a new deal with Warren Doane, shorts producer, with much depending upon the general reception of two musical shorts recently completed.

Columbia, which announced an increase in short subject output, finds itself in a ground floor position to meet the impending condition.

With the sudden ascension of Shirley Temple to starring ranks, Fox is reissuing the series of Educational comedies in which the youngster was featured.

News Flashes

Controversy spread out here last week when news reached the street that the Local Zoning and Clearance Board had upheld its clause penalizing any theatre that showed two features for one admission.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, said: "Independent distributors throughout the country will protest and appeal direct to the Code Authority in New York the decision handed by the local board. . . . The showing of two features is no more unfair trade practice than the joint showing of vaudeville with pictures in one house against the straight picture policy in another house in the same zone."

An official for the Hal Roach organization retorted: "We are confident that upholding of the dual bill clause by the local board presages similar rulings in all sections of the country and with this belief we will at once begin a progressive campaign which will involve several thousand dollars. This will be divided between staff enlargement and physical improvements during the ensuing year."

Sol A. Rosenblatt's 10-day visit here was taken up with the duties of all the five-five committees and straightened out many problems which they could not clear without his advice. The administrator was reluctant to discuss these issues to the press. In his first general meeting he urged committee members not to publicize future discussions. They currently are complying with this order, but the general feeling here is that it won't last long.

The current Mae West picture, "Belle of the Nineties," finally has emerged from the laundry after several weeks cleansing. It will be released August 31.

Action by producers to prohibit any of their contract players from radio broadcasting is growing and may soon become unanimous with all studios. Several have declared themselves against this practice, with MGM the latest to climb on the bandwagon. Robert Montgomery was the last of their players to get their permission for a broadcast.

In what looks like another victory over the Academy, 19 more songwriters and composers joined the Screen Writers' Guild, making a total of 50 of this branch to join up the last two weeks. The Academy some time ago formerly invited this group into their organization by offering to set up a special branch for their profession.

The Code Standing Committee for extras, after working for several months to prune the list of 17,000 registered extras, finally has reduced the eligibles to 8,000. These will have to qualify themselves for the final list by answering a questionnaire with the principal question: "Do you depend solely upon extra work for a living?"

After setting a deadline for all protests to the local zoning and clearance schedule, the board received 94 protests three days preceding the date set, making a total of 163 received since the draft was made public.

Ten Films Start, Seven Finished

Ten new pictures started last week and seven were finished. This sets at 37 the number actually in work. Paramount was the only lot to start as many as two features. Two completed features are credited to Universal, the other five coming from Goldwyn, MGM, Paramount, Invincible and Monogram.

One started at Paramount was "The Lemon Drop Kid," a topical Damon Runyon story, being directed by Marshall Neilan, featuring Lee Tracy, Helen Mack, William Frawley, Henry Walthall, Clarence Wilson and Kitty Kelly. The other Paramount was "Ready for Love," the first picture for Richard Arlen in several months in which he will be supported by Ida Lupino, Marjorie and Beulah Bondi.

Atherton Pictures started "Dude Ranger," a George O'Brien western, in which Irene Hervey, Henry Hall, Jim Mason and Sid Saylor are the principal supporting players. Columbia began work on "Orchids and Onions," in which Carole Lombard, May Robson, Walter Connally, Arthur Hohl and Ray Walburn will be seen.

"The Firebird" started at Warner. In this Veree Teasdale, Ricardo Cortez, Lionel Atwill, Anita Louise and C. Aubrey Smith head a large cast. Radio put "Dangerous Corners," a J. B. Preistly stage play, before the cameras. Virginia Bruce and Melvyn Douglas have the leads; Conrad Nagel returns to the screen and Erin O'Brien-Moore, Betty Furness, Henry Wadsworth and Doris Lloyd constitute the principal support.

As its starting feature, Universal offers "Great Expectations," based on the Charles Dickens novel. Leading parts will be played by Henry Hull, Jane Wyatt and Florence Reed, newcomers, and Phillips Holmes. Others in the cast are Alan Hale, Francis L. Sullivan, Harry Cording and Douglas Wood.

Big Cast in "Babes in Toyland"

Bearing the earmarks of importance in cast and story, MGM started "Biography of a Bachelor," which teams Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery in the starring roles. Of like quality is the feature length Hal Roach production, the spectacular "Babes in Toyland." Laurel and Hardy are starred. The supporting cast is large; the more familiar names are Charlotte Henry, Kewpie Morgan, Ferdinand Munier, Billy Bletcher and Virginia Karns.

Brian Foy's "That's Gratitude" includes Frank Craven, Arthur Byron, Mary Carlisle and Sheila Manners.

Diversity, marking the new pictures, is likewise found in those completed. Universal's pair are illustrative. The western, "Rocky Rhodes," stars Buck Jones. "Gift of Gab," topical modern farce comedy, has Edmund Lowe, Gloria Stuart, Ruth Etting, Alice White, Victor Moore, Henry Armetta and Sterling Holloway.

In the second Anna Sten picture, "We Live Again," Goldwyn teams the star of "Nana" with Fredric March. The supporting cast includes Gwendolin Logan, C. Aubrey Smith, Jessie Ralph and Sam Jaffee.

At MGM, the topical baseball mystery, "Death on the Diamond," featuring Robert Young, Madge Evans, Ted Healy, Nat Pendleton, Paul Kelly and DeWitt Jennings, was moved to the cutting rooms. Monogram completed "A Successful Failure," in which William Collier, Sr., Lucille Gleason, Russell Hopton, Gloria Shea and William Janney have the leading roles.

Paramount finished "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." A newcomer, Pauline Lord, is starred. The support lists W. C. Fields, Evalyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Sazu Pitts and George Breakstone.

Invincible's completed picture is "A Girl Must Live," featuring Dorothy Wilson, Charles Starrett and Guinn Williams.

Loew Canadian Circuit Eight-Months Profit $23,589

New Color Process Used in New York

Shooting started this week at the Eastern Service Studios on Long Island on a one-reel picture, produced by Eastern Productions, Inc., entitled "The Nephews of Paris."

The producers regard the picture as a practical demonstration of what can be done with the new lenticular film developed by Eastman and Paramount and based on the Keller-Dorian patents.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

THE ONLY INCENTIVE

Again, Famous Players Canadian breaks into the headlines, and deservedly so, with the announcement from General Manager J. J. Fitzgibbons, that managers are hereafter to be remunerated on a percentage basis.

Significant is the following, quoted from Mr. Fitzgibbons' statement:

" . . . You also will be interested in knowing we have evolved a plan whereby our Managers will participate in our gross receipts. This we believe to be one of the greatest steps forward as an incentive to encourage the managers employed in circuit operation, as they definitely become partners in our business."

A great step forward indeed, and one to hearten considerably the hopes of skilled theatremen forced to exhaust their splendid energies in exchange for what is little more than a bare living.

One of the primary planks in the platform of this department is that able managers should share in the added grosses obtained largely through their own efforts, their highly specialized showmanship.

Truly, there is no greater incentive than the just "partnership" Mr. Fitzgibbons emphasizes.

WHY TRIBUTE?

Joining Manager Charley Mensing's fight for Sunday opening in Memphis, Loew and Warner swing into line as theatremen Cecil Vogel and Bill Hendricks bring up reinforcements aided and abetted by their superiors, Lionel H. Keene and Howard Waugh.

According to report, for the privilege of operating on Sundays, the theatres are offering $50 weekly guarantees to the Community Fund in addition to turning over to charity any profits shown after expenses are paid.

As a good will gesture perhaps the managers find advisable these propitiatory donations, but we protest vehemently against the weakness or, for that matter, the injustice of a situation that seems to make necessary the payment of tribute in order to sway favorable public opinion.

Add to the old time giggles, Bill Taylor's gag concerning the chap who queried the cashier regarding admission prices, to which the gal replied, "40 cents in the orchestra and 25 in the balcony."

And so the guy asked what was playing in the balcony.

JAYSEE SAYS 'TAINT SO

In his very readable column of August 4, our amiable confrere, Colonel Jenkins gets a chuckle out of our recent editorial on the injustice of the 15-hour days put in by more than a few managers. Jaysee says 'taint so, offering in evidence that he has often had to wait until all hours of the morning for some manager to get out of bed.

Well, Colonel, in our early theatre days doing field exploitation for Paramount, we frequently came across the same situation. Hit a town bright and early, then mark time until the manager ambled around to the theatre.

At first it disturbed us and often as not we'd probably say something. However, you would be surprised to find how many of the supposed idlers were at the theatre the night before until way after midnight doing a lot of chores they could not find time for during the day. Such as fixing boilers, making cutouts, and various items of janitor work a whole lot of exhibitors shove off on the shoulders of the men supposedly hired to manage theatres.

Undoubtedly there are and always will be shirkers and chiselers among showmen who take every advantage of fair treatment. We've met 'em. But these are instances not recorded in our files with the letters we receive from theatremen, who, code or no code, are still forced to toil 15 hours daily, seven days a week.

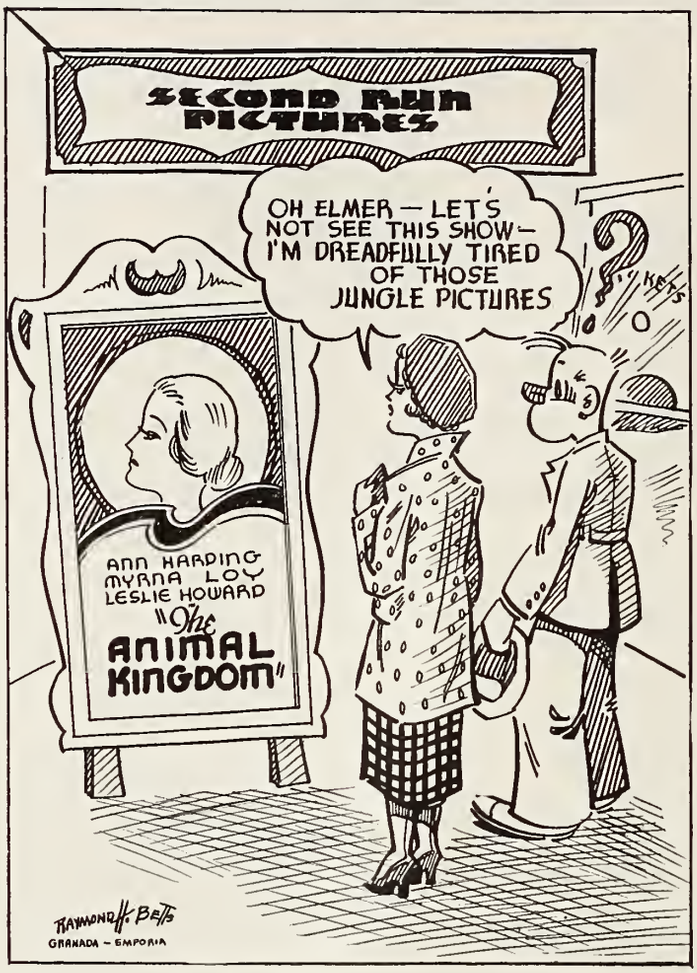
BROADWAY, TAKE A BOW

Long overdue, New York finally breaks into the winning Quigley column, and Charley Curran is credited with the hit as the judges select his masterly campaign on "Here Comes the Navy," at the New York Strand, for the July Award. The Big City may now again lift a proud head as she moves into the spotlight.



The main streets of Morgantown, West Va.; East Lansing, Mich.; Boise, Idaho; Jacksonville, Fla.; Montreal, Can., and Fairmont, West Va., have up to now provided the backgrounds for the exploitation efforts of the previous winners.

With the choosing of the July champion, New York's Main Stem, triumphantly and no doubt gratefully, now joins her smaller sisters.

Merchants Invite Readers To Attend "Hollywood Party"

With the merchants of Oneonta, N. Y., and through the medium of a co-op page, Manager Seymour L. Morris of Schine's Palace in that spot invited the town to attend his "Hollywood Party" by offering free tickets to the first five readers making purchases of fifty cents or over in the stores of the advertisers. Interest was further built up by a series of teaser ads, paid for by the merchants in which readers were advised to await the date of the picture.

Seymour used tieups extensively, Chase & Sanborn supplying window streamers and displays and Borden's contributing heralds sent out to the R. F. D. mailing list. Tieups were also made with the two local music shops and song hits were played by orchestra at country club where the date was also announced.

Morris further promoted local clothing shop to pay for 1,000 regular heralds, back page given to merchant's copy, which included an offer of free tickets to those guessing nearest the correct score of a coming ball game. Department store gave entire window with Mickey Mouse cutout (see photo) in center of display.

The campaign was helped additionally by a special children's Saturday matinee wherein candy was given to all attending and also cash prizes for the best juvenile impersonations of any of the stars.

Showmen Turn Out Snappy Weekly

Another neat house organ job is forwarded by Al Myers and Terry Miller, of the Liberty and Star Theatres, Oregon City, Ore. An eight-page weekly, size nine by twelve, "Theatre Chatter," the name of the paper, carries a lot of interesting local gossip and news in addition to picture stuff.

Front page lead story by William A. Long, operator of the theatres, has to do with the clean film movement and the efforts of the industry in this respect. Cut of President Roosevelt and story of his visit to Oregon are also featured.

Quite a bit of outside advertising is carried, the layout and composition being handled quite professionally. All in all, it is well done and should help grosses.

Lawson Promotes Government Tieup

According to Robb Lawson, United Artists' publicity chief for England, a new high in British motion picture exploitation was set recently when for the first time, a tieup was effected with the English government. Working with the General Post Office, Robb secured a complete outfit of British telephone equipment which was installed by the department in the lobby of the Leicester Square Theatre (see photo) in connection with the opening of "Looking for Trouble."

The display was opened officially at the premiere by Sir Stephen Tallents, public relations officer of the G. P. O. and included in the exhibit were various types of dial phones, microphones, receivers, photographs of telephone construction activities, cable sections and Neon light decorations. Theatre posters and stills further decorated the exhibit.

Many high officials of the government service were reported to have attended the opening and exhibit in addition to 500 switchboard operators who came as guests of Jack Buchanan, famous London and Broadway comic, owner of the theatre.

The event was given city-wide publicity in all papers and special one sheets and cards were posted throughout the track all week announcing the special race and the opening of the picture.

KNIGHT HONORED BY VARIETY CLUB; CURRAN IS WINNER OF JULY AWARD

Pittsburgh Members and Guests Witness the Presentation of June Award by Kalmine; Mayor McNair Also Speaks

by HAROLD W. COHEN
Special Correspondent

(Photo in Pictorial Section)

Before a Variety Club luncheon crowd of more than 100, representing the leaders of the motion picture industry in the tri-state area, R. E. (Fuzzy) Knight, Warner Brothers' manager in Fairmont, W. Va., was presented with the Martin Quigley plaque for June, in Pittsburgh on Aug. 6. Due to the overflow turnout, the Variety Club abandoned its regular headquarters for the day and moved to the Cardinal Room of the William Penn Hotel.

Knight, a veteran theatreman with 20 years in the business behind him, won the Quigley prize for his campaign on "20 Million Sweethearts," and is the second of the circuit's men in this territory to capture the Award. The other was Ken Grimes, of Morgantown, W. Va., who received the first of the presentations ever made.

Harry Kalmine, zone manager for Warner Brothers in this district and Knight's superior, made the presentation speech on behalf of the Quigley Publications, and Knight, in his acceptance, mentioned that the day marked a double celebration for him.

"This is one of the greatest thrills," he said, "I've ever received in the theatre business. What's more, it comes to me on my birthday, which makes it all the more so." Knight admitted to 40. He is a brother, by the way, of Fuzzy Knight, the screen comedian.

Pittsburgh Mayor Speaks

Mayor William N. McNair of Pittsburgh sat next to the guest of honor at the speakers' table and spoke briefly before the presentation. Others at the speakers' table, in addition to Knight, Kalmine and the Mayor, were Dick Kemper, Art Levy, Father Garrahan, Harold W. Cohen, Jack Flynn and John Maloney.

In attendance also were Jim Totman, Warner manager in Erie, Pa., and Lee Byers, Warner manager in Clarksburg, W. Va., who were awarded honorable mention by the Quigley committee, also for their campaigns on "20 Million Sweethearts." Among other guests were Harry Olshem, Marshall Taylor, Dick Kemper, Dr. Wise, Tom Fordham and C. J. Latta.

The presentation to Knight was to have been made in Hollywood several weeks ago. He was on his way there to visit his brother, but in Chicago, where he was to have boarded a plane for the remainder of the journey to the Coast, he was stricken with ptomaine poisoning. A physician ordered him to bed and he was rushed to the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for treatment.

Visger's Pass Tie-up

A stunt that has helped business for Donald Visger, Liberty Theatre, Kennewick, Wash., is a tie-up with the weekly newspapers of his town, whereby a front-page story is run to the effect that the Liberty, as a regular feature, carries in its theatre newspaper ad the names of two persons chosen at random from the papers' subscription list. Each name entitled those persons to two passes to any of that week's program when they turned the clipping in at the box office.

Warner Theatreman Voted July Plaque for Ace Campaign on "Here Comes the Navy," at Strand Theatre, New York

And now New York comes through!

After trailing in the wake of other states and cities from the inception of the competitions, New York now breaks into the headlines, as Charles W. Curran, of the Strand Theatre, wins the Quigley Award for July for his fine work on Warner's "Here Comes the Navy."

Charley won by a majority vote of the judges, Messrs. Neil F. Agnew of Paramount, J. R. Vogel of Loew's and Mort Blumenstock of Warner Brothers' Theatres. But the voting was very "nip-and-tuckish," so to speak, and although Curran hit the tape a winner, the rest were not far behind.

Especially, Manager P. DeCamac, of the Globe Theatre, Calcutta, India, who turned in a great entry on "Queen Christina" and "Devil Tiger," his efforts returning a smart First Mention. DeCamac did a swell job and well deserves his high rating.

The only other showman this month voted First Mention is Manager A. Frank, Lyric Theatre, Camden, N. J., for a corking campaign on "Circus Clown." Frank sure sold plenty of circus in this one, and his reward is very gratifying. Details of above campaigns will be published in our next issue.

Many Managers Repeat

Newcomers and repeaters share the Honorable Mentions, headed by Paramount-eer John Armstrong of the Carlton, London, England. Fourteen Mentions for 13 campaigns have been awarded, including the perennial Curtis and Finlay of Montreal. Ken Grimes and Jimmy Totman are again in the money and, as usual, forwarded some swell jobs of work as did Don Nichols.

Plans are now on foot to present the July plaque to Curran. First and Honorable Mentions are now being forwarded.

Shirley Temple Contest Engineered by Ed Hart

Ed Hart, City Manager, Reade Theatres, Plainfield, N. J., recently put over a Shirley Temple contest in connection with "Little Miss Marker," offering $25 in prizes to small girls most closely resembling Shirley. Each miss was permitted to choose her own costume and headdress and prizes were awarded on the basis of audience applause.

A little girl in costume was "hired" for the occasion and drawn through the streets in an old-time carriage (see photo) with bannered theatre copy.

Newspapers carried a "Test Your Child" chart which listed ten items against which parents were to check their own children's reactions and compare them with Miss Temple's. A few of the questions were: "Does your child receive praise without being spoiled? seem at ease in the presence of strangers? admit errors without trying to blame others? lead in group activities? make friends quickly?" etc., etc. Questions were supposed to have been selected in collaboration with leading California educators.

Board of Trade Tieup Features "Drummond"

The outstanding stunt arranged by Bill McChesney and LeRoy Blumenheim on "Bulldog Drummond" at the Paramount, Asbury Park, N. J., was a hookin with the local Board of Trade on a drive against unlicensed peddlers and fake solicitors. Special window cards were planted with copy reading, "The Board of Trade Urges You to Strike Back at Fake Solicitors, etc., etc.," rest of copy tying into date.

Postal Telegraph used the press book post card for stuffing in outgoing messages, and besides a five ton truck street float, a 30-minute radio dramatization was put on over a leading local station.

Byers Broadcasts Date From Downtown Stores

Still new enough in his section to be talked about profitably was Manager W. Lee Byers' loud speaker hookup on "20 Million Sweethearts" at the Ritz, Clarksburg, W. Va. Making good use of the Philco tieup, Lee promoted seven of these radios, planted them in prominent downtown stores and securing a well known local orchestra without cost had the musicians broadcast from the lobby. The music was picked up by the outside radios through their loud speakers, theatre announcements also being made and thus Byers obtained the benefits of a broadcast at little cost. This idea was also used extensively in advance, local talent supplying the entertainment (see photo). The lobby radio stunt was new enough here to attract continuous crowds to which of course the date and song hits were plugged consistently.

From the host of other sales angles whipped over by this Round Tabler, plenty of coverage is indicated. Sidewalk stenciling, hangers on all pay station telephones, automobile tire covers and bumper cards were some of the things done. Merchants were tied in on Dick Powell sundae, hat and shirt; ten cent store distributed star stills on fan magazine tieup, music stores and local orchestras also coming in on the drive.

Imprinted were hotel and drug store menus, napkins, market bags, as were covers of Saturday Evening Post carrying Philco tieup ads. Delivery trucks were bannered, jumbo Western Union telegrams planted in windows and many of the press book national tieups were utilized in whipping over this effective campaign.

Guatemalan Showmen Heavy Exploiteers

The theatremen down in Guatemala behind the activities of the Palace Theatre, are turning out a lot of fast and fancy exploitation on their various attractions, the campaign on "Mystery of the Wax Museum" calling forth a host of ingenious angles. An auto street float with the chassis completely covered by cutouts and banners brought crowds of the curious, and a giant flash across the front of the building (see photo) also helped.

For the benefit of both natives and foreigners, all advertising copy is carried in Spanish and English, and especially is this true in heralds and throwaways, in which extensive synopses, and picture publicity is carried in lieu, we expect, of newspaper advertising.

Blumenstock Plugs "Navy" With Mechanical Man

Working under the supervision of Herb Copelan, Warner zone manager, Sid Blumenstock, advertising and publicity head for the Seashore Amusement Co., Atlantic City, N. J., put on a very fancy job of exploitation on "Here Comes the Navy" at the Warner Theatre in that resort city. Faced with the terrific summer competition of countless attractions Atlantic City is noted for, Sid did a job of work that more than held its own.

The beach crowds were covered all the way to Ocean City by a bannered airplane, and for the Boardwalk Blumenstock had a mechanical man riding in a bannered wheel chair. This gag was also used in the business section where the "man" did his job on foot as he pointed to a theatre sign carried by a boy who walked along with him.

Sid promoted the leading department store for a full window display in the most prominent location (see photo), blowup of battleship planted as background topped by the title in large cutout letters in addition to other theatre posters.

Specially printed heralds were stuffed in Liberty Magazine, given out on sightseeing buses and placed in hotel key boxes, and a flash lobby was made up of signal flags, anchors, ship's ropes, etc., the equipment all borrowed from the local Coast Guard.

Thornley Stresses Male Appeal on "Fashions"

So as to make sure his general patronage would not misconstrue "Fashions of 1934" as entertainment solely for women, Manager James Thornley, Capitol, Melbourne, Australia, went after the male trade strongly in the campaign put over with exploitation director Frank V. Kennebeck, and Stanley W. Higginson, Warner publicist.

The standout stunt to sell the men folk was an ad endorsement headed, "From One Man to Another," in which Thornley stated that though the title might lead to the belief that the picture was not male stuff, he personally guaranteed a large evening.

However, the women were not neglected, as a storewide fashion tieup was made with a leading style establishment, featured by a mannequin style parade, heavily advertised, and a flock of prominent windows (see photo). Store distributed copies of the endorsement ad, and the showmen followed up this break with a lot of radio tieups and brike out a front of animated girl figures and feather fans.

Round Trip Rates Plug Melniker's "Drummond" Date

The added business railroads have been securing lately through picture tieups brought plenty of cooperation from five local roads to Manager Ed Melniker, Loew's Grand, Atlanta, on his showing of "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back." Displays plugging a special cent-and-a-half mile rate were planted in all stations within a 75-mile radius, and heralds containing the same information were also distributed.

Both wires came in on the campaign, Postal stuffing every out-going message envelope with picture copy postals, and Western Union planting jumbos in all branch offices. The fingerprint novelty herald was distributed at the theatre, tabloids and other advertising placed in rooms of leading hotels.

Melniker also planted radio dramatizations over two stations, secured windows in many ace locations, and also promoted a co-op ad from prominent department store on Loretta Young styles and coiffure.

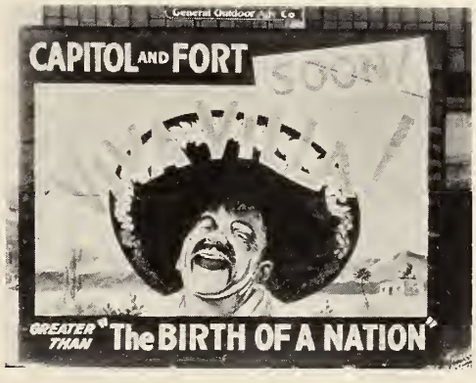
Boys' Day Campaign Build Up for "Glory"

For the first time in seven years, and largely through the efforts of J. L. Cartwright, City Manager, Halifax Theatres, Daytona Beach, Florida., a "Boys' Day" was put on locally as part of the campaign on "No Greater Glory." Sixteen high school boys were chosen to run the city for one day and occupied all important civic posts, performing the duties of office under the supervision of the regular officials. All papers gave the stunt a big spread, which proved excellent advance for the picture.

The largest local woman's club sponsored a special morning show on the opening day, after which was held a "No Greater Glory" breakfast. Special tickets were sold for the event, the clubwomen sharing in the receipts. Added interest was obtained with a prize offer for the best written opinion, the outstanding ones being used as advertising.

Tying in with this, Cartwright had constructed for lobby display two giant slates (see photo), one carrying printed praise from leading locals and the other, signatures of patrons who had seen the picture and wishes to endorse it.



Permission was also obtained to announce the picture in all school class rooms.

United Artists Introduces Poster Style on "Cellini"

A departure from the conventional in motion picture poster advertising is indicated in the paper gotten out by Hal Horne on United Artists' coming "Affairs of Cellini." Stressing the satirical spirit of the production the posters aim to kid the picture itself, and for this purpose, a comic style has been used for the illustrations.

The accompanying photo of the six sheet shows how the medium has been used and this is followed out in the rest of the paper.

The technique used is patch style, a cloth medium. The sheets are solid color paper strips pasted rather than painted to procure a richer effect. Coloring of the costumes is done in vivid pastel shades.

Witt's Shoe Giveaway

Bob Witt, Capitol, Oklahoma City, Okla., is credited with the swell stunt of setting aside one day recently on which he admitted kiddies for a pair of old shoes. These were repaired by the FERA and distributed to needy school children of the city. We are told that Witt thus obtained several hundred pairs of shoes.

Laby's Postcard Gag Lands Two-Column Story

George Laby promoted the Hotel Taft in New York for a lot of postcards addressed them to his local mailing list, filled the message side with copy on "Wonder Bar" for the date at the Victory, Holyoke, Mass., and then had them mailed from the Big City. The response was immediate, for as many of the cards were signed by "Alice," "Edna," etc., and addressed to a lot of local husbands, they were received with suspicion by otherwise trusting wives.

To remove any possible kickbacks, George confided in the editor of one of the local papers, who ran a two-column story about the gag, explaining that it was an advertising stunt to put over the picture, and, we assume, thus again bringing peace to many troubled households. However, the newspaper advised that were the stunt to be used again, cards be addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." to prevent any embarrassment.

Other local lauguage papers were tied into the campaign in addition to co-op pages in the English dailies. Laby put on a host of other stuff featuring a series of ballroom tieups in which passes were given as prizes in dance contests.

McFarlane Erects Board At Strategic Spot

As part of Dale McFarland's Capitol Theatre, Davenport, Ia., campaign on "Viva Villa," five weeks in advance a special 22x 25-foot painted board (see photo) was placed on the side of a factory building located at the entrance of the main bridge between Davenport and Rock Island. Sign was illuminated at night and Dale reports it as one of the best eye-arresters used at his house.

Two days prior boy and girl in Mexican garb worked all the business houses handing out special printed cards selling the picture. As a lobby display, special copy was painted on a piece of linoleum six by ten feet and laid in the outer lobby.

IDEAS ON FRONTS AND LOBBIES

Unique Star and Title Flash

Press Book Cover Reproduced

A Typical Charninsky Front

Live Fish in Front Display

Grant Book Lobby Standees

(Left) SID DANNENBERG and NAT WOLF, Warner exploiteers in the Cleveland zone, prepared these three huge book shaped standees on "As the Earth Turns," for general theatre display. One plugged the "down east" angle, the second, the star, and the third, the story.

Some Neat Poster Panels

Mike Sells Star and Picture

(Left) MIKE KALLETT takes the bow for spreading "House of Rothschild" over the landscape for the date at the Civic Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y. Star and title were what Mike had to sell and he planted his posting on both strategically, as witness roof sign, street banner and lobby.

(Right) ERLE WRIGHT used a lot of jungle effects tastefully in arranging the front of the Poli, New Haven, Conn., on "Tarzan." The transformation of the box office into a native hut added a lot of atmosphere to the general display. Note effective marquee decorations.

ABOUT OVERSEAS EXPLOITATION

Much Box Office Showmanship Displayed by British and French, Says Recently Returned Publicist

by MONROE GREENTHAL
Exploitation Director, United Artists

Realizing that some first hand observations on exploitation as it is practiced by our foreign brethren would be of more than passing interest to the membership, we asked Monroe Greenthal to give us a little of the low-down on overseas exploitation which he had an opportunity to study briefly during his recent short stay on the other side.

Here it is! —MIKE

On the way over to England there were several film men on the boat. I asked them how they go after exploitation in England and they all laughed and said—"If you have 50 sandwich men out on a picture it is a big campaign, if you have no sandwich men out it is just an ordinary picture." However, I found by observation and actual experience while in England that this was not the case.

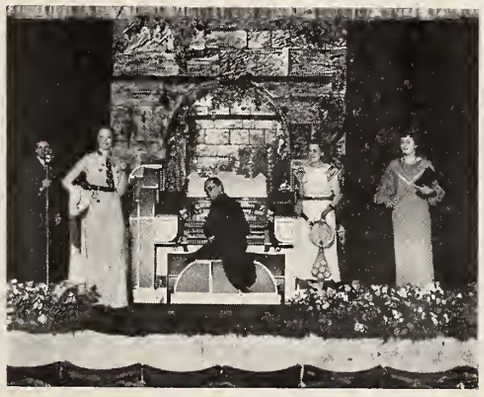
Campaigns in England seemed to go from one extreme to the other—either they were exceptionally good or the picture was not exploited at all. The custom in America of sending exploitation men to key cities all over the country where big pictures are opening is not closely followed in England. Most of the foreign companies have a staff composed of two or three men who handle exploitation out of London, and now and then make jumps out over England covering the important engagements. But there is no continuity of coverage such as is practiced over here.

English Ad Rates High

However, there is really a greater need for exploitation in England than in the States, for one simple reason—the newspaper rates of the London and other papers are proportionately much higher than United States, the lineage rate being so high that most of the big London attractions only run a small six line advertisement mentioning the name of the theatre and attraction, and once a week cut loose with a display ad. Even on the day before opening of a big picture you will see small rate holder ads rather than big display ads heralding the coming of the picture. Therefore, since advertising space is at a premium the best way to sell your picture is naturally exploitation.

In the city of London proper, street ballyhoo of exploitation nature always runs into trouble with the police. Most exploitation men on a good stunt expect to be fined—and a $50 fine on a good stunt is usually worth it as it attracts attention. For example—when Universal opened "The Invisible Man" in London an automobile was driven through the streets by remote control; the authorities permitted the stunt to go on but of course eventually stopped it and slapped a fine on the exhibitor.

Admission Prices Way Up



When a campaign is successful in London it reaps a big financial reward for the reason that admission prices are much higher than United States. Eddie Cantor in "Roman Scandals" at Leicester Square Theatre in London on a grind policy from 11 A. M. to midnight brought admission prices ranging from the cheapest seats at 87 cents to the better seats as high as $2.12. Mind you, this is not two a day, but continuous run.

One of the outstanding exploiters in England is a wide awake man by the name of Billy Stewart, formerly manager of the Empire Theatre in London a first run house and now handling the destinies of the Astoria Theatre in Brighton—Brighton being a big summer resort on the same order as Atlantic City. Stewart pulled a stunt recently that attracted a lot of attention. He played a Warner Bros. picture "Convention City," and had Margaret Hardy, Mayor of Brighton, cable a message to Mayor Bacharach in Atlantic City.

Mayor Bacharach cabled back, and in both instances Stewart got big newspaper breaks on the international exchange of cordial greetings, and the picture did remarkably well. Billy pulled a stunt on a British production distributed by Radio, entitled "Say It With Flowers." He tied in with his local department store and had them supply mannequins who modelled the newest sport clothes in a fashion promenade held on the stage of his theatre. The stage was decorated with beautiful flowers through a tie-up with the local florist, and the local radio station came in on this stunt broadcasting part of the picture. (See photo.)

"So, "Say It With Flowers"—which had met with only indifferent success in other cities where it was not exploited—did a sensational business at his theatre due to its big campaign.

However, most of the companies that are directly successful can be traced to such well-known publicity chiefs in England as Dave Bader of Universal, Robb Lawson of United Artists, Pat Dixon of British Gaumont, John Myers of London Films, Bill Downing of British & Dominions, Shelby Howe of MGM, Dillon Damen of Warner Brothers, and many others. These publicity men work hand in hand with the English papers, many of which have a tremendous circulation, and also with the various film magazines.

Billy Stewart's Fashion Parade

The studios at Elstree are wide open to fan magazine writers, and the stars, when off the set, are constantly according these writers interviews that are later developed into big fan magazine breaks. There is a certain casualness about film studios in England that is different from Hollywood. There is not that seemingly incessant drive to get the picture done on schedule. A great deal of lavish care is now being given the productions lately to come out of England, and their recent success has been a result of this carefulness of effort.

Paris Exhibitor an Ace Exploiteer

Paris at the present moment has two great reigning sensations: one is Laurel and Hardy and the other "L'Heure Joyeuse de Mickey," which is an hour composed entirely of Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony subjects. This Mickey Mouse review has been grossing on an average of 40 to 50 thousand francs a week in the Cine l'Auto, which seats only 300 people. Laurel and Hardy are in the big money class there and doing grosses that come very close to reaching some of the Chaplin figures.

One of the leading exhibitors of Paris is Managing Director Umanski of the Lord Byron Theatre. In fact, he has three theatres, besides the Lord Byron the Avenue and also the Aubert Palace. Umanski just takes American pressbooks and duplicates practically every stunt mentioned therein. His opening of "Henry The VIII" was the sensation of Europe, attended by diplomats from all over the country, including the Ambassadors of every nation, and an all-time record was set for length of run and gross receipts.

Key Spot Showmen Speedy

Taking all in all, your showmen across the water are very much wide awake in some of the key spots, but in the smaller towns they do not go after the picture as fiercely as our showmen over here; however, in the key cities they "go to town" on all big pictures. They may not plant as many contests or use as many throw-aways, but they certainly plant pictures, stories and serializations, and when the final count is taken the English theatres are doing a very profitable business due to these intense efforts.

Vol. 116, No. 8 August 18, 1934

PICTURE MONGERING

THAT great and righteous family newspaper, The Chicago Daily News, is doing the motion picture industry no good with a weekly rotogravure section entitled "Hollywood Unmasked." It is a series appearing with each Saturday's paper. The issue of August fourth contained pictorial dissertations on the vagaries of censorship, but attained its appeal by stills from foreign versions and the like, with the accent on the legs.

The next issue, the section promises, will be devoted to "What Hollywood Won't Tell About Its Stars."

The outstanding aspect of this pictorial adventure in journalism is the abundance of pictorial material which it contains that could have been obtained only with the cooperation of persons engaged in the industry and with access to files.

Currently the risque still activity of the press agents has been curbed by a photographic supervision through the Production Code Aministration in Hollywood and the supervision of advertising copy in New York by the Hays office. That, however, obtains only with the open official operations. The problems posed will not be solved until the underground traffic in tart stills is stopped.

Something of the effectiveness of the industry's endeavor, however, is indicated by the negotiations now being conducted by a New York publisher of sex-pandering magazines to purchase access to files presumed to contain possible material. The negotiator has been bold enough to say that he had been able to make "some arrangements."

Turning again to the newspaper press, it is of interest to recall an editorial entitled "Movies and Newspapers," which recently appeared in various Scripps-Howard papers, including the Rocky Mountain News, which has been forwarded for our attention by Mr. H. E. Jameyson, of Wichita:

"American newspapers have seldom gagged at or refused any of the sexy come-on type of advertising put out by the movies. They have published reams of slush relative to the love life of Hollywood. There has been little sustained newspaper protest against exploitation of sex perversion and deifying of crooks.

"Now that the forces mobilized by the churches have risen in protest, certain elements of the press are showing a distinct tendency toward self-absolution and recently acquired sanctimony. It will behoove newspapers not to squawk too noisily about the mote in the movies' eye and forget the beam in their own."

Whatever repute the motion picture community of Hollywood may have in the eyes of the world must be credited very considerably to what Hollywood has told about itself to the army of newspaper and fan magazine thrill-hawks who hover about the Brown Derbys and the dressing rooms. Hollywood talks too much, whispers too much.

"THIRTY"

A PARAGRAPH in the daily press records the passing of the last Associated Press "brass pounder" in New York state, meaning that the swift printer-telegraph has taken over all the job of news dispatching from hands of the Morse operators.

The news wire operators are fading before the developments of the machine age and with their passing goes a picturesque and salty sub-guild of journalism and a school which has contributed many capable men to the editorial forces of American newspapers. Much sending of stories taught many to write and endowed them with news judgment and national perspective. It is strange that so many graduated to the desk from the key and the printer's case in the days of handset type and so few from the linotype. Apparently modern machinery does not encourage thinking.

Before the coming of the automatic printer-telegraph the men of the key, related by the wires webbing across the nation, evolved into a curious community independent of geography. There was the famous instance of the two men who worked a leased wire between Pittsburgh and New York, developing a friendship and exchanging confidences about their families for twenty-odd years before they met on vacation.

A monograph could be written on the influence of the Phillips code of the Morse operators on newspaper English. Operators persistently edited copy to fit the speedy code and filled the papers with stereotyped phrases. The code boiled whole sentences of standard news events into a handful of letters, as "S A I K," which meant "shot and instantly killed." "Seventy-three" was the operator's greeting and "thirty" was his good night.

A CODE limitation restricting the size of the olive in the martini not to exceed 7.5 per cent of the cubic capacity of the glass is advocated by Mr. Stuart Webb, custodian of the Pathe rooster, and cocktail authority of the East Sixties and East Hampton. Research on the proper ratio of the cherry to the Manhattan is now in progress. Current data tends to indicate little uplift value in pickled fruit.

RAISE ADMISSIONS TO AID DISTRIBUTORS: LICHTMAN

Sales Executive Says Industry of "Suckers" Is Entertaining the Public at Loss; Nickel More Would Bring in $52,000,000

Young Moses Halperin, publicity purveyor, ran to the telephone in his United Artists office last Thursday afternoon and told the operator to "call the trade press—in a hurry." He urged the editors to appear at the office of Al Lichtman, in the busy, hurrying, hectic Godfrey building just off Broadway, to hear from United Artists' distribution chief a statement that was promised to "shock and revolutionize the industry."

The statement in essence was:

"We're all a bunch of suckers. We're entertaining the public with motion pictures at a loss."

Mr. Lichtman thus dramatically launched the trial balloon of what he hopes will be a movement toward increased admission prices for the avowed purpose of permitting distributors to collect higher film rentals. Thursday's sally was Mr. Lichtman's first major publicity appearance since he sent aloft the trial balloon of the "exclusive run" campaign of the spring of '32.

This warm August afternoon found Mr. Lichtman in artfully pessimistic mood, although he did manage a smile as he sat, in rolled shirt sleeves, delivering himself of the declaration that he feared "we are on the way back toward the nicklelodeon."

Follows 800-Theatre Survey

He had just returned to his bright and airy office suite from the dry and dusty highways that lead to the box-office windows of some 800 theatres in the field, these having formed the basis of a first-hand study and looksee, from which he concluded that another nickel-a-ticket is the only remedy for all of the industry's economic aches and pains.

By coincidence, on that same afternoon, Mr. Alfred Pritchard, Jr., who, in his capacity of president of the vast General Motors interests, is also recognized as an authority on the nation's business conditions, opined for a column in the New York Times that merchandise prices must be brought lower, within the range of a greater number of buyers.

"This business of low admissions, which results in lower film rentals for distributors, can not go on," warned Mr. Lichtman, who was talking as the general over all of United Artists' salesmen.

"Our company can make $50,000 pictures like some of the independents"—he mentioned names—"but if the public gets only this kind of picture it will stop going to the theatre and turn to the saloon."

"That would not be a bad idea," chirped a thirsty reporter.

Conspicuously absent from Mr. Lichtman's scheme for tilting admission prices was an explanation of the public's reaction to paying higher prices for $50,000 pictures that cost $500,000 to make.

Contrary to the opinion held generally that virtually all the producers and distributors are again "in the black," as gathered from recent official financial reports, Mr. Lichtman painted a tragic picture, in red, of the condition of producers and distributors, growing out of what he described as the "indecently" low level of the existing admission scale.

Mr. Lichtman did not mince any words about having the motive of gaining bigger and better grosses by means of a general raising of box office prices, but he did mince some facts. Mr. Lichtman estimated that the present total revenue derived from theatre patronage by exhibitors is only $4,000,000 a week, based on what he claims is a total weekly attendance of only 20,000,000 persons, paying an average admission price of 20 cents. This would bring in a total gross from admissions of under $250,000,000 a year, whereas the weekly attendance estimated by most of the industry's other authorities would not go far below 60,000,000 patrons, nor would the income from tickets in one year at present levels be estimated at less than $600,000,000. In normal times, the average weekly attendance was figured at 100,000,000, returning a yearly income of some $850,000,000.

The general increase of five cents a ticket sold by every theatre, everywhere, would bring in another $1,000,000 weekly—on the basis of a 20,000,000 attendance—totaling $52,000,000 in a year, Mr. Lichtman has estimated.

"We could use more," added Mr. Lichtman, "but $52,000,000 would help."

"Not one subsequent run theatre in the country should charge less than 25 cents," he continued, later excluding "dumps in the slums." "Downtown first runs should have an established minimum admission of 50 cents," in Mr. Lichtman's opinion.

The means arrived at by Mr. Lichtman for accomplishing the end depends upon the broadcasting by the motion picture trade press of Mr. Lichtman's ideal, to wit: "A sensible get-together on the part of competing exhibitors in each section to talk over the price question and move it up to a livable, decent proposition, so that they can pay decent film rentals and run their houses in a decent manner by having once more nice carpets, good projection, good seats to sit on and make it possible for distributors to charge these theatres a legitimate rental high enough to compel the theatres to charge legitimate admission prices based on present day cost of operating theatres as well as the making of the pictures."

"Theatres are shabby," he said. "They have no money with which to purchase equipment. And, if admissions are not increased, pictures will have to become much cheaper."

Calls Percentage a Factor

At this point he explained that film rentals are being affected tremendously by this condition because the better theatres pay on percentage.

"The big theatres in the big cities are trying to compete with the condition by putting on big stage shows, and even these houses have altered their scales, charging 50 cents where formerly 75 cents was the admission. And they charge 50 cents only for a few hours daily. Most of the time, on mornings and during matinees, their prices are 25 cents and 35 cents.

"In one medium-sized town that I visited, three theatres that were charging 40 cents were compelled to close, due to the competition of 15-cent houses—in other words, we are entertaining the public at a loss. We're suckers."

Mr. Lichtman said that those in exhibition who are profiting are operators who have taken over closed theatres at low rentals, in some cases playing percentage with the landlord, and who, unlike the big exhibitor, do not pay union wages, and by virtue of the cheap admission demand that they get cheap film rentals.

Store theatres, charging 10 cents and 15 cents, are a menace, he added, and are growing at a rapid rate.

"In contrast to the situation in the United States is the heavy business in England," continued Mr. Lichtman. "In fact, if it was not for England there is no producer in this country who could afford to make pictures for more than $150,000 apiece.

"The reason business is healthier in England is because there is no cut-throat competition among exhibitors as to price of admission. And admission prices there are about three times higher than in America."

Lichtmanisms on Admission Issue

Average theatre admission prices, 20 cents, are too low.

"Store" theatres charging 10 and 15 cents are a menace.

No theatre should charge less than 25 cents and downtown first-runs 50 cents.

A "sensible get-together" of competing exhibitors would move prices "up to a livable, decent proposition, so that they can pay decent film rentals and run their houses in a decent manner."

IATSE FINDS FILM CODE BENEFITS MOTION PICTURE PROJECTIONISTS

206 Locals Report Definite Gains, 39 Call Code Detrimental; 150 Cite More Jobs; 48 See Better Conditions

A six months' working test of the labor conditions of the NRA motion picture code has convinced the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators that the code is beneficial to the projectionist members of that American Federation of Labor affiliate.

Some 206 IATSE projectionist locals in the field, out of 493 local branches that are working under code conditions, have reported to their general headquarters that they have definitely benefited as the result of the code, while only 39 reported that the code has been detrimental to their interests.

Slightly more than 150 IATSE locals indicated that increased employment in their individual ranks followed adoption of the code last December 7. Forty-eight others reported improved working conditions. Maintained conditions were reported by 59 locals.

200 Contracts Signed

Where code provisions for minimum salary and maximum schedule of hours conflicted with private contractual agreements existing at the time the code became effective, the members of 129 IATSE locals assumed the overage, while 70 other locals reported that overages were assumed by exhibitors and 36 locals indicated overages assumed jointly by the theatre and the operators.

Two hundred locals reported that new contracts had been signed with exhibitors since the code was placed in operation. Thirty-seven locals were successful in organizing "unfair" or non-union theatres in their districts.

In a survey by the IATSE, reports filed by 47 affiliated projectionists' locals "would obviously indicate a beneficial condition or improvement as a result of the code, either through increasing employment without the members assuming the overage, or in other cases where the overage was assumed either wholly or in part by the owner," but inasmuch as these 47 local unions did not see fit to term them as beneficial, they were not recorded as such. Had they been so recorded, the number of locals listed as reporting beneficial results from the code would be 253, instead of 206.

Fewer Controversies

"Further proof of the obvious beneficial effect emanating from the adoption of the code," according to Louis Krouse, assistant president of the IATSE, "is the noticeable drop in the number of controversies in the field between the operators and the employing exhibitors, while adjustments effected increased considerably.

"Controversies between IATSE projectionist members and theatre owners were at their height in May, 1933. After the motion picture code became effective in December, 1933, the number of adjustments of controversies began to exceed the number of controversies," continued Mr. Krouse, who added: "In other words, we were gaining ground."

Before the code was enacted, the average weekly schedule of working hours for IATSE projectionists was 40 and a fraction hours. Under the code, no operator is permitted to mork more than 40 hours, and if their maximum schedule as of August 23, 1933, was lower, then, under the code, exhibitors are compelled to employ such lower maximum.

At the time the code was signed, only 10 per cent of the IATSE operators' locals were working under signed contracts with exhibitors. According to the figures gathered in the survey, which shows some 203 locals holding contracts out of 493 working under the code, this percentage has increased about 30 per cent.

On the basis of 14,000 theatres, IATSE union operators are employed in some 4,000 theatres, and of these approximately 1,769 represent two-men operations.

The IATSE has spread upon its permanent records a history of the "bitter" fight with exhibitors and with "rump" unions during the code proceedings to maintain "the American Federation of Labor" standards of wages and hours, which might have resulted in a minimum scale of 40 cents an hour for a 52-hour week.

On the other hand, hundreds of exhibitors have decried the increased payroll expenses that they have been compelled to incur as a result of the benefits from the code that the IATSE claims were gained by its projectionist members. There had been movements to protest to Washington against this new "burden," but these did not materialize.

Silver Order No Bar To Industrial Users

The presidential silver nationalization order of last week, which sets 500 ounces as the maximum amount of silver that can be held by any one person for industrial purposes, will not interfere with the extensive use of silver in the manufacture of motion picture raw film—negative and positive—although it will compel the producers of Hollywood, and elsewhere, to dispose of surplus stocks reclaimed by them from old film.

Eastman Kodak Company, largest user of silver in the country, said Wednesday, through an official spokesman, that the corporation assumes it will be eligible under the presidential order for a license to withhold whatever silver is needed for the manufacturing of film and photographic goods.

"The President's order is expected to have no practical effect on the operations and the business of the Eastman Kodak Company," said the Kodak spokesman at Rochester.

No Obstacles to Industrial Users

Treasury administrators at first unofficially expressed opinion that raw stock manufacturers and motion picture producers will be limited to the same silver stocks as other users of the metal, that is, a maximum of 500 ounces for any one person for industrial uses. However, the Treasury later emphasized that there will be no difficulties placed in the way of industrial users of silver. It was further learned that consideration is being given permitting raw film manufacturers to hold large stocks of silver comparable to the necessities of production volume.

However, the case of silver holdings of producers who reclaim silver from old film, is somewhat different. Not being manufacturers of film stock, and, therefore, not having any industrial use for the metal, they would be compelled to return to the mints all silver in excess of 500 ounces.

Investigation in Hollywood on Wednesday revealed an estimated $200,000 worth of silver on hand there among the large studios operating their own laboratories.

Paramount's studio-laboratory in Hollywood was one of the first to melt its reclaimed silver from old film and immediately will dispatch its stock to the United States Mint at San Francisco, in bullion form.

Universal is believed to be the next heaviest holder of silver reclaimed from film, and will likewise sell it to the mint. Fox, Warner and MGM, all operating their own film laboratories in Hollywood, also use the electrolysis system to extract silver from film. They, too, are heavy silver holders.

Independents Sell Outside

The independent laboratories do their own silver reclaiming, but they sell the raw solution periodically to an outside company that specializes in this field. They do not let any silver accumulate.

Mr. Roosevelt's order appears to have opened up a profitable avenue for producers in Hollywood holding silver, which they can now sell to the mint at slightly over 50 cents an ounce, as compared with the average previous price of 45 cents an ounce.

Estimates of the value of silver reclaimed every year by producers ranges from $450,000 to $600,000.

CODE AUTHORITY MUST DECIDE IF PRODUCTION CODE GOVERNS ALL

Independents Demand New Code of Ethics, Declare Films Not Carrying Hays Certificate Face Being Barred

The motion picture Code Authority now faces the extremely important task of deciding officially whether the Hays code of production morals shall or shall not govern the entire industry—both the large companies belonging to the MPPDA which are now adhering to the regulations, and the independent producers who are not members. It is an issue which the Authority apparently has been avoiding.

The independent Motion Picture Producers Association in Hollywood is not willing, as an organization, to submit its productions to the MPPDA for censoring by Joseph I. Breen, and has resolved to ask the Code Authority at its meeting next week in New York to set up a production code of morals and the necessary enforcement machinery. This the Authority is not empowered to do, the code vesting only in the industry itself the right and privilege of promulgating such regulations and creating such machinery to which everyone signing the code agrees to adhere.

Industry's Own Regulations

General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, said at Washington during the code drafting proceedings last fall that the National Recovery Administration would not, either directly or indirectly through the Code Authority, be placed in the position of having to regulate, govern or control motion picture morals, and, therefore, he insisted that the code carry the following clause:

"The industry pledges its combined strength to maintain right moral standards in the production of motion pictures as a form of entertainment. To that end the industry pledges itself to and shall adhere to the regulations promulgated by and within the industry to assure the attainment of such purpose."

The Hays regulations are the only rules existing for attainment of proper moral standards, and, therefore, when the independents appear before the Code Authority next week, as they have promised, the Authority appears to have no alternative but to recognize these regulations as being those of and for the industry.

Johnston Sees Unfair Situation

Stirred by reports that the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association formally had agreed to participate in the MPPDA machinery for elevating production standards, under the supervision of Mr. Breen, the independents in Hollywood, this week, not only denied that they officially had decided as an organization to submit their product to Mr. Breen for a certificate of approval, but also charged that any refusal by a large affiliated circuit to book an independent picture because it does not bear the "Hays seal of approval," is an unfair trade practice.

Speaking for the independents was W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures, and himself a member of the Code Authority, representing independent producers and distributors. Said Mr. Johnston: "The independents thought they had a bit of unfair competition on their hands when Local Zoning Boards stepped outside their powers in penalizing duals, but now the independent producer is apparently faced with a ban on his product at circuit houses because he does not place a seal on his pictures, which seal he cannot secure through anyone but an organization (MPPDA) composed only of major producers whose interests are not those of the independents."

Mr. Johnston declared that "for some unknown reason the Code Authority has never set up a body to carry out the intent of this section" of the code that pledges the industry to proper moral standards. However, the Authority is not empowered under the code either to draft a code of production morals or to create machinery for its enactment. Only an amendment to the code itself would grant the Authority such power, according to legal opinion in New York.

The independents also will ask the Code Authority to declare as unfair competition any action of a theatre or circuit in refusing to book a picture of an independent producer because such picture does not bear the "Hays seal."

Mr. Johnston questioned whether the issuance of approval seals is not a move to force the independent producer and distributor to join the Hays organization "whether he wants to or not."

He reiterated the charge that "the producers affiliated with the Hays association evidently have instructed their associated theatres not to play pictures bearing other than the 'purity seal.'"

Disagree with Johnston

Legal students do not agree with Mr. Johnston that exhibitors or circuits are guilty of "unfair competition" if they refuse to book a picture that does not carry a "seal of approval." Nor does it come under the unfair competition clauses. They said that exhibitors are perfectly within their rights to do so, because they, too, are pledged to adhere to moral standards under the same code clause on morality.

"How can an exhibitor be assured that a picture measures up to the right moral standards unless it has been submitted to the regular Production Code Administration and received a certificate of approval?" queried the legal authorities. "The seal and certificate are the only assurances an exhibitor has of the propriety of a production."

Discounting the latest charges against the Hays organization, a spokesman for the MPPDA said Wednesday that any independent may, without any obligation to him, submit either script or completed picture to the Breen staff in Hollywood for approval.

"The independents do not have to belong to the association, nor are they asked to join it," was pointed out. "Furthermore, they can receive the benefits of Mr. Breen's Production Code Administration without having to share with the large producers any of the costs of the committee's maintenance. Nor do the seal and certificate cost them anything."

The first certificate of approval (No. 154) issued to an independent not an MPPDA member was received by P. A. Powers, for "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp."

"This action is in conformity with the association's purpose to afford to all producers, whether they are members of the MPPDA or not, the opportunity to use the facilities which the association has developed to help assure highest standards," said the Hays office.

Church Drive Gives Hays Power Never Had, Says Cochrane

The church drive to raise the standards of motion pictures has placed in the hands of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, "the power that he was popularly supposed to have, but never did have—power commensurate with his responsibility."

This was the opinion expressed Monday in New York by Robert H. Cochrane, executive vice-president of Universal Pictures, who, in a signed article appearing in the New York World-Telegram, explained "The Truth About 'Czar' Will Hays."

If Mr. Hays does not exercise this power, the "cheap publicity-seeking" critics who have thrived on "raising hell with Hays" will be justified, said Mr. Cochrane. "If he does exercise it, with the pledged backing of his board (MPPDA), the knockers will be hushed," he added.

These "cheap publicity seekers, inside and outside of the business, have managed to get reams of unpaid-for newspaper and tradepaper space by laying the blame for all motion picture troubles at the door of the socalled 'Czar' Hays," continued Mr. Cochrane. "They have demanded his resignation because that sort of a demand lands on the front page.

"His resignation would not be accepted if he presented it, nor even if he urged its acceptance."

"Every producer and distributor and every man who owns or operates a motion picture theatre owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Hays," in the opinion of Mr. Cochrane. "So does the public.

"In 12 years, with no weapon except persuasion, his efforts were not 100 per cent perfect, but they worked wonders nevertheless. They stopped thousands of movie 'shots' and dialogue with which short-sighted producers were willing to take a chance for the sake of box office returns. . . .

"The attack on the movies by the various churches is welcomed by many producers (of which I am one) because it has served to strengthen Hays' hand and tended to make him a czar in fact instead of merely in newspaper headlines. . . .

"Through the organization for self-regulation which has been set up there is real power of yes or no. That organization can and will kill any picture which does not live up to the standards of good taste. At last Hays has something more effective as a weapon. Yesterday he could only seek to persuade. Today he can demand. Why? Because, very recently, for the first time, the producers who are members of the association passed resolutions abolishing the jury of three producers on the Coast, to which an appeal formerly was permitted; gave the code enforcement machinery greater authority, and assured Mr. Hays that they would stand absolutely by all decisions of this body. Today if any producer in the association violates the letter or the spirit of any decision that producer is subjected to a fine of $25,000."

LOCAL BOARDS CANNOT PENALIZE DUALS, CODE AUTHORITY DECIDES

Decision in Test Case Bars Zoning Boards from Discriminating Against Doubles by Writing Longer Clearance

The greatest victory to date for the defenders of the double featuring system of theatre operation was won late last week when the motion picture Code Authority, meting for the 21st time, in New York, ruled against penalization in clearance schedules of any theatre engaged in the practice.

The Code Authority, in deciding a test case, the first under the code administration, resolved that no Local Clearance and Zoning Board in the field shall establish any clearance based upon whether a theatre operates on a double or a single feature policy.

The decision is of extreme importance to thousands of exhibitors because most all 1934-35 clearance schedules filed by the 32 Clearance Boards penalize duals in one form or another, principally by writing in longer clearance over double feature houses in the new schedules. All such penalties must now be eliminated.

Four Oppose Resolution

Four who voted against the resolution, and, therefore, in favor of clearance penalties for dual billing, were: Major Leslie E. Thompson, RKO, (MPPDA), producer-distributor-exhibitor; H. S. Bareford, (MPPDA), Warner Brothers, producer-distributor-exhibitor; Austin Keough, Paramount, (MPPDA), producer-distributor-exhibitor, and Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA, who has been a leader in the fight against the practice.

Executives of Columbia and of United Artists, completing the lineup of the so-called "Big Eight," did not have a voice in the voting, but it is generally understood in the trade that Columbia is not opposed to duals, whereas United Artists has not been heard from in this connection in some time.

The independent producers and distributors were jubilant over the victory, for had the Code Authority sustained the right of the Clearance Boards to penalize double bill practitioneers in exhibition, their very structures would have been undermined, depending as they do on dual showings for so many of their bookings.

The Milwaukee clearance and zoning schedule formed the subject of the test. It was the basic contention of dual bill proponents in protesting the schedule that there is no clause in the code governing the control of the practice, and that industry leaders had decided, in a "gentlemen's agreement," during the Washington code conferences, that there would be no attempt made to regulate the policy under the code.

Johnston Warned Opponents

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures, and a leader in the fight for the preservation of double bills, had warned the dual opponents last week that the independents would fight every penalty in every clearance schedule. Some of Mr. Johnston's independent producer colleagues had traveled from Hollywood to New York to participate at the Code Authority hearing. On hand from New York was the largest gathering of executives and lieutenants that had ever assembled at a Code Authority meeting.

A copy of the Authority's opinion in the Milwaukee case will be sent this week to every Clearance Board in the field.

That the decision will be the cause of an immediate increase in doubling was the general opinion along Broadway, hundreds of theatres having refrained from making arrangements for dual policies because of the threatening penalties set up in clearance schedules. Had the proponents lost the decision, however, the system undoubtedly would be abandoned by many exhibitors who prefer shorter clearance without duals.

Clearance schedules containing the dual penalties will be redrafted immediately. They affect only 1934-35 product.

The defense of doubles before the Code Authority was strong, voiced by Louis Nizer, New York film attorney, representing Universal, Columbia, Security Pictures and B. N. Judell, both Milwaukee exchanges, and some 300 independent Milwaukee exhibitors, and by I. E. Chadwick and John Freuler, both independent distributors, and by William Powers, of Fox West Coast Theatres.

Mr. Kent was chairman. He was surrounded by dozens of industry observers, including Willard McKay, Universal; Jack Cohn, Columbia; E. M. Goldstein, Majestic; Abe Montague, Columbia; Herman Gluckman, Majestic; Harry Thomas, First Division, and Irving Mandel, Bernard Mills, Jack Sullivan, Claude Ezell, William Underwood and others.

Charges Authority Exceeded

Mr. Nizer said that the boards in penalizing doubles had exceeded their authority, and that such schedules are unworkable. He told the Authority that the issue was not on the wisdom or inadvisability of duals. "The code is silent on duals," he continued, "and it is not possible to controvert the code and write into it what is left out."

Mr. Kuykendall, the MPTOA president, appeared to be the only Code Authority member expressing favor of eliminating double featuring.

Later, Mr. Kuykendall said that his organization was unalterably opposed to the practice, and that its directors would decide at a meeting in Chicago, to be held in a few weeks, what action they would take to continue the fight against doubles. However, a modification of the MPTOA's attack is a possibility, if a review of anti-duals activity to be made at the meeting reveals instances of theatre business actually having been injured by curbing them.

On the other hand, Allied States Association will continue to leave the matter up to its local affiliates in the field.

Thousands of Theatres Involved in Ruling Which Gives Proponents of Policy Their Greatest Victory to Date

Barred by Mutual Agreement

And now that the NRA, through the Code Authority, has completely washed its hands of the double feature problem, returning the fight to the field, independent producers, distributors and exhibitors favoring continuance of the policy without any regulatory strings attached will point their guns in the direction of some half-dozen large cities where anti-dual propaganda has succeeded in furthering agreements among exhibitors to outlaw the showing of two features on one program.

The movement to effect elimination of the system by mutual agreement is gaining ground, with discussions pointing toward adoption of a ban going on in New York, New Jersey, Los Angeles. Kansas City, Cleveland and St. Louis exhibitors already have signed such agreements.

The general policy of the MPTOA, it is believed, will continue to be aimed at obtaining local agreements among exhibitors and between exhibitors and distributors outlawing the exhibition and sale of dual features.

It appears that the reported intention of the large distributors to effect a curtailment of the practice by inserting clauses in 1934-35 contracts prohibiting its use, will not develop, at least at this time.

Show $1,566,072 MGM Profit For Second Quarter

A profit of $1,566,072 for the 12 weeks ended June 7 was reported this week by Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corp., after federal taxes, amortization of negative and positive costs and depreciation. This is equivalent to $10.16 a share on the preferred stock for the period as compared with $2.09 for the corresponding 12 weeks in 1933.

Net operating income for the period was $7,834,297, with miscellaneous income $195,313.

No Compromise on Films, Says Pope

Pope Pius this week told delegates of the International Federation of the Cinematographic Press that he would not compromise with producers in the suggestion that they make a certain number of films on religious subjects to satisfy the demand for "moral" pictures. His Holiness said he would not be satisfied until the entire output of the motion picture industry becomes "a moralizing, educational force."

"It is not a question of producing religious films and placing them together or alternating them with libertine films," the Pope told the press delegates at Castel Gandolfo. "It is necessary instead, that the whole cinema be moral, moralizing and educational.

"It is a great relief to know that a strong resistance has been put up in several countries against immoral films," he said, "in which several governments have taken part.

"Especially praiseworthy and noble is the crusade by the Episcopate of the United States, which now has been joined by representatives of other religions and by honest people independently of their creeds.

"We can say that while the results already attained are encouraging, everyone in the United States still must support these noble efforts."

In New York clergymen of Catholic and Protestant faiths were at odds as to the results of the drive for better films. Rev. John Paul Jones, Protestant, contended that the chief fault of the average film was not its immoral taints, but "its meaningless stupidities, inanities and bad art." Further, he blamed the Church for its "prudery, conspiracy of silence and its failure to deal with the question in an open and direct manner."

CODE COMPLIANCE DATE PASSES; 30 COMPANIES PROTEST LEVIES

United Artists Comes Under 10 Per Cent Cancellation Clause; Independents' Appeals Must Have Basis

Final closing of the motion picture code compliance deadline, extended several times in order to get in remaining non-assentors, was one of several important developments this week. Other highlights were:

Code Authority ruled United Artists comes under 10 per cent cancellation clause of code.

Thirty producers and distributors protest code assessments.

Code Authority publishes statement of expense and income from Jan. 1, 1934, to July 31.

Distributors in Pennsylvania accused of not using uniform contract as provided in code and of allocating pictures after they have been canceled.

Industrial Appeals Board at Washington —successor to the Darrow Board—warns independent units of all industries that appeals against Code Authority decisions must have solid bases.

The final compliance deadline came Wednesday and exhibitors who have not signified assent may not file complaints against other exhibitors or distributors under the unfair trade practice provisions of the code. Non-assentors paying exhibitor assessments are entitled to certain benefits under the code, such as the 10 per cent cancellation privilege.

United Artists to Appeal

United Artists had contended for some time that inasmuch as all pictures released through its organization are sold on an individual picture basis exhibitors could not be granted the cancellation privilege on its product. This the Code Authority overruled.

On Tuesday an appeal committee—William J. Kupper of Fox, Charles L. O'Reilly, head of the New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and Leon Rosenblatt, New Jersey and Staten Island circuit operator—recommended that United Artists cancel a $12.50 picture as sought by H. R. Evans of the Albion theatre, Albion, Ind.

Disagreeing with the Code Authority decision, United Artists is planning to file suit against the governing body as soon as it hands down an official order on the case, August 23.

30 Protest Assessments

Thirty major and independent producers and distributors filed protests with division administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt on the $90,000 assessments for the first six months apportioned against them for support of the Code Authority. All protests were to be filed by August 15. Official sources on Tuesday indicated that the protests in all probability will be turned down and that the Research and Planning Division of the NRA will ask the Code Authority to draw up another schedule. The two largest producer-distributors to file protests were United Artists and Universal.

United Artists pointed out that it, along with Paramount, RKO Radio, Warner-First National, Fox and MGM, is assessed at $20,000, while Columbia and Universal are assessed at only $15,000, and that United Artists is solely a distributor of a limited number of features annually which do not compare in number with those distributed by other national companies.

Calls Method Unfair

"The gross receipts of the undersigned (United Artists) are far less than the gross receipts of practically all of the national distributors," the letter stated. "The method of allocation is unfair in that the gross receipts and the number of pictures distributed by each distributor should be the factor used in determining contributions to the code." The letter was signed by William P. Phillips, United Artists' treasurer.

Universal's protest, signed by R. H. Cochrane, contained the same allegations and suggested that assessments be based on the gross receipts of the individual distributor and that a public hearing be held on the method of allocating the expense and the method of contribution.

Companies protesting the assessment schedules are:

United Artists, Universal, Amity Exchange, Charlotte, N. C.; Remington, New York; Hollywood Pictures, New York; Capitol Film Exchange, Philadelphia; Monogram, Detroit; Chenoweth Film Co., Omaha; Franklin Productions, Inc., Boston; Paul Goldman, New York; F. & M. Stageshows, New York; Edited Pictures System, New York; Greiver Productions, Chicago; Educational; Ideal Pictures, Minneapolis; Peerless Distributing Co., Philadelphia; Educational, Louisville; Premier Pictures, St. Louis; First Division Exchanges; Strickland Industrial Film Corporation, Atlanta; Progressive Pictures, St. Louis; Hollywood Film Exchanges, New York; Douglas Fairbanks Pictures, Hollywood; Interstate Films, New York; J. Bruce Johnson, San Francisco; Monogram, Denver; Pathe News, New York; Van Beuren; Cameo Screen Attractions, Boston; Charles R. Rogers, Hollywood.

The Code Authority, under its new system of filing monthly financial statements, issued a report showing $94,436.75 total disbursements for the seven months from Jan. 1, 1934, to July 31. Receipts from producers have been $49,700, and from exhibitors $78,570, totaling $128,270 and leaving a balance at July 31 of $33,833.25.

Total home office disbursements amounted to $41,295; for Hollywood offices, $2,600 for main office, $2,182 for extra, and labor, $958. Local boards have spent $47,400.

July disbursements totaled $23,604, or about $1,363 under the monthly budget estimate. Code Authority statements will be published monthly.

Misunderstandings on Contracts

Misunderstandings involving contracts appeared in one or two situations. In Kansas City the question of whether distributors have the right to alter a license agreement in keeping with the local grievance board's demands on an exhibitor found guilty of a contract violation was recommended to be passed on to the Code Authority for decision.

A. G. Smith, manager of the Uptown in Parsons, Kan., refuses to comply with the board's order to drop double bills at ten cents for adult admissions, given after the board determined the Uptown's contracts called for 15 cents minimum. Smith now claims to have obtained written permission from two companies to continue the policy two days a week.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania protested against contracts offered by "certain distributors" alleged not to be using uniform contracts as called for in the code.

In a letter to John C. Flinn, Code Authority executive secretary, the Pennsylvania MPTO said these distributors have included clauses giving them the right to allocate pictures after they have been canceled.

Initiating investigation of complaints against codes and the National Recovery Administration, the Industrial Appeals Board, successor to the Darrow Board, served warning to independent units of all industries that solid bases for all complaints will be required before they will be heard.

Return of 200 exhibitors in Nebraska and Iowa to observance of the code and a reconciliation with code boards was regarded as possible this week in Omaha, following a conference which Calvin Bard had with Mr. Rosenblatt, as the NRA official passed through Omaha en route to Washington from Hollywood.

Objections to the $21,000 budget for administering the laboratory code and to amendments for price fixing according to "lowest reasonable cost of production" were voiced before deputy administrator W. P. Farnsworth.

Reported Settlement Near in Allied Owners Bond Suit

E. Barron Rockwell, secretary of the bondholders' committee for an issue of $9,000,000 of Allied Owners' Corporation first mortgage real estate 6 per cent sinking fund gold bonds, indicated Tuesday that plans for a settlement have been worked out in the $10,000,000 suit against Loew's Theatre and Realty Corporation, Loew's, Inc., and Paramount Publix.

It was said that under the proposed settlement, which first must be approved by two-fifths of the Allied bondholders, Loew's Theatre and Realty would have to pay a total of $12,875,000 at the rate of $500,000 a year, until June 1, 1943, with payments thereafter at the rate of $525,000 until June 1, 1958.

Camera and film manufacturing activities of the Eastman Kodak Company are understood to be running 45 per cent ahead of 1933, based on the first six months of 1934. Employment at Kodak Park in Rochester is at the highest point since 1930.

Eastman will publish this week a financial and earnings report for first six months of 1934, marking the second time in the company's history that such a report has been issued in between the annual statements.

RADIO NEWS AGENCY LAUNCHES FIGHT ON PUBLISHERS' CONTROL

Transradio Press Service Starts Campaign to Enlist 400 Stations; Association Has 25 Clients Before First Week Ends

A news gathering agency, aiming at the scope of the United Press and the Associated Press—to supply the radio broadcasting industry exclusively with spot developments all over the world, got under way this week as Transradio Press Service, Inc., launched a drive to line up 400 of the 600 stations in the United States for itself and news organizations affiliated with it.

Transradio and smaller news agencies have been regularly supplying live news to a number of important radio stations, following bitter warfare between the broadcasters and the American Newspaper Publishers Association with its Press Radio Bureau, which has supplied all bulletins broadcast by National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System since March 1.

Transradio Press, which has subjected the Press Radio Bureau to bombardment all summer, announced this week the formation of a subsidiary—Radio News Association—which before it is a week old has 25 radio station clients. The new association has been esablished to concentrate and perfect the delivery of news via short wave on a nation-wide basis. Its creation completes the ground work of the consolidation program of Transradio, which now dominates the independent radio news field.

This group is serving nearly 100 stations nationally, with arrangements for another 50 in the final stages of negotiation. New stations signed by Transradio and RNA include: WLS, Chicago; WEBR, Buffalo; WMAQ, Miami; WSOW, Birmingham; KTRH, Houston; WDAY, Fargo, N. D.; WJAY, Cleveland; WMT, Waterloo, Iowa; KFJZ, Fort Worth; WJMS, Ironwood, Mich.; WBOW, Terre Haute; WGBF, Evansville; KFDN, Casper, Wyo., and WHBQ, Memphis.

Has Five Branches

Radio News Association, capitalized at $50,000, has headquarters at 342 Madison Avenue, New York, with branches in Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles, St. Paul and London. Herbert Moore, head of Transradio, is president and chairman.

The Transradio group will be serving at least 200 stations before the end of the year, Mr. Moore predicted Tuesday.

"We are fighting because we are alive to our responsibility as newspapermen," Mr. Moore said. "The past six months have demonstrated the insatiable demand of the public for a constant flow of fresh and unrestricted news. It is solely upon this public demand that we have built a worldwide news structure, embracing nearly 7,000 correspondents, branch offices in the key cities of the United States and already serving a majority of the leading independent stations."

Radio station executives—many of them affiliated with both the large chains—were virtually unanimous in their opinion that news service sponsored by the Press Radio Bureau has been a failure. News broadcasts are limited to two a day after the newspapers have appeared, and each is limited to 300 words.

Cites Public Demand

Widespread demand by the radio public for more news presents the radio station with this choice—either to disregard the edict of the publishers or prevail upon the Press Radio Bureau to extend service. These sentiments are borne out in a survey being made by Radio Art, "The Bluebook of the Air."

Many radio officials are of the opinion that the antagonism of newspaper publishers has been considerably dissipated, but that opposition still exists, with indications that the basic reason is a battle for advertising supremacy.

Newspaper publishers apparently feel they can strike at the value of radio as an advertising medium by minimizing the importance of valuable public service, C. R. Tighe, publisher of Radio Art, said this week.

Yankee Network Opened Fight

The Yankee Network, whose president is John Shepard, department store magnate of Boston, paved the way for organization of news services designed exclusively for the benefit of the broadcasters. As early in the year as the end of March, the Yankee Network had organized its own local news-gathering staff.

Transradio is now the most powerful of the radio news services and is delivering international news by private printers' circuits, telegraph, telephone and short wave, out of New York, Chicago, or Los Angeles. Station clients have the opportunity of sponsoring the news programs—a privilege forbidden the broadcasters under their agreement with the Press Radio Bureau. Many stations are reported unable to pay their pro-rata share of Press Radio Bureau service.

Circulation with Cooperation

"They realize the value of news service," Mr. Tighe said, "and because they are local stations a number of them broadcast only local news which they gather themselves or through cooperative tieups with local newspapers. It is significant that where local newspapers cooperate with radio stations, circulation increases, and where antagonism is the publisher's policy, circulation drops."

A further complication has presented itself in the broadcasting of local news. In many instances, the local papers have refused to print the stations' program listings unless they buy the space.

An example is cited in the case of station WGLC in Glens Falls, New York, where the local newspaper, the Post-Star, refused to publish the station's program schedules unless full advertising rates are charged. The newspaper does publish the program schedules of station WGY in Schenectady.

Stations' Executives Agree That Press Radio Bureau Has Been Failure With Limited Bulletins and News Already Printed

On Regular Schedule

In contrast, said Richard E. Osgood, program director of WGLC, is the friendly attitude of the newspapers in Albany, 50 miles away. The Times Union, a Hearst newspaper, and the Knickerbocker Press have both published the schedules of the station. WGLC is a member of the Columbia network, and receives Press Radio Bureau service, but it also broadcasts local news bulletins of its own.

In Denver, station KLZ reported that when the Columbia News Service was in force an open break with local papers was experienced. Articles criticizing radio were given prominent positions, program listings were discontinued, but when the Press Radio Bureau began to function, listings were resumed.

Station WIBW, Topeka, owned by Capper Publications, broadcasts local and state news on a regular schedule which it leases through the Topeka Daily Capital, a Capper newspaper. Flashes are sent out on the early morning farm period, from 6 to 7 a. m., followed by a 15-minute news broadcast from 7:15 to 7:30 a. m., consisting of a detailed reading of the newspaper. In the evening, the period from 9:30 to 9:45 is devoted to a news service reading from the next morning's first edition of the Daily Capital, these broadcasts being regarded as a definite build-up for the paper.

W. A. Young, production manager of WBRC in Birmingham, Ala., called the Press Radio "the poorest excuse for news flashes imaginable.

"We are reminded daily by our listeners," he said, "that certain items given at 10:30 a. m. were read the night before. The public takes the attitude that the newspapers have put a fast one over on the radio stations, which, in our opinion, is exactly correct."

LASTING success in any endeavor is not to be achieved unless built on a foundation that is fundamental and basic. When BEN HECHT and CHARLES MACARTHUR started work on "CRIME WITHOUT PASSION", they started more than a motion picture! They started to establish—once and for all—that revolutionary ideas are more important to the box-office than lukewarm traditions . . . and that real story values and naturalness of characterization are more vital than names that scintillate on the marquee and lack lustre in portrayals on the screen. HECHT and MACARTHUR started—in brief—on the assumption that unless audiences are vitally absorbed and interested in what's going on—all the time—it can't be real entertainment!

In "CRIME WITHOUT PASSION" Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur have crystallized their ideas with startlingly dramatic results. They have produced an intensely absorbing and entertaining picture guaranteed to tear the heart out of audiences as the action unfolds on the screen. Seldom has so terribly fascinating a character been conceived as their central figure of the criminal lawyer who literally took women's souls apart to satisfy his insane ego. Seldom has a picture maintained so startling a dramatic tempo from start to finish. "CRIME WITHOUT PASSION" *is box-office! It is told with honesty, portrayed with virility, and directed with a real sense of dramatic values and human understanding.

Hollywood Reporter, July 28th:
"A stirring melodrama and a darned swell piece of entertainment . . . A picture that has sufficient creeps to send any audience out talking... Hit of the picture is MARGO . . . she comes through with an astonishing performance." — Billy Wilkerson

Screen Book, October: "At last a picture of a different sort . . . opens with a flash and whips along to a furious climax . . . Packed with thrills and suspense."

Photoplay, November: "Expertly handled. Good entertainment for those who appreciate a highly dramatic story."

"A superlative piece of craftsmanship . . . is as refreshing as it is a tribute to Mr. Hecht and Mr. MacArthur." —Pare Lorentz

All of which tends to prove that HECHT and MACARTHUR not only started something with "CRIME WITHOUT PASSION" . . . but they finished it in a way to meet with the approval of all audience-wise showmen who have seen it.

INDEPENDENTS INCREASE SCHEDULES, MAJORS CUT

183 More Features Than Last Year from Independents, 28 Fewer from Majors

Production budgets and schedules for 1934-35 having been definitely determined by virtually all companies in the industry, the management of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer set out on its own, last week, to determine the final numerical status of new products as it compares with that of last year, and learned that exhibitors can expect 28 fewer features from the large interests next season, 183 more productions by independents. Feature releases scheduled for 1934-35 total 835, as compared with 680 on the schedules of all companies last year. Metro's findings in the feature field follow:

	1933-34	1934-35
Large companies	406	378
Independents	274	457
Totals	680	835

Theatre owners of the country, although in a better position insofar as a wider selection of features are concerned, face a reduction of 384 one-reel and two-reel subjects in 1934-35, as gleaned from the following Metro compilation:

	1933-34		1934-35
	One Reel	Two Reels	One Reel	Two Reels
Large companies ...	624	377	502	289
Independents	202	257	90	197
Totals	826	634	592	486

Of the large companies reporting curtailed schedules, Columbia will have one feature and 39 shorts less than in 1933-34; Fox plans 14 fewer features and 58 shorts less; MGM, 22 shorts fewer; Paramount, one feature and 25 shorts; Radio, two features and 11 shorts; United Artists, 13 features and eight shorts, and Universal 52 shorts less than last year.

Warners Add $5,000,000

Jack L. Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers, in charge of production in Hollywood, announced Tuesday that for the 1934-35 schedule of 60 productions the company had appropriated a budget that exceeds by over $5,000,000 the costs of last year's product, this because the company "is confident that the nation and the rest of the world is headed for greatly improved business conditions during the coming year."

"Because we kept our studios going throughout the summer months without the customary shutdown, we find ourselves today in the advantageous condition of having 15 pictures ready for release by September 1st," Mr. Warner added.

Buying Strike Is Proposed

Because of the havoc wrought by the drouth, theatre owners of the Midwest have been urged both by the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Associations and the Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas City to join in a four-week buying strike against the allegedly high rentals demanded by distributors for 1934-35 product.

"With crops in Missouri and Kansas cut down to one-fifth of normal, even if rain helps now, it is certain that no exhibitor can hope to pay the same price for product this year as he did last," declared John C. Stapel, Columbia, Mo., president of the KMTA. Jay Means, president of the ITO of Kansas City, agreed.

Columbia announced that Walter Futter had signed with RCA Photophone for the recording of a new series of Travelaughs.

Maurice Conn, in Hollywood, was made president of a new producing company that will make eight James Oliver Curwood outdoor stories, several to star Kermit Maynard, brother of Ken.

First Division Pictures, Harry Thomas, president, finally lined up its 1934-35 program, embracing the product of 11 independent producers to be distributed as follows:

Twenty Monogram features to be handled in New York, Philadelphia, eastern Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey; eight Liberty productions to be distributed in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Boston and Louisville; eight Imperial films, for Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, Charlotte and New Orleans; three First Division pictures, to be released by Thomas nationally; one Goldsmith production, to be handled in Boston; 18 Chesterfield-Invincible productions, for release in New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo; Washington, Albany, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit and Louisville; one Willis Kent feature, for Washington only, and the following to be handled nationally: two Principal pictures, one Du World and one Romance production.

Harold B. Franklin started work at Eastern Service studio on his first, "Gambling." George M. Cohan is the star.

Monogram Pushes Program

Monogram announced that it will speed up production in order to get its present program into the theatres while other companies are rearranging their schedules to conform to the better pictures campaign.

Ten French pictures were announced for 1934-35 by Paramount, which also announced during the week that 15 features of the new program will be ready in this country by August 20.

Charles R. Rogers' new deal with Paramount is for 10 pictures, instead of 12, as originally announced. "The Goddess" will be the first.

Penzner Pictures, headed by William Penzner and B. V. Mindenberg, will make a feature series in Hollywood for the new season.

Four features will be produced by Phil Ryan Productions.

Supreme will expand its present program, consisting of some Bob Steele westerns, to include another series.

Monty Shaff has formed Topical Pictures to produce features.

"Old Folks at Home" and "Brewster's Millions" are two additions to the United Artists schedule, which now includes 29 features.

J. R. Grainger, general manager of distribution for Universal, returned Tuesday from Detroit with contracts signed for Universal product to play the Butterfield Circuit of 81 theatres in 34 Michigan towns. With the closing of the Buterfield Circuit, Universal for the first time in August has signed every important circuit in the United States and Canada, with the exception of two with which negotiations are now in progress. The company said the percentage of contract sales over last year is very nearly 800 per cent.

New Metropolitan Board Offers Plan

Ultimate disposition of the theatres in the Fox Metropolitan circuit of New York this week appeared as uncertain as 10 weeks ago. Two reorganization plans have been filed within a fortnight—during proceedings instituted by Loew's, Inc., and Warner Brothers by which a joint bid of $4,500,000 by the two was intended to satisfy creditors of the circuit and give the two theatre companies control of the 87 houses. Ten days ago Loew withdrew, and the Warner position has not been announced.

The first plan for reorganization was filed by counsel for bondholders whose holdings are said to represent only $11,000. On Tuesday, Judge Julian W. Mack in U. S. district court, New York, said he doubted the good faith of this petition and had not yet decided whether to permit Fox Metropolitan to enter a new bankruptcy status under Section 77-B of the new laws.

On Thursday, a newly elected board of directors of the circuit filed a voluntary petition for reorganization under the new laws. Judge Mack will hold an adjourned hearing next Tuesday.

A. C. Blumenthal, financier and creditor of Fox Theatres Corporation, revealed he shortly will make an offer for Fox Metropolitan.

New Jersey Allied Sets Program; Board Session Off

Three hundred are expected to attend the annual convention of Allied Theatres of New Jersey and other eastern exhibitors, in Atlantic City August 22-24. Subjects for discussion include the proposed music tax increase, "clean" pictures, rentals, block booking, clearance and zoning, code and legislation. Abram F. Myers is to attend.

Eastern Allied directors will not have a meeting at that time.

Finish First Powers Series

"Aladdin and The Wonderful Lamp," which finished on schedule last week, completes the first series of Powers ComiColor cartoons of celebrity for the current season. "The Headless Horseman" will be the first for 1934-35.

New Warner Argentine Head

Harry M. Novak has been appointed Warner general manager of the Argentine and Uruguay. Mr. Novak, who left New York last month with Karl MacDonald, manager of the Latin American division, has already taken charge at the headquarters in Buenos Aires.

Kittie Baldwin Dead

Kittie Baldwin, who played in early motion pictures with John Barrymore and Clara Kimball Young, died at her Buffalo home last week.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

The trumpets will blow from the Paramount theatre in New York's Times Square sector, at nine o'clock on Thursday evening, signaling the world premiere of Cecil Blount DeMille's "Cleopatra." Many spectacular effects will be seen. Many that had been planned will not, among them:

DeMille had planned, as a detail of a scene depicting Cleo's triumphal entry into Rome, to have four colored boys each holding a lion on a leash. He got the lions, but could not get the negroes.

Again, he had Le Roy Prinz, dance master, train some goats to butt the dancing girls in rhythm for a bacchanalian scene. The goats butted, but the girls balked.

DeMille brought his pretty little niece, Agnes DeMille, daughter of Director William, and a noted dancer, from London to Hollywood to do a brief special dance. When Miss Agnes found she was to do the dance on the broad back of a bull, she turned around in a huff and took a train back to New York, refusing the job.

Not a character in the picture is shown dying a natural death. They found while doing research that not a prominent character in Rome during the time of Caesar and Marc Anthony was given time to die naturally or gracefully.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said softly, "but there are other guests here. This is no way to eat a chicken."

The old man shrugged his shoulders and tore off a wing.

"Leesten," he replied, "dun't give me any advwice. Vhat vas good enuf for Henry de Eight is good enuf for me!"

Cecil B. DeMille probably will remember for some time the party thrown by friends last Saturday at a Kansas City hotel celebrating his fifty-third birthday anniversary. The affair was featured by a parade of nine mannequins attired in the costumes of the screen heroines DeMille has made famous, and other typical DeMille atmosphere.

The climax came when, in the presence of august city officials and a crowded grill room, it was announced DeMille did not observe his birthday on Saturday night without cause and, heralded by heavy trumpet blasts, four burly Nubian "slaves" from Kansas City's Negro quarters, clad in leopard skins, brought in a white family bathtub.

The tribute, it was explained, was the graceful homage of the nation's plumbers, who regarded DeMille as their patron saint.

Ray L. Hall, associated for most of his years with newspapers and newsreels, writes from the Capital, where he has for a time divorced himself from motion pictures, explaining that for the life of him he cannot fathom the reason why the President's salary is so frequently compared to the much higher salaries of the stars in Hollywood, "unless it is propaganda looking to an increase for him." And, if that be true, Mr. Roosevelt's expert propagandists appear to be justified, because, says Mr. Hall, he is one of the worst paid executives in the world.

"The last figures I could find," continued Mr. Hall, "showed King George Windsor, of England, getting a tidy little $3,000,000 a year, and I hear he has had a nice raise since then. The President of France, who has nothing to do but refuse to pay debts to America, gets $200,000 for his services each year they don't shoot him. Hayti pays its chief $240,000 per annum. Persia, a paltry $30,000,000. Russia, $10,000,000. Siam, $10,000,000. Spain, $3,900,,000. Morocco, $2,500,000. Japan, $2,300,000. Egypt, $1,575,000. Germany, $1,000,000. Saxony, $700,000. Portugal, Sweden and Brazil, each $600,000. Switzerland alone is lower than the U. S., paying only $3,000 a year, which would make a sad pay envelope in Hollywood." Mr. Roosevelt has got to get by on $75,000 a year and $25,000 expenses.

Jack H. S. Fuld, pioneer exploiteer, arrived at our office bright and early the other morning with a copy of an early popular "movie edition" of a best seller. It was "The Beloved Adventurer," prize novel of the Ladies Home Journal of 20 years ago, which was filmed and subsequently published in book form by the Lubin Company in 1914.

The book, by Emmett Campbell Hall, contains the 15 complete adventures of "The Beloved Adventurer," profusely though crudely illustrated with scenes from the photoplays of that series.

One humorous event that followed the costly settlement by Metro of Princess Irina Alexandrovna Youssoupoff's "Rasputin" libel suit, was the gay party given in London by the Princess in celebration of her victory, at which several officials of MGM attended, and, according to press cables, joined others in toasting the Russian for her good luck in gaining from the company a sum variously reported as ranging from $125,000 to $725,000. In honor of the occasion the Metro executives and the lady's friends were permitted to gaze upon an emerald necklace that had belonged to the Romanoffs.

The case was based on the allegations of the Princess that the character Natasha in "Rasputin and the Empress" represented her as an adulteress.

An interesting disclosure at the "victory celebration" that cost Metro plenty, was the information that Princess Youssoupoff and her husband, Prince Felix, are now staying at Windsor Castle as guests of King George and Queen Mary. She is a cousin to the King.

Harold Clayton Lloyd, comedian of "goggles," is staging his comeback at 40. He arrived in New York over the weekend from Hollywood to be on hand for the Broadway premiere of "Catspaw," his first in three years. The Fox press agents had a chorus beauty waiting for him at the Grand Central railroad station. He was supposed to pose with her while hanging on to one of the cat's paws, because his new picture has something to do with cats' paws. Harold squawked, however, when they trotted out a big black cat, on the grounds of superstition. But the press agents, having some sleight of hand qualities, quickly substituted a fluffy white kitten.

There isn't a pair of pajamas in her house.

She likes massages several times a week, and has a stationary bicycle in her apartment.

Ed Kuykendall, chubby president of the MPTOA, arrived in New York the other day from his Mississippi home in the deep south, with some tall tales of the unprecedented heat wave in that sector. "It's been so hot down there," reported Ed in his long, soft drawl, "that the water in the Louisiana watermelons has been transformed to steam by the sun, and the melons have been exploding all over the countryside, frightening the negro farmhands out of the fields." A simple solution to save the melons from explosion would be the injection into each of a radiator steam valve.

The batter and the men on first and second were all tagged out when they piled up on third base, unable to proceed any further because the donkey carrying the man on third refused to budge.

GAUMONT MOVE SEEN BRITISH STUDIO SPUR

Significance of Invasion of U.S. Expected to Percolate to Concerns Making Lesser Product

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

There's only one story in London this week: the Gaumont-British decision to engage in direct distribution in the States. Even the arrival of Louis B. Mayer served, by reason of the trend of the speech delivered by the MGM production chief at his Savoy welcome lunch, to underline the increasing international importance of British production; while Joseph Schenck further emphasized the significance of the Gaumont move by a typically open-handed "welcome to America" gesture.

What stuck out in C. M. Woolf's announcement of the Gaumont exchange plan—and it may not have been so plain in cabled versions—was the frank recognition of the fact that GB was up against the problem of pleasing the American box-office and that it proposed to tackle it by American methods. It is significant that GB sent its general manager, Jeffrey Bernerd, to New York with a free hand to select personnel and determine selling methods on the spot. One has the idea that GB, in America, will be Gaumont-America in man power and policy and that the last word may ultimately be found to apply to production as well as to distribution.

Arliss Contract an Indication

Mr. Woolf, one of the shrewdest men in the British industry, said that he regarded America as 60 per cent of the world market. His promise that GB is going to compete with American companies for star and director values suggests that GB production schedules, in a very short time, will be shaped with a view to the requirements of that 60 per cent. The Arliss contract, for two more pictures, shows how the wind is likely to blow. Of more immediate importance is the fact that GB, in America, is going to get behind its existing pictures (and there is pretty good box-office material in "Chu Chin Chow," "Jew Suss," "Man of Aran," "The Iron Duke" and "Little Friend") with all the resources of exploitation as America understands it. Best earnest of their intention is that they haven't sent over a British publicity man, but left Mr. Bernerd to find one, with all his other staff, in New York!

Mark Ostrer and C. M. Woolf are to go to New York as soon as Mr. Bernerd has finished his preliminary organization and it's a pretty safe bet that GB-America will be formally launched in a big way. It should be; after all, what is happening is that the American exhibitor is being offered a new line of product, and the promise of still better to come, from a concern controlling something like $100,000,000 of capital, on which it is earning good profits. A company of that size has the ability to compete with Hollywood on level terms—and to outbid it, as Mr. Woolf suggested, if it feels so inclined.

The establishment of GB exchanges is therefore undoubtedly a major event in America. In Great Britain the news has created a big impression and in due course its significance may be expected to percolate even to those strata of the British production industry which continue to mumble "American conspiracy" because they can't get Broadway runs for films which they book with difficulty, and to indifferent box-office returns, in the British "smalls."

Joseph Schenck, as is his way, seems to have hit the nail on the head when, in welcoming the GB exchanges as "a most constructive move," he added: "These offices will be able to advise as to the type of picture required—the film that will secure international success." [Mr. Schenck returned to New York this week. —Ed.]

Louis B. Mayer also extended the glad hand to British productions, for the sound reason that the American box office needed them. It would welcome forty "Henry VIIIs" a year, he declared. There were several "ifs" in Mr. Mayer's references to MGM's own British production plans, but his condemnation of $10,000 quickies as "nails in the industry's coffin" was significant. What he did say, quite definitely, was that if MGM produced in England it would do so on a big scale, allocating to a London studio part of the activities at present centered in Hollywood and sending directorial and acting "aces" to do the job. That's the only ultimate solution of the quota problem for any American companies which have not established tieups with major British concerns.

Music Tax Fight Waits Next Move

There was quiet during the week along the line of battle between exhibitors and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, in the conflict over the publicly announced plan of ASCAP to increase royalty rates charged theatres for the reproduction of copyrighted music of Society members.

Resolutions of protest were passed by members of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, Gulf State Theatre Owners Association, the MPTO of Maryland, Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, the MPTO of Buffalo and the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania.

The Exhibitors' Emergency Committee in New York was still debating over proper legal procedure to be followed in the attempt of exhibitors everywhere to prevent the increase. It was indicated that the law firm of Newton D. Baker is favored to prepare the case for the owners.

Chaplin to Start Film in September

The new Charlie Chaplin film, as yet untitled, will go into production early in September, according to announcement from Hollywood. In accordance with the pantomimist's refusal to "talk" on the screen, the new picture will be without dialogue. Paulette Goddard will play opposite Mr. Chaplin. The theme is reported to be based on present day problems that confront the "little man."

It is expected the production will be completed in January, when it will be released through United Artists.

Philadelphia Unit Organizes Cabinet

The Independent Exhibitors Protective Association of Philadelphia this week elected a board of governors and announced formation of a cabinet composed of staff experts who will aid members.

The board of governors is composed of Morris Wax, chairman; Harry Fried, Columbus Stamper, Herb Elliott, Bill Butler, John Bagley, Norman Lewis, Dave Shapiro and Clarence Hexter. David Barrist was elected an honorary member.

Departments already selected for the cabinet include legal, consulting electrical engineer, purchasing of supplies and equipment advertising.

Educational Laboratory Work Moved to De Luxe

Educational has transferred its laboratory work to De Luxe Laboratories, Inc., a Fox affiliate, following the expiration of the Educational contract with Consolidated Film Industries, according to an announcement from E. W. Hammons, Educational president. The change, declared Mr. Hammons, had no significance other than Educational's "natural desire to work cooperatively with the Fox organization."

U. S. Films Lead At Venice Exhibit

American producers lead in representation at the Second International Exposition of Cinematographic Art, to be held in Venice, Italy, August 1 to 24. The program of pictures to be shown includes 11 from United States producers, compared with six German, six French, five Italian, five British, and an additional 20 from all other countries combined.

The American films to be exhibited are: "Viva Villa," MGM; "Cellini," 20th Century-United Artists; "The World Moves On," Fox; "Mystery Liner," Monogram; "Wonder Bar," Warner; "White Heat," Seven Seas Corporation; "Death Takes a Holiday," Paramount; "Little Women," RKO Radio; "It Happened One Night," Columbia; "Invisible Man," Universal, and a Walt Disney animated cartoon subject.

Loew Managers Shifted In Cleveland Territory

W. A. Finney, Loew division manager with headquarters at Cleveland, has made several managerial changes within recent days. The changes follow the transfer of H. M. Addison, former Cleveland zone manager, to Boston. Colonel Harry Long succeeds Mr. Addison as zone manager.

The changes are as follows: L. Ward Farrar, manager of Loew's here, has been shifted to the Palace, Indianapolis, along with W. O. Crouch, who has been assistant manager here. Farrar is succeeded by Kenneth A. Reid, for three years manager of Loew's Broad, Columbus. E. C. Colvin has been returned to assistant manager. Russel Bovim, manager of Loew's Ohio, Columbus, has been made city manager in that city. Bovin was manager of the local Loew house. Taylor Myers, until recently assistant manager of the Loew's Midland, Kansas City, has been shifted to Columbus as manager of the Broad there.

Franklin Plans to Film Musical, "Three Sisters"

Harold B. Franklin has acquired "Three Sisters," a musical romance by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd, as his first musical film. The play was first produced last April at the Drury Lane theatre, London. The music will not be heard in this country until the production is ready.

The play is in addition to a number of stage properties the Frankwyn Company—Mr. Franklin and Arch Selwyn—in association with Arthur Hopkins, have lined up. The Frankwyn Company is moving from the NBC Building to larger space in the Empire Trust Building, New York.

Diamond to Produce in Europe for Columbia

Columbia's 1934-35 feature schedule will be augmented by an undetermined number of $100,000 productions to be made in Europe by Dave Diamond, who closed negotiations Tuesday with Jack Cohn, vice-president, in New York, after having conferred in Hollywood with Harry Cohn, president. Mr. Diamond sailed Wednesday for London.

FEDERAL LOANS FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

Half Billion To Be Made Available to Companies Under Industrial Loan Section of Federal Reserve Bank

The Administration at Washington has undertaken a campaign to familiarize industrial establishments, especially small ones, of every sound industry, with the machinery whereby Congress has made available, through the Industrial Loan Section of the Federal Reserve Bank, some $500,000,000 to be loaned to companies which have suffered severe capital losses and are now short of working capital. Basically, the machinery works in the following manner:

1. Applications must be made to the regional Federal Reserve Bank's Industrial Loan Section, or to the local branch office of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
2. Borrowers must provide adequate security and an audit of their business, made within the last six months.
3. Loans will be granted only for working capital needs (that is, for carrying on actual production, distribution or exhibition operations), and not for new or enlarged equipment. In the case of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, loans cannot exceed $500,000.
4. Borrowers must prove they were in business January 1, 1934, and that they are complying with the NRA.
5. Loans granted will mature in five years, and the interest rate is the same as that charged by regular commercial banks on similar transactions.
6. Large fees are barred to negotiators of such loans.

Further explanation was made by Max Epstein, chairman of the advisory committee of the Chicgo Loan Section, as follows:

"In order to assist the Federal Reserve Banks in carrying out the intent of Congress, an Advisory Board of five business men has been appointed for each Reserve District. We are determined that every legitimate capital requirement in every sound industry shall be supplied.

Not to Compete with Banks

"To meet these legitimate capital requirements, the new Act provides ample funds. The Federal Reserve Banks are authorized to have outstanding loans of this type, with maturities up to five years, in an aggregate amount not exceeding $280,000,000. Additional loans may be made out of funds received through repayment, so that the aggregate amount of credit to be extended through this agency may be several times as large as the amount mentioned.

"This Industrial Loan Agency is not intended to supplant or to enter into competition with the banks of the country. The intention is rather to create a lending agency which can and will supply needed financing in cases where existing banks are, for any reason, not in a position to supply the funds.

"Business men who make use of the loan facilities we are providing need have no doubts or fears whatever as to government encroachments or interference with their business. There is no intention nor desire on the part of the Federal Reserve Banks—nor was it the intention of Congress in passing this amendment—to seek the slightest measure of control over business through this means. The loans we will make will be straight business loans, on the same basis as a loan from a local bank; and it is our purpose only to be helpful—not in any way to interfere with or encroach upon the free private management and control of the businesses to which loans are made.

"This new Industrial Loan Section of the Federal Reserve Bank is in a position to be particularly helpful to moderate-sized businesses whose financial statements may perhaps not measure up to the necessary formulas and rules of the commercial banks, but where the character and ability of the management and the prospects of the business justify the employment of additional working capital. We are in a position to place especial emphasis on the character of management, the demand for the product, and the general position of the industry—without being bound by rule-of-thumb restrictions based on cold financial statements."

Barthelmess, Inspiration and United Artists Again

The old tri-cornered production and distribution arrangement whereby Richard Barthelmess produced for Inspiration, which released through United Artists, may be resurrected. Mr. Barthelmess has launched discussions pointing toward this end with Walter Camp, Inspiration head. Inspiration, in the old days, handled some 18 Barthelmess pictures. Outstanding was his "Tol-able David."

20th Century and London Films Talent Under Double Contract

Under completed negotiations for joint engagement of talent by Twentieth Century Pictures and London Films, stars, directors, writers and cameramen will be under contract to both producers at once. Product of both companies is released through United Artists. Darryl F. Zanuck, production executive of Twentieth Century, and Alexander Korda, producing head of London Films, made the final arrangements.

Playwright Charges MGM With "Riptide" Plagiarism

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was named defendant late last week in a suit filed in the United States district court, New York, by Angel A. Aphenson, playwright, charging alleged infringement by Metro's "Riptide" of a play entitled "The Penalty of Sex."

BREEN REEL TO EXPLAIN CODE
FAN MAGAZINE WRITERS CURBED
SEVEN FILMS START, FOUR FINISH

By VICTOR M. SHAPIRO
Hollywood Correspondent

After a fortnight in the humid hecticity of Manhattan, upon returning to the creative film center, the wayfarer discovers much news bursting in Hollywood to intrigue the showman.

Producers started bending over backward in their desire to conform to the tenets of the code of ethics. Many feared milk-and-water pictures were to be in order. In fact, some producers tried to insinuate that emasculation of films was the purpose of the present campaign.

In blunt language it was made clear to producers that the Code does not intend to dilute strength or quality in films, but it was made equally clear that filth or obscenity dragged in by the heels must and will go. One producer was plainly told that his film, dealing with the Mexican border, was of low moral tone and ought not be produced.

Joseph I. Breen, director of the Production Code Administration, listened to importuning of newsreel editors and the American masses will soon know all about the code and pictures. Mr. Breen, Mrs. Mary Breen and the six Breen children will be in the sequence together with a noted American who will ask the questions while Mr. Breen answers. It is reported that Irvin S. Cobb will do the interrogating. A special foreign print also will be made with a well known Englishman asking the questions. It is believed Hugh Walpole will be selected.

Seven Pictures Start

Midsummer business inactivity characteristic of most industries is reflected in the present Hollywood work schedules. Desire of producers to be sure that everything is right before going ahead is demonstrated by the fact that only seven pictures were started in the past week, and but four were finished.

Radio has two of the newly started pictures. Columbia, Paramount, Universal, Warner and Monogram each have one. Two of the completed are credited to Warner; the third comes from Atherton (Sol Lesser) and the fourth is a Paramount.

One of the Radio features is a dramatic romance, "Anne of Green Gables." The principals are Anne Shirley, formerly Dawn O'Day, Tom Brown, O. P. Heggie, Sarah Haden and Helen Westley. The other picture, "Kentucky Kernels," is a Wheeler and Woolsey comedy Columbia's new one, "I'll Fix It," is a comedy romance drama starring Jack Holt, with Mona Barrie, Nedda Harrigan and Edward Brophy the principal supports.

A mystery thriller, "Secrets of the Chateau," went before the cameras at Universal with Claire Dodd, Alice White, William Faversham and Jack LaRue in the leading parts.

Paramount started "Enter Madame," which teams Elissa Landi and Cary Grant. At Monogram, "Stratosphere," drama, romance and thrills in the upper air, got under way.

Turning to the pictures completed, the Warner pair look interesting. "Happiness Ahead," a glamorous romance reflecting the turmoil of modern metropolitan life, stars Dick Powell and introduces as a new personality Josephine Hutchinson. The supporting cast lists John Halliday, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly and Gavin Gordon. "Six Day Bike Rider," a Joe E. Brown comedy, has Maxine Doyle, Frank McHugh, Gordon Wescott, Arthur Aylesworth and Dorothy Christy.

"Return of Chandu," adapted from the popular radio broadcast feature and a mystery thriller, was completed by Atherton Pictures. Bela Lugosi, Clara Kimball Young, Lionel Atwill and Maria Alba are featured.

Paramount's completed feature, a Zane Grey western, "Wagon Wheels," presents Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick, Billy Lee, Leila Bennett and Monte Blue in the principal parts.

Named Sales Manager

William Gluck has been named sales manager of the Amusement Supply Company, New York.

FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF CHINESE ACTORS

Another Hollywood tempest concerns the Chinese teapot. Yu Seng Kiang, Chinese vice-consul, representing the Chinese government, and Tommy Gubbins have come to grips over Chinese actors and extras in films.

Gubbins has controlled his lucrative trade for years. He is known as the Mayor of Chinatown and has many side incomes.

Yu Seng Kiang, through his dignitaries, is now attempting to take over the film end of Gubbins' activities and the China seas are boiling while eight China films are in production. The Chinese colony is in a ferment, with all speaking different dialects, and "we think we got trouble."

4 Millions View U.S. Bureau Films

More than four million persons viewed Bureau of Mines motion pictures at 49,457 showings in the fiscal year ended June 30. This represented an increase of 43 per cent in number of showings and 36 per cent greater attendance than in the previous year. In the film library were 2,517 reels for distribution.

Inquiries from educational institutions indicated a far greater demand for next year showings.

Denver Lease Cancelled

The federal court at Denver has cancelled the lease held by Welton Theatres Corporation, formed last year by Harry Huffman and Marco Wolff, of Fanchon & Marco, on the Orpheum theatre. Mr. Huffman has formed Centennial Theatres, Inc., to negotiate for the Orpheum, which has been ordered sold.

Theatre Partners Split

In a decision of the superior court, San Francisco, last week, the agreement under which the New Mission, New Fillmore and American theatres, San Francisco, have been operated by N. E. Zaibak and Nasser Brothers has been dissolved. Nasser Brothers are now sole owners.

Columbia Expanding Plant

Plans for the remainder of Columbia's studio expansion program are under way following the completion of a $50,000 electrical shop building. The second building will house trailers, special departments and other units.

Oklahoma Theatre Planned

Western States Theatres Company has filed application for a charter at Oklahoma City. An attorney, carrying on negotiations, said a $1,000,000 theatre, seating 3,000, is planned. Foster McSwain, former owner of the Ada theatres, is head of the new organization.

Madame Du Barry

(Warner)

Farce Comedy

Title significance, character names, locale, time and the fact that it's a "costumer" to the contrary, "Madame du Barry" emphatically is not an historical romance drama as that term is commonly applied. Rather, it's a colorful, spectacularly staged farce comedy. Intriguingly provocative without being the slightest bit shocking, it's the intimate story of Louis XV, King of France, and a lady of uncertain antecedents and character. As is literally shown in the picture, it is the story of du Barry who took the King, his court and all France for a sleigh ride.

Farce, usually satirical, sometimes ridiculously burlesque, there seldom being a serious moment, is the sole motivation. Louis is a gay dog who likes the ladies. When he becomes exceedingly fond of du Barry, she doesn't utilize her favor politically. No empires or dynasties dramatically rise and fall because of her. She just has a grand and glorious time, and while enjoying it to the limit permits herself to do what every woman likes to enjoy—triumphs, big and little, over other women and some men who think they are a whole lot better than she.

The show is lavishly mounted and staged; skillfully acted and directed, there's fun in the modernly applied dialogue, action and situations. Imagination-exciting illusion is allowed to play an important part. Everybody knows that a lot of intimate sexy stuff is going to and does happen. But nobody sees it.

Only a few of the highlights are necessary to illustrate its character. Gay Louis feels pretty good when du Barry more than does the trick as his unofficial consort. Her slightest whim is the occasion for him to squander the wealth of France in its gratification. Jewels and gowns are hers for the asking. She wants a sleigh ride in midsummer and Louis orders his ministers to see that she has it. That they must commandeer all the sugar in Paris to cover the Versailles gardens for the sliding runners doesn't mean a thing to him or her.

When du Barry wants to put a particularly obnoxious worthy on the spot by inviting him to a clandestine liaison and then double crossing him before the King, he's sore only because she let his regal rival use his robe and slippers. Desiring to be presented formally at court, her wish amazing the courtiers, Louis assents partly in fear of what the explosive lady might do to him and partly in admiration for her nerve. That Richelieu, Lebel, d'Aiguillon and the Duchess de Grammont conspire and succeed in stealing her court gown doesn't stop her. She shows up in her nightgown. And the sequence is not brazen.

The balloony Dauphin, completely educated in the arts, sciences and politics, proving a husbandly washout with Marie Antoinette on their wedding night, Louis asks du Barry to give his successor a few lessons in what every young husband should know.

With brilliant pageantry that's about how it goes. In the end, Louis dies and the royal Marie Antoinette, wary of what the captivating Du Barry might do to her husband, banishes her to a lonely convent. Du Barry, content that she has had a pretty good time, takes it with a smile.

The picture is entertaining for class and mass. The introduction should capitalize on personalities, accentuate its poignant subtle humor, and play upon the spectacularly elaborate staging.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Human Side

(Universal)

Comedy Drama

It's the entertainment and showmanship of this picture that provides the exhibition values. Basically it's a comedy drama. Understandable humanness is its outstanding characteristic. Not a preachment, although it has a moral, it is light, airy and exciting. Just when everything seems securely settled, new complications arise, and taking quick twists it races off to new interest-creating angles. A family type attraction, it has plenty of strength in cast and entertainment quality as a big house attraction as well as for smaller communities.

Always fast moving, it has an exciting opening. Aboard train en route to New York, Gregory, producer, and Alma, financing star, read a criticism of their latest flop, the tenor of which is that the reviewers had very bad seats, because they were unable to see and hear everything. A hectic verbal clash ensues. Although divorced, and much to Alma's displeasure, Gregory makes a visit to his ex-wife Vera and their four children as his first duty. Jealousy leads to more excitement between the squabbling pair. This is anathema to Vera, who now is finding much in Dalton's company.

Much as he likes Vera, the children and the good times he has with them, Gregory can't stay at her home. In his club, he comes across Speigle, a composer who has a hit supposed to have been a sensation in Germany that he wants produced. A little intrigue sets him back in Alma's good graces and with her as the star and financial angel, Speigle's yarn is produced only to have the critics tab it as the most colossal of all Gregory's flops. A furniture wrecking battle ensues between Alma and Gregory, which makes newspaper headlines and brings odium upon his family.

Vera decides she will marry Dalton. The kids, however, find out that she doesn't love him, but is only doing it to insure their safety and future. Ganging up on her, the elder two, Lucille and Phil, tell their irresponsible father what's in the wind. Bag and baggage he moves back home. When marriage-license-hunting Vera returns, there he is and no amount of argument can move him. Next morning Dalton comes around to claim his bride, only to be met by Gregory, who convinces him that he has moved back home for good with Vera's assent and permission. Vera, however, having had enough of Gregory, leaves with Dalton, but all her illusions about her and the children's happiness are shattered when Dalton plans to send the elder pair off to boarding school and arranges a rigorous schedule for the younger two. Walking out on him, she goes home to find that Gregory for some strange reason has received one of those fabulous Hollywood offers. The reunited family is off to the Coast and all the happiness that Gregory's years of gadding around have denied it.

It's a wholesome family picture, and there is plenty of sock in it for those who must have their sock. While comedy in action, dialogue and situation is its big point, it tells a real love story. The menace of its triangle is not heavy. Gregory loves Alma only for the money she will put up for his shows. The cast is adequate; Menjou, Reginald Owen, Doris Kenyon and Betty Lawford for the grownups, Charlotte Henry and Dick Winslow for the adolescents, and Dickie Moore, George Ernest and their dog for the youngsters. Beside the commercial campaign given this, word of mouth advertising can be relied upon to boost it considerably.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Dragon Murder Case

(First National)

Mystery

The title is fully explanatory of this picture's character. Adhering closely to the familiar Van Dine story formula, it's a mystery thriller. There's plenty of weird and baffling situations for the gasps and screams; the full quota of comedy for contrasting laughter, and only a modicum of romance for love interest. Primarily it's entertainment, aimed at mystery thrill fans, those who have followed the series of Van Dine pictures, his book readers and to detective yarn devotees. As in its predecessors, there's a tinge of terror; not revolting, but rather as a motivating basis. The novelty of the picture is its difference of locale, the premise of its story and the new characters surrounding the familiar Philo Vance and Sergeant Heath.

Contrasted with the comedy of the bewildered detective, the yarn is mainly dramatic, with a sustaining romantic angle. Menacing mystery is apparent from the start. A swimming party is suggested by Bernice Stamm. Her fiance, Montague, leaps into the pool, and though Tatum and Greeff search for him, he is never seen alive again. Heath is called in and shortly Vance. The body not being recovered, the whole thing looks phoney and there is much comedy to contrast the mystery. Finally Vance finds the body. Then, as everybody is under suspicion, the search is on for the murderer. It is established that a legendary dragon inhabits the pool. Stamm's character, a strange forbidding man, explorer of strange places, lends color to the situation as he is questioned. Vance, prying around, finally contacts Mrs. Stamm, an eccentric old lady who gives him a clue. As he follows it, Greeff disappears and the butler is mysteriously assaulted. A dragon trap is devised, the first murder is reenacted and Vance's suspicions of how the murder was committed is verified. If a motive can be established, the guilty party will identify himself. Vance pries a motive out of Stamm and he is revealed as the murderer.

The picture is straightaway thrill and mystery. There is no moral hazard in action, situations or dialogue to be considered. There being neither sex nor sophistication to worry about, it has showmanship values particularly for the classes previously mentioned as well as worth while all classes of patrons in and above the teen years.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Our Daily Bread

(United Artists-King Vidor)

Comedy Drama

Extraordinary topical showmanship values abound in this production, a down-to-earth motion picture literally and figuratively. For topical subject matter it would be difficult to find a theme more pertinent currently or more widely applicable than the drought which has paralyzed and withered farm produce and small city business of the Northwest, Middlewest and Southwest. Furthermore, the calamity has sered its effects upon mind and emotion of a vast section of the United States, not only through the long period of its prevalence, but undoubtedly into the winter to come. And whatever segments of the population have not been directly affected have assuredly been close to the situation through the daily press, for months. The field of exploitation for "Our Daily Bread" has been deeply furrowed.

Into the theme have been woven other up-to-the-minute subjects of discussion and action. There is the farm cooperative; there is the development of the past year in which farmers, particularly in Iowa, have protected one another's property against foreclosures by forcing acceptance of their own $2 bids.

In treatment, the production ends on a happy note, and logically so, when the temptation toward gloomy ending, that bane of the small community exhibitor at least, might have been overwhelming.

Heading the cast are Karen Morley and Tom Keene. In support, John T. Qualen, in the role of the dispossessed and Norse-brogued farmer from Minnesota who is invited in by Keene to work the property with him, gives a performance which promises well for future appearances. Barbara Pepper is the girl who attempts to win away Keene. In every respect, however, the production is in the spirit of the Production Code of Ethics and is a picture for the entire family. There is a "going to have a baby" situation, but here the event is part of the story, an impoverished man and wife and the problem of their daily bread.

Of action there is abundance, not in the sense of plot complications, but in the unfolding of the simple story of the conquest of soil and sun.

Keene pawns his mandolin for a chicken when his wife, Karen Morley, insists they invite his uncle to dinner and ask him for a job. He offers them a broken-down and heavily mortgaged farm and they start out. Qualen and family, passing, are stalled by a puncture. Keene invites them to share in the farm. Keene gets the idea of a cooperative farm of jobless men experienced in various trades. Ingenuity overcomes lack of equipment. The corn crop has an excellent start. Then comes the drought. Keene's own dejection rapidly is communicated to the others. His wife senses more than discouragement and asks Barbara Pepper to leave the farm. She does, but Keene slips away to join her. On the road he has a vision of Addison Richards, who had one of the farm men turn him over to the sheriff so that the farm could have the $500 reward, for food. Then he hears signs of water running in a stream that had been dried up, leaves Miss Pepper, returns to the farm and inspires the men to the climactic sequence, the feverish digging of a three-mile ditch diverting the water to the field.

It's a production for any and all days of the week. In the smaller communities it is made-to-order for weekend showing.—Rovelstad, New York.

Kansas City Princess

(Warner)

Comedy

Hokum, fast moving fun, "Kansas City Princess" deals in popular entertainment ordinarily appealing to the rank and file fans. It is snappy and zippy in dialogue, action and situations. The idea of the story centers on two gals who have only one objective in life—get the money and let those whom they give a whirl take care of themselves. Light and amusing, occasionally threatening to hop over the traces, but so directed and acted that the intent rather than the actuality is developed, it has plenty of intimate color without any of its real dangers.

The story starts in a swanky Kansas City barber shop. Manicurist Rosie is satisfied to be the adored of minor league gangster Dynamite. All is well until a combination of Manicurist Marie's urgings to get the big dough and the loss of a sparkler given to her by Dynamite convince the pair that their future is more secure in some other place than Kansas City. Disguised as a pair of Outdoor Girls among hundreds of other Outdoor Girls, with menacing Dynamite just a step behind, they make New York. Hopping into a taxi they land in the laps of a pair of Babbits, Weller and Cameron. Rushed to a boat, still a breath ahead of Dynamite, they are unwilling guests of the two Midwest big shots as the liner pulls out. Aboard boat, smart Marie inveigles their new found friends into financing and clothing them as Dynamite establishes himself as bodyguard for the bewildered Junior Ashcraft. Paris is the next stop, and when the trio, after airing the Babbits, learn of Ashcraft's marital troubles they decide to help him. However, Detective Duryea and Gigolo Sacha work a smart double-cross and Herbert is shown up as the chiseler. The climax costs him some money, but it paves the way for Dynamite and Rosie to get together and Marie to see what she can do with making things easier and safer for Ashcraft.

The picture should be sold as farce entertainment, using the strength of cast names as the principal selling angle and hinting at the colorful situations that whip the royal Kansas City princesses into the sensation of Paris.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Fountain

(Radio-Berman)

Drama

Creating popularity for this picture will test anybody's showmanship ability. It has several commercial advantages. The novel from which it was adapted was widely read. The cast presents many names, Ann Harding, Paul Lukas and Jean Hersholt particularly, which have definite box office value. The subject with which it deals—conflict of love, hope and desire under unusual conditions and situations—is an established entertainment premise.

An exploitation problem is the general tone of the picture. Its serious psychological study drama is presented in a somber atmosphere. Comedy being entirely absent, there is no easing contrast. There is no action. Dialogue, many times long drawn out and requiring close attention to grasp its import, carries the plot. Only in one or two instances are there any dynamic or gripping situations. Only once does it visibly stir audience sympathy. Seldom are there any of those common entertainment qualities usually so necessary in kindling mass enthusiasm.

Consequently "The Fountain" is a class picture, the potential appeal of which is limited. Accepted and handled as a woman's picture, it affords certain business creating possibilities.

Timed to the World War era, located in neutral, but pro-German Holland, here's what happens. Allison, interned British officer, is paroled to Von Leyden's castle. Living there, but now married to a German officer, Von Narwitz, is Allison's childhood sweetheart, Julie. Though both combat it, their old affection is renewed. There is no rushing into each other's arms; they talk and analyze the circumstances that have denied them the happiness that both desired. The Leyden family's opposition to things British, to Julie and Allison, the Leyden family, mainly interpreted through Sophie, is contrasted only by the understanding tolerance of the Baron.

Long discourses between Julie and Allison ensue before Von Narwitz, severely wounded, is brought to the castle. He knows all about Allison; Julie has told him in letters. He wants to meet the man. They do and there are more discussions of why things are why. Eventually, undoubtedly inspired by her unconcealed love for Von Narwitz, Sophie pours out her bitterness towards Julie and Allison. Her words are the soldier's death blow. Julie tenderly nurses him with all the faith and love of a true wife. Before he passes, Von Narwitz tells her that he could think of no other happiness for him and her than to have her marry Allison.

Catchlines and publicity stories must be depended upon mainly to create interest. An effective means, it would seem, would be to present the show as a problem play, putting it up to women and asking them what they would do under similar conditions.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Comedy

With Charlie Ruggles in the leading role, and playing the kind of part in which he does so well, lively and entertaining comedy, the exhibitor should have something to sell his patrons. Ruggles has been steadily rising in popularity recently, his comedy is of the definitely appealing sort, and he can be counted upon to have a following in almost any community.

The yarn of the timid soul, who is spurred to the hair-trigger action which was supposed to have characterized him as a great college quarterback, is ready made for Ruggles and he extracts all the comedy there is, which is plenty. There are laughs in his timid-soul romance with Ann Dvorak, who as his secretary contrives, with the aid of his old college chum, to bring Ruggles out of the aspect of fearsome timidity in which he lives, and restore to him his self-respect.

It is comedy which is to be sold here, with Ruggles supported by Eugene Pallette, Berton Churchill and Dorothy Burgess in addition to Miss Dvorak. That Ruggles plays the part of a man called Asaph and that he is afraid of his own shadow, and the boss's whisper, is an idea from which the showman should be able to make a good deal in copy lines. Indicate that here, in a lively comedy, the star has a role which fits him like a glove, and that romantically he is just what all the girls dream about, with heavy accents of sarcasm, and there should be stirring of interest among the patronage. And when that timid soul goes on the loose, and starts making amends, the comedy is really entertaining.

Asaph is a timid editorial writer for the "Balance," a "journal of critical opinion," owned by the four-flushing Churchill. Miss Dvorak is Asaph's smitten, but pitying secretary, who would like nothing better than to see Asaph be a man, if it could possibly be arranged. Asaph is ordered to write an editorial boosting the candidacy for governor of William Davidson, whom he knows to be a crook. Despite his misgivings he writes it.

Then into town comes Pallette, old college chum of Asaph's, who remembers Asaph when he was a tearing quarterback, and is saddened to find him a "worm." At a fast evening party, Pallette speaks his piece, a reformation is wrought in Asaph, and he takes Miss Dvorak with him when he goes back to the office to rewrite the editorial on Davidson as he thinks it ought to be done. They run into a holdup, as a gang sent by Davidson, has Churchill at gun-point in the office while they look for evidence which would be particularly harmful to Davidson's gubernatorial ambitions. Asaph disarms the intruders, dictates terms, and his editorial, tells Churchill what he thinks of him, and concludes by proving his reformation by chastising a soda fountain clerk who had treated him as the timid soul he was—the day before.

Lively, entertaining comedy, with a popular player, the film should be found entertaining.—Aaronson, New York.

BRITISH PICTURES SHOWN IN LONDON

THE PRIMROSE PATH

Produced for and distributed by Paramount. Directed by Reginald Denham. Features Isobel Elsom, Max Adrian and Whitmore Humphries.

Frankly a "quota" offering, the wrong sort of British accent as well as dialogue is in evidence. There is a thin triangle drama with a doctor, his middle-aged wife and an author with sex appeal as the protagonists.—B. A.

THE LIFE OF THE PARTY

Produced for and distributed by First National. Directed by Ralph Dawson. Features Jerry Verno and Betty Astell.

Drunkenness, with the conventional stage sequel of the "hero" entering another man's house and bed, is the theme in chief of this quota offering, which can only be described as a crude film for crude audiences.—B. A.

TO BE A LADY

Produced for and distributed by Paramount. Directed by George King. Features Dorothy Bouchier, Bruce Lister and Charles Cullum.

Another "quota" film, the melodramatic story is of a girl who comes to London to seek her fortune, is wrongfully accused of theft and sent to prison, but finally reconciled to her true lover by a repentant would-be seducer. The settings are better than the naive plot, which handicaps an adequate enough cast.—B. A.

Melodrama

Problems raised by story content and development call for special attention by the exhibitor showing this production, a special attention which should start with seeing the picture first. The story itself, with two cases of "going to have a baby" and a third threatened, makes it strictly adult material.

Aline MacMahon, as the central figure of a theme of true love sacrificed to philandering unfaithfulness, presents as much performance value as the story permits. Paul Kelly is her husband, Ann Dvorak is the girl whom he betrays and Dorothy Tree is the niece with whom he starts to elope, only to be called back to his wife by his conscience.

The picture was made from the story, "Fur Coats," by Ann Garrick and Ethel Hill, and carried that tentative title at one time as well as "A Woman in Her Thirties."

Miss MacMahon, proprietress of a fur shop, befriends Kelly, shiftless but likable sailor, and they marry. His irresponsible nature takes him into an affair with Ann Dvorak, but he drops this when an obstetrician's bill reveals to him the situation at home. But when his own baby dies he responds to the overtures of Miss MacMahon's niece, and they plan to elope. Miss Dvorak has advised his wife that she, too, is now a mother. Miss MacMahon helps her and eagerly accepts an offer to keep the child. Kelly hears them, orders Miss Tree to leave, alone, and returns to his home.

The entire theme is distinctly not for child consumption.—Rovelstad, New York.

Produced and distributed by Warner-First National. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Based on a story, "Fur Coats," by Ann Garrick and Ethel Hill. Screen play by Manuel Seff. Photography by Byron Haskins. Running time, 63 minutes. Release date, July 14.

The Superstition Of the Black Cat

(Paramount Varieties)

Actionful Comedy

Speeding to the big football game, Harry Myers has to turn around when a black cat crosses their path and his wife insists it would mean bad luck to continue. But the return trip brings a puncture and then the action trips off into a kidnaping by a witch and the final rescue. It's fast moving and brightly developed.—Running time, 8 mintues.

Going Places

(Universal)

Interesting

Universal here offers a new series, of which this is the initial subject, in which the popular radio commentator, Lowell Thomas, takes his screen audience to far away places, describing and explaining as the camera records. The three phases of this number are devoted to the famed glass manufacturers of Venice, where master craftsmen produce beautiful pieces of unusual design; the Russian playground for wounded, ill and deserving workers of the Soviet on the Crimean coast of the Black Sea, once the country place of czars; the affinity for the dance of the native tribes of Africa, from the duck-billed women of the Ubangi tribe to the pygmies of the Belgian Congo. The subject is definitely interesting, and well handled. —Running time, 9 minutes.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

58—ADMISSION PRICE AGREEMENTS; "BARGAIN DAYS"

QUESTION—There are two theatres in this town. We both have a midweek "Bargain Day" policy of 10 cents to every one. We intend to raise our price to 15 cents in compliance with the code. If we cannot reach an agreement with our opposition, will you please advise me if we can make a complaint to the Code Authority, or if such complaint must come from the distributors serving the opposition?

ANSWER—First, complaints are not made to the Code Authority, but to the Local Grievance Board in the territory in which the theatre is located. The Code Authority hears appeals from decisions of the Local Grievance Board.

There is no clause in the motion picture code which compels a theatre or his competitor to individually or in agreement together to raise their admission prices from 10 cents to 15 cents, as described, unless, of course, either one or both have a contract with a distributor which contract calls for a 15-cent minimum admission price, and in that case the code says that such a contract minimum be maintained. However, if the contract allows a 10-cent minimum admission, then the code could not compel an exhibitor to increase his price to 15 cents for the showing of the pictures under the 10-cent minimum contract.

This means then that the inquiring exhibitor does not have grounds for complaint against his competitor because the competitor refuses to raise his admission from 10 cents to 15 cents, unless, as previously stated, the competitor's contracts with the distributors specify that a 15-cent minimum admission scale be maintained.

59—CUT-RATE TICKETS

QUESTION—Please give me an opinion under the motion picture code as to the following:

A theatre 38 miles from our town mails twice a month to many of our patrons in our community a program, on the cover of which is printed in large type: "Your Bargain Ticket Inside!" On the inside of the program is printed: "This Program and 20 Cents Will Admit One Adult at a Matinee or Night."

The regular admission price of the theatre mailing these programs into our territory is 35 cents. Our admission price is 30 cents. Could this be called unfair competition?—TEXAS.

ANSWER—Under Section 1 of Part 3-E of the motion picture code, no exhibitor is permitted to give rebates in the form of coupons, reduced script books, throwaway tickets or other forms. The competitor of the complaining exhibitor is probably violating the code and the complaining exhibitor may file a complaint against him with the Local Grievance Board.

60—CHANGED STATUS OF EMPLOYEES IN THEATRES

QUESTION—I am employed in a chain theatre, as assistant manager, with the duties and the authority of that position.

However, when the code went into effect, orders came from the home office that all assistant managers were to be listed under "General Utility," and that they were to continue to work the same number of hours at 40 cents per hour that their original salaries called for. ($20 weekly salary would mean, at 40 cents an hour, that the assistant manager would work 50 hours a week.)

Since that time, I have worked approximately the same number of hours that I worked before, which is well over the 50-hour per week mark, performing the same duties as before, including taking full charge during the absence of the manager, sometimes for days at a time, this at the rate of 40 cents an hour.

Isn't this an evasion of the code? If it is, am I entitled to back pay? And if so, at what rate?

This theatre has not a blue eagle, but has a sign on the box-office that it supports the code signed by the President for the motion picture industry. Does that make any difference in deciding the above case?—MASSACHUSETTS.

ANSWER—Section 2, Part 1-C, Article I-V, of the motion picture code says that the maximum schedule of 40 hours per week which applies to theatre employees in general, shall not apply to employees engaged in a managerial, executive or advisory capacity who receive $35 or more per week, nor to employees whose duties are of a general utilitarian character.

This means that unless a manager or an assistant manager receives $35 per week, or more, he shall not be made to work more than 40 hours weekly under the code.

There have been heard similar stories about theatres, principally houses under the control of large circuits, changing the classification of assistant managers to that of general utility worker in order to evade the 40-hour maximum working clause in the code.

No one, so far as we know, has described just what is meant by the phrase, "general utility worker." There has been no official interpretation as to the meaning of the classification. The code itself does not specify what is meant, merely saying: "Employees whose duties are of a general utilitarian character."

The situation described in the question above, wherein the assistant manager's classification was changed to that of general utility worker, might be a subterfuge to effect evasion. Therefore, it is suggested that the matter be taken up with the Regional Labor Board of the NRA in the territory in which the theatre operates. The address of this NRA Regional Labor Board may be obtained from the National Labor Board at Washington.

An unofficial opinion indicates that neither the Regional Labor Board nor the Code Authority would tolerate any such subterfuge.

The labor provisions of the motion picture code are applicable to all theatres, regardless of whether or not they sign the code, and the theatre owner is bound to abide by them.

61—LIABILITY OF NON ASSENTORS; MAXIMUM HOURS

QUESTION—Our theatre has not signed the code. Are we compelled to live up to it as though we had signed? Is the limit of hours allowed under the code 40 or 48 per week?—MAINE.

ANSWER—Each motion picture theatre is bound to the provisions of the motion picture code, regardless of whether or not its owner had signed. Non-assentors must live up to the code's requirements as well as assentors, and they may be made defendants of complaints of violation.

An exhibitor who has not signed the code cannot file a complaint against another exhibitor with the Local Grievance Board, although such non-assentor may be made the defendant, as stated above, in a complaint filed against him by an assentor.

The maximum number of hours under the code for theatre employees is 40 weekly, not 48. However, this maximum does not apply to theatre executives or theatre managers who receive $35 or more per week. It does apply to such members of the theatre staff as doormen, ushers, cashiers, projectionists, cleaners, janitors, electricians, stage help and the like.

The 40-hour maximum shall be enforced even though the theatre has not signed the code.

Asks $180,000,000 Claims Canceled

A report recommending cancellation of approximately $180,000,000 in creditor claims against Paramount Publix was made to the United States district court in New York last week by special master John E. Joyce. He asked court approval of the plan of reorganization for Paramount Broadway Corporation under which new paper is to be issued for the $8,875,000 bond issue outstanding on the Paramount Building and theatre in Times Square. Paramount would guarantee payment of interest on the new issue and make provisions for a sinking fund to meet maturities.

The plan provides for withdrawal of claims against Paramount aggregating $178,543,653, representing the amount allegedly due in rents on the Paramount Building and theatre for the unexpired portion of the old lease and for taxes and operating expenses on the building, in addition to bonds outstanding. New leases for Paramount office space and the theatre also are included.

Mr. Joyce recommended for approval a plan of reorganization for Toledo Paramount Corporation, involving release from liabilities of $1,711,000 in connection with a bond issue of the Toledo company and rent and taxes on five Toledo theatre properties. In return for the release of Paramount from the specified liabilities, Toledo Paramount Corporation would be relieved of a claim of $1,036,449 held by Famous Theatres, a Paramount subsidiary, and a second claim of an indeterminate amount. In addition, Paramount is to pay fees aggregating $165,000 to Al Reuben and Walter J. Kountz, receivers for the Toledo company, and their attorneys.

Mr. Joyce deferred action until Tuesday on petition of the Paramount Publix trustees seeking authorization for Famous Theatres to purchase 250 shares of Class A stock in Publix Salt Lake Theatres for $50,000 plus half the net profits of the circuit from June 9, 1933, to the date on which the authorization becomes effective. Famous already owns the circuit's Class B stock. The stock it seeks to purchase represents the only remaining interest in the circuit held by Louis Marcus, Salt Lake City mayor and operator of the houses. If the purchase is approved—and there was every indication this week that it would be—Famous will take over operation and appoint a successor to Mr. Marcus.

Paramount Promotes Twelve On Southern Sales Staff

Paramount has made a dozen promotions in its sales forces in the South. They are: Scott Lett, head booker, Atlanta, to salesman, Memphis; Karl Chalman, ad sales manager, Atlanta, to salesman, New Orleans; E. G. Johnson, assistant booker to head booker, Atlanta; Buford Stiles, head shipper to assistant booker, Atlanta; W. R. Word, assistant shipper to head shipper, Atlanta; K. E. Miller, ad sales assistant to ad sales manager, Atlanta; Joe Young, ad sales assistant to ad sales manager, Memphis, replacing C. T. Crosby Signs Air Contract

Bing Crosby, Paramount player, has signed a new 39-week radio contract, beginning September 18. He will broadcast from Hollywood, where he is next to appear in "Here Is My Heart" for Paramount.

Russell Spaulding Sues

Russell Spaulding, who dubbed "Maedchen in Uniform," has filed suit in the Supreme Court, New York, against Filmchoice, Inc., American distributors, charging non-payment of fees.

New Californian Group in MPTOA

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, through its president, Ed Kuykendall, this week announced formal affiliation of the Associated Exhibitors, Inc., in Los Angeles.

The membership of Associated Exhibitors includes a large number of the outstanding theatres of Southern California.

"One of the most valuable reference works I know" from the

WASHINGTON POST
August 6, 1934
by NELSON BELL
motion picture critic

"I wish to take this opportunity publicly to acknowledge receipt of the 1934 issue of the Motion Picture Almanac, compiled by the Quigley Publications, one of the most valuable reference works of which I know. The book consists of 1,114 pages, closely packed with every conceivable type of information of value to a motion picture editor, from brief biographies of the stars to complete analysis of the financial structure of the motion picture industry. The Almanac is edited by Terry Ramsaye, foremost in his field in the United States. Thank you, Mr. Quigley, Mr. Ramsaye, and you, too, Managing Editor Ernest A. Rovelstad, because I suspect it was you who actually put it in the mail for me. If I didn't think you all had one already, I'd send you a book some time!"

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES

Radio

This story, a drama of adult-hindered romance, is adapted from a published novel by L. M. Montgomery. Majoring in sympathy-stimulating qualities, all of which are equitably distributed among the principal players, heart appeal is its objective. Dialogue and situations, while reflecting the motivating tenor, are compensated by contrasting comedy, excitement and suspense. Adaptation is by Sam Mintz, who wrote the screen plays for "Rafter Romance," "No Marriage Ties" and "Gallant Lady." Direction is credited to George Nichols, Jr., who made "Finishing School."

In cast, Anne Shirley, who as Dawn O'Day was seen in "Finishing School," has the lead. A bit of showmanship accrues to her inasmuch as she has changed her name to Anne Shirley, which is that of the lead character. Opposite her is Tom Brown, currently in "Judge Priest." Heading the supporting cast are Sarah Padden, now in "The Fountain," and O. P. Heggie, now in "Peck's Bad Boy."

The story, which has definite showmanship value, promising appeal to both mature and juvenile patronage, is being produced in the spirit of its motivation. The leading character has much sweetness and charm. Those with whom she comes in contact are influenced by it. It has an interesting opening; lonely farm folk adopting a child expect a boy. A girl arrives instead. Almost unwanted, her sweetness wins over her foster parents. It leads to juvenile romance, contrasted by drama to be climaxed by a touching finale, when the girl's lover, now a medical student, hurries a famous doctor to save Anne's foster father's life and his romance as well.

Dealing in an entertainment premise that has long proved a theatre standby, it calls for a brand of showmanship which will capitalize all its various assets.

CHARLIE CHAN IN LONDON

Fox

This is the seventh story based on the famous Earl Derr Biggers character, Charlie Chan. Warner Oland, creator of the screen character, and its portrayer in the previous six, again has the lead. With the death of Biggers, the published material having been exhausted, this original screen play is by Philip MacDonald, known to domestic exhibitors as the author of "The Lost Patrol." Direction is by Eugene Forde, whose most recent credit is "Smoky."

The story, located in London and presently timed, runs the skein of drama, romance, comedy and mystery thrill and gives Chan only a short time in which to solve a baffling murder case. The climax, colorful and actionpacked, introduces a fox hunt in which Chan traps the human fox.

In support, this is the third picture for Drue Leyton; "Change of Heart" and "Charlie Chan's Courage" being the others. Ray Milland has been seen in "Many Happy Returns" and "We're Not Dressing." Mona Barrie has been in several Fox pictures. Alan Mowbray currently is in "One More River." Madge Bellamy, silent screen star, will be seen again. Walter Johnson is a newcomer. In minor roles will be seen David Torrence, Murray Kinnell, Douglas Walton, E. E. Clive (the detective in "One More River"), George Barraud, Paul England, another newcomer, and Elsa Buchanan.

The Chan character as depicted by Oland having demonstrated its popularity, the showmanship of this picture is a recapitulation of all that was applied to the other six, plus the unique value that this story is not an Earl Derr Biggers' creation.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND

MGM

Against the fanfare, excitement, crowds, action and color of big league baseball, this is a murder mystery story supercharged with topical situation comedy. The original is by Cortland Fitzsimmons, whose other sport mystery thriller, "70,000 Witnesses" (Paramount), is well known The screen play is by Harvey Thew, recently associated with "Murder in the Private Car" and "Operator 13," and Joe Sherman, graduate of the MGM publicity department. Added dialogue is by Ralph Spence. The director, Edward Sedgwick, made a previous baseball sport story, "Slide, Kelly, Slide," and also did the last Universal football feature, "Saturday's Millions."

The cast and their most recent credits include: Robert Young, "Rothschild," "Carolina" and "Spitfire"; Madge Evans, "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Grand Canary"; C. Henry Gordon; Ted Healy, "Operator 13"; Nat Pendleton, "Manhattan Melodrama," "Thin Man" and "Catspaw"; Paul Kelly, "Broadway Thru a Keyhole"; David Landau, "Judge Priest"; DeWitt Jennings, "Little Man, What Now?"; Ralph Bushman, "Viva Villa," and Edward Brophy, "Thin Man" and "Have a Heart." Additionally there are several oldtime ball players and the present St. Louis and Chicago National League ball clubs.

With a comedy technique similar to that of "The Thin Man" being applied to the motivating murder mystery and its companionate romance angle, thousands in the Cards' ball park look on as a man just about to complete a homerun is shot to death, while the dumb catcher and blind umpire begin their vivid comedy. The Cards, in a terrific slump, battle the Cubs; racketeering gamblers get in their dirty work, the star pitcher is shot at and wounded, but the excitement of the pennant struggle goes on. Danger grows, suspense adds to the thrill and the revelation as to who's at the bottom of it all is left to the final sequence.

A "natural" for sport exploitation tieups, with ramifications that will arouse male curiosity, comedy and romance should be capitalized to intrigue the feminine sport and picture fans

TRANSATLANTIC MERRY-GO-ROUND

United Artists

A story that promises much and varied entertainment, a cast chosen with particular care as to adaptability to roles, plus elaborate and colorfully novel production locale, a sea-going showboat, suggest the unique showmanship potentialities of this picture. The original is by Leon Gordon, recently associated with "When Ladies Meet" and "Tarzan and His Mate." Added comedy and scene dialogue is contributed by Harry W. Conn and Joseph Moncure March. Benjamin Stoloff, who made "Palooka," is directing. Music and lyrics are by Richard Whiting and Sidney Clare, and dance groupings are directed by Larry Ceballos.

The cast is composed of well known personalities. Gene Raymond and Nancy Carroll, recently in "Springtime for Henry," have the leads. In support are Jack Benny of radio broadcast fame; Mitzi Green, now fully grown up; Sidney Howard, Sid Silvers, Sidney Blackmer, Ralph Morgan, Shirley Grey, Sam Hardy, William (Stage) Boyd, Robert Elliott, Frank Parker, Carlyle Moore, Jean Sargent and Jimmy Greer and his orchestra.

The story gathers all sorts of characters, crooks, show girls, gamblers, racketeers, jail breakers, philandering wives and husbands, confidence men, cops and jail breakers, in its plot. Against a background of intrigue, doublecrossing, robbery, murder, comedy and gayety, all spiced up with tingling music and spectacular girl dance members, it tells a smart romantic story.

In story value, the peculiar appeal of its setting—a widely ballyhooed and continually radio broadcasted transatlantic trip and the quality of cast, it makes possible much novel and colorful showmanship exploitation permitting the show to be sold in many different ways.

SIX-DAY BIKE RIDER

Warner

Naturally Joe E. Brown and the show are the latest showmanship in this new and topical comedy. Two men responsible for some of the most successful Warner features are behind the picture. The original story and screen play are by Earl Baldwin who had a hand in "A Very Honorable Guy" as well as "Dames," "Wild Boys of the Road" and "Wonderbar." The director, Lloyd Bacon, made "Honorable Guy," "Footlight Parade" and "Wonderbar," among others.

The cast supporting Brown lists several old and many new names. In this case, Maxine Doyle, now in MGM's "Student Tour," has the featured lead opposite Brown. The more familiar names are Frank McHugh, Gordon Wescott, Arthur Aylesworth, in many Warner features, and Dorothy Christy. Others not so well known are Lottie Williams, Harry Seymour, Lloyd Neal, William Granger and Ralph Remley.

As the title indicates, the story is topical and modern. Similar to the preceding Brown pictures, characteristic romance and drama are built to effect the action climax. That is the picturization of a six-day bicycle race in which Brown arrives in the nick of time to undergo further misfortunes, all adding to the comedy in which a gag inserted to put him out of the race reacts on its sponsors.

In story and the amount of novel action in this vehicle it appears to be one in which topical bicycle exploitation will not only accentuate its comedy, but add to the natural Joe E. Brown drawing power.

DANGEROUS CORNER

Radio

In basic story, the way in which it is told and the moral which it points, this is something new in crime mystery yarns and the effect of its involved romantic angles. One of its strong interest creating points is its moral: half truths, sometimes, are better for the general happiness of all rather than the whole truth.

Based on a novel and play by James B. Priestly, the screen play is by Ann Morrison, who recently did "This Man Is Mine" for Radio. Direction is by Phil Rosen. The small cast of principals includes Virginia Bruce, currently in "Jane Eyre" (Monogram); Melvyn Douglas, seen in several Universal pictures a year or two ago; Conrad Nagel, on the screen after a long absence; Erin O'Brien Moore, now in "His Greatest Gamble"; Betty Furness, currently in "Virgie Winters"; Henry Wadsworth and Doris Lloyd.

The story is told in retrospect. A man is found dead and the motive for his suicide or murder established. One year later all the probable suspects being gathered for a social evening, a radio tube blows out and the presence of the dead man's cigaret case being the occasion, Nagel is suspected by all as the killer and determines to find the real guilty party. His search leads through a complicated chain of undercover romances, jealousies and intrigues and an eventual explanation of the crime. Then, actually jumping back, the story shows what really happened and why, and despite all the explanations made it is demonstrated that half truths are not so bad, after all.

The script calling for action counterbalancing the dialogue, this promises many new exploitation ideas to back up its mystery-drama, romantic atmosphere in renewing interest in the always popular crime story.

A LOST LADY

Warner

As a vehicle for Barbara Stanwyck and those in immediate support, this story looks to be the best that she or they have had in a long time. It's a drama of romance, a love story based on colorful, intriguing conditions and situations that should bring out the best and most pleasing talents of all the principal participants.

"A Lost Lady" is a Pulitzer prize-winning novel by Willa Cather. Undoubtedly it was widely read, particularly by women. The screen play is by Gene Markey, remembered for "Female," "Baby Face" and "Lily Turner" in collaboration with Miss Cather. The maker of "I Loved a Woman," "As the Earth Turns," "The Merry Frinks" and "Housewife," Alfred E. Green, is the director.

Four leading men in support of Miss Stanwyck are Frank Morgan ("Affairs of Cellini"), Ricardo Cortez, Lyle Talbot and Phillip Reed. Others in the cast are Henry Kolker, Rafaelo Ottiano, Hobart Cavanaugh, Edward McWade, Walter Walker, Samuel Hinds, Jameson Thomas and Willie Fung.

The dramatic romantic story tells of a woman whose husband-to-be was shot dead by the mate of a woman with whom he had been carrying on a clandestine affair just before they were to be married. Broken in mind and spirit, she marries a wealthy financial magnate who has befriended her, but more for appreciation of his kindness than real love. Another man comes into her life and tries to sweep her off her feet. Infatuated, but true to her husband, she resists his advances, but rages when he would marry another woman. Later, her husband dying, her erstwhile lover, now divorced, returns thinking that he can begin just where he left off. The woman, knowing the value of real love, sends him away, content in the memories of the man who really loved her.

In title, cast and story values, as well as writing and production credits, there is potential showmanship, the deft application of which should make this picture an unusual popular attraction.

HAPPINESS AHEAD

Warner

In story this is a drama of modern metropolitan life and poor boy, rich girl romance. The original story is by Harry Sauber. Sauber collaborated with Brian Marlow, who did the screen plays on "Crime of the Century" and "Brief Moment." Direction is by Mervyn LeRoy, who made "Golddiggers of 1933," "Tugboat Annie," "Hi, Nellie" and "The World Changes."

Dick Powell has the lead role, somewhat different from any he has been seen in previously. The numbers he will sing, incidental and specialty, are provided by a whole host of Warner music and lyric writers. A new personality, Josephine Hutchinson, makes her screen debut in the leading feminine role. A stage actress of note, she was associated with Eva LaGallienne in many plays. Familiar names compose the remainder of the cast, among them John Halliday, recently in "The Witching Hour" and "Finishing School"; Frank McHugh, currently in Joe E. Brown's "Six Day Hike Rider"; Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly, now appearing in "Housewife"; Dorothy Dare, Russell Hicks, Marjorie Gateson, J. M. Kerrigan and Gavin Gordon.

The story is that of a young lady socialite who, tiring of the whirl, sets out to learn how the other and lower half lives. Concealing her identity, she meets Powell and his friends at a New Year Eve chop suey restaurant party. Attached to the young fellow, she lives in the plane he does. To finance his racketeer-menaced window cleaning business, she inveigles a check from her father. Powell, seeing the act, thinks both are being double crossed, only to have his eyes opened by the girl's father at a yacht sailing party.

In story, cast and colorful production value, the picture appears to have the potential qualities easily adaptable in many showmanship ways to intrigue the attention of the young moderns as well as the rank and file of theatre goers.

Hecht and MacArthur Finish Second Production Script

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur have completed the script for their second film production for Paramount, to be made at the Eastern Service Studios in Astoria, Long Island. The picture will go into work in two weeks.

The film has a Russian revolution background and will feature Jimmy Savo, well known stage comedian. The first picture produced by the authors, "Crime Without Passion," is in the final stage of editing.

Sign Zeidman for Four More

With two more pictures yet to complete as an independent producer for Universal, B. F. Zeidman has been signed to a new contract for four more pictures to be produced with outside capital.

Second Monogram Dividend

Monogram Pictures was to pay a second dividend of one and one-fourth per cent this week. The first dividend, of like amount, was paid May 15.

Editor Challenges Decency Advocates To See "Rothschild"

E. P. Chase, editor and publisher of the Atlantic News-Telegraph, daily newspaper published in Atlantic, Iowa, and winner of the Pulitzer Prize for the best editorial of 1933, was one of the chief factors in the beneficial exploitation of 20th Century's "The House of Rothschild," when that picture opened at the Iowa theatre in Atlantic.

In a two-column editorial article, Mr. Chase urged those in the territory who believed in the intrinsic value of motion pictures to indicate to the local theatre their approval of better pictures and demonstrate that approval by their patronage. Mr. Chase's editorial, headed "Here's a Chance," read in part as follows:

"On Sunday and Monday the Iowa Theatre in this city presents one of the truly great motion picture features of recent years—George Arliss in 'The House of Rothschild.' The writer has seen this picture and cheerfully goes on record as saying that it is one of the best pictures ever made and that the genius and art of Arliss never showed to a better advantage and never had a more admirable vehicle.

"In the discussion of 'cleaning up' the movies those in the exhibiting end of the movie business invariably say, with truth, that the public does not react to the really meritorious pictures and accords such features but desultory patronage, while packing the houses when a picture with a salacious motif is shown. Here is an opportunity for people in this territory who believe in clean motion pictures to indicate to the local theatre their approval of better pictures and demonstrate that approval by their patronage."

George W. Hill, Director, Dies

George W. Hill, 39, one of the best known of Hollywood directors, was found dead at his beach home near Hollywood last week with a bullet in his head. Authorities reported the case as suicide. At his own request, the remains were cremated.

The former husband of Frances Marion, scenarist, was a veteran cameraman before becoming a director. In 1924 he joined MGM, and among the pictures he directed for that company were "Min and Bill," with Marie Dressler; "Hell Divers" and "The Big House."

At the time of his death he was directing "The Good Earth," having returned recently from China where he had been shooting exteriors.

He is survived by his parents and a brother.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 236.—(A) How would you add 1/2 and 3/4? (B) How would you divide 3/4 by 1/2? How would you multiply 5/8 by 7/16? (Note: In making calculations the projectionist frequently must add, divide or multiply fractions; I therefore ask these questions.) (C) How would you add .65 and 7/16, or multiply them or divide one by the other? (D) How would you calculate voltage drop in any copper circuit? Ordinary commercial copper is assumed, of course. (E) How would you proceed to calculate increase in resistance caused by a known increase in temperature?

Answer to Question No. 230

Blue Book School Question No. 230 was: (A) Just what is meant by diverging or converging light beam? (B) Could there be a diverging or converging light ray? (C) Define "ray," "beam," "picture light," "definition" as applied to projection, "soft focus," "specular" as applied to screen, "diffusing" as applied to screens, "double convex," "meniscus," "flatness of field," "glare spot." (D) Why is it desirable that correct terms be used by projectionists and others? (E) What body is authoritative in selecting terms and titles for use in the projection field?

The following made good: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Doe; D. Danielson; R. J. Arntson; H. Edwards; J. Wentworth; L. O'Melia; T. Van Vaulkenburg; L. Cimikoski; C. Oldham; B. Doe; F. H. Klar, L. Klar and T. H. Morton; D. L. Sinklow; T. T. Golley; O. Allbright; G Johnson and L. R. Spooner; B. R. Walker and M. Walker; M. F. Fallon; R. and K. Wells; G. R. Squires; L. M. Richards; D. Monehan and L. B. Bryant; D. U. Danielson; D. U. Granger; P. and L. Felt; B. R. Mills and N. Prane; G. Lathrope and N. L. Tomlinson; B. True and S. True; L. Thomas and D. D. Davis; L. U. Gensen; S. Spooner and B. H. Thaller; B. L. Donald and F. Y. Gradley, D. H. and L. B. Palmer; F. H. Dalber, S. Dalbey and P. Dalbey; F. Simms and O. L. Daris; P. F. Michaelson; M. Spencer and D. T. Arlen; P. P. Solomon and L. Samuels; K. Y. Spencer, B. H. Sanders, J. Gensen and D. L. Lode; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; L. R. O'Leary and G. T. Sampson; P. Itt; G. Howard and T. K. Aldridge; H. R. Baldwin; M. and J. DeVoy; D. Howard and J. Jurts; M. U. Sampson; J. Hendershot; M. and S. T. Gibson; L. Grant and R. Geddings; L. N. Haynes and A. Richardson; B. W. Williams and H. Daniels; M. Henderson and K. L. Knight; F. L. Savior and G. N. Guidetti; B. Samuels and G. J. Donlas; A. L. Dodson and F. L. Benton; Nic Granby; R. D. Oberleigh and B. Lansing; J. G. Danielson; F. E. Gates; H. T. Johnson and G. L. Hennessy.

(A) S. Evans and C. Rau say: "A diverging beam is one in which the rays travel away from the optical axis of the beam. A converging beam is such when the rays composing same travel toward the optical axis of the beam."

R. J. Arntson says: "A diverging beam is one in which the area of the beam increases with increased distance from the point of issuance. A converging beam of light is such when the area of the beam decreases with distance from the source that causes it to converge. If uninterrupted the rays of such a beam will finally cross, whereupon a diverging beam will go forward."

(B) D. Danielson says: "No! A light ray is defined as the smallest possible division of a beam or pencil of light. It then follows that a ray of light could not alter in dimensions, else it would no longer be a 'ray.' A ray is a straight line."

(C) Evans and Rau say: "A 'ray' is a thin line of light having no apparent cross-section. A beam of light is a bundle of rays, or a pencil or line of light of greater area than a single ray. Picture light is the light that carries the screen image to the screen. Definition is a term applying to the sharpness of focus of the screen image. Soft focus occurs when the picture is purposely slightly out of focus in order to impart an artistic touch. Specular pertains to screen surfaces, meaning a surface highly reflective through narrow angles. Diffusion occurs when light is reflected through wide angles by an unpolished surface. Double convex means a lens having both surfaces curved outward. A plano-convex lens is one having one convex and one flat surface. A meniscus lens is crescent-shaped, having one concave and one convex surface, the convex exceeding the concave curve. Flatness of field occurs when a projection lens is able to project a screen image having perfect sharpness of definition at all points of its area. [A thing never fully accomplished, I believe.—F. H. R.] Glare spots are spots of light located within range of vision which either detract from the picture values or are annoying to the eye of the observer. By over-illumination such glare spots may occur on the screen itself."

(D) J. Hendershot says: "Without doubt there should be some standard in nomenclature as applies to terms used in professional projection. Lack of such standardization makes for confusion. Standardization of terms makes for ease of communication, both orally and in writing. It is extremely confusing to hear two men speak of the same thing, each calling it by a different name. Our Dad Richardson has done much to clear up and straighten out projection nomenclature, but there still is much to do. There can be no real argument in support of using different terms for the same thing."

(E) L. O'Melia says: "The authoritative body in the matter of selection of terms and titles for use, at least, in so far as applies to the projection field, is the Society of Motion Picture Engineers," which opinion is concurred in by all who have answered the question. However, much to my surprise, a goodly number confessed they did not know!

NOT AUTHORIZED TO SELL BLUEBOOK

Projectionists in the field are seeking the whereabouts of a man who without authorization represents himself as a sales representative of F. H. Richardson's forthcoming sixth edition of the Bluebook of Projection. Projectionists are told by the solicitor that a special price for the new edition is offered by submitting a page from each of the previous editions.

The sixth edition of the Bluebook is not yet ready for distribution. Notification will be made in Motion Picture Herald when it is off the presses. Orders should be placed only direct with Quigley Publishing Company, 1790 Broadway, New York, or with the local supply dealer.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Neligh, Nebraska

DEAR HERALD:

We see that the Dillinger family is to appear on the stage in vaudeville. Just why the public would want to see the Dillinger family is more than we can understand, since they are no different from thousands of other families and probably are not known outside of their own neighborhood except through the murderous conduct of their son, and to try to commercialize upon that notorious conduct is too abhorrent to think of.

It is a wonder that that vaudeville company didn't try to commercialize upon the dead body of the gangster, and that company should receive the condemnation of all people outside of the penitentiary. It is to be hoped that Hollywood will not degrade herself by allowing this family to appear on their screens simply because of the notoriety of a murderer. The public is trying to forget the name of Dillinger.

Those Trees

Somebody has had another pipe dream. We are told of a movement in Washington for the planting of a belt of timber 1,000 miles long by 100 miles wide through the states of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, under the assumption that this belt of timber will save the corn belt from becoming arid. This sounds a whole lot like Washington.

Trees don't give off moisture, and moisture is what produces rain, and rain produces crops, so why not find something that will produce moisture. Somebody will have to pay for a whole lot of land in a strip 1,000 miles long by 100 miles wide; somebody will have to cultivate them; somebody will have to hire an army of fire wardens to protect them against fire; somebody failed to figure that it will be at least 40 years before these trees will be of any use; somebody hasn't figured out the expense of this project; somebody don't know that it will take hundreds of millions of dollars to carry this project through; somebody hasn't been informed that there are some brains outside of Washington; somebody ought to consult the "brain trust."

If the government will send men up to the upper end of the Mississippi Valley with instructions to plug up all the drainage ditches that are draining the lakes, reservoirs and marshes into the rivers, and conserve the water reservoirs as the good Lord planned, then send them into the lake region of western Nebraska to do the same thing, they will be doing something constructive, for bodies of water evaporate into moisture and moisture produces rain and rain produces crops and crops are what we want. We wonder if anybody ever thought of that before.

We have pushed our boat through the rushes and shot ducks and geese on the lakes in western Nebraska that have since been drained out and nothing is left but a bed of dry sand. These lakes evaporated into moisture and moisture produced rain, and rain saved the crops from dying, but the drainage went on and the Government spent untold millions in building levees and dikes to take care of the flood waters of the lower Mississippi while the dredges were making an arid country of Uncle Sam's breadbasket north of the cotton belt. If anybody should tell you that the damphools are all in Congress, don't you believe it, there are a few of us outside yet, but listen, Charlie, trees don't produce rain, regardless of what Congress or any other citizen thinks about it. A theory is all right if it works, but how many of them are there that will work? Most theories are so lazy that they don't enjoy good health.

Most Distressing

We see by the HERALD that Mr. Rosenblatt rolled up his pants and waded right into the picture salaries out in Hollywood, and from his report, he found that salaries ranged from $273,596 a year down to cakes and coffee for the powder monkeys.

It was very distressing to learn that some of the exccutives will have to try and struggle along on $273,596 during these depressing times.

If Mr. Rosenblatt wants to learn something more about the business, he should investigate something like ten thousand exhibitors (provided he considers them a part of the industry) and if he does he will find a great majority of them wondering if their families can get along on icicles the coming winter while they are struggling to keep their theatres open and pay running expenses.

We are a strong believer in investigations. We investigated a girl one time (when we were young and foolish) and we found out that she had a glass eye, had a bunion on her right foot and a spavin on her left, and had a wart on the back of her neck and three teeth were gone. We asked her what she thought of our shape and she replied to us in Swedish (which sounded a whole lot like profanity), and on Sunday evenings from then on her front porch was not included in our itinerary. Yes, Percy, we are strong for investigations, even though they seldom amount to anything.

The other night the Moon Theatre here played "Twenty Million Sweethearts." We didn't go to see it, but we sent our wife as an ambassador and the official mouthpiece of the family. She reported the picture as very good, and when she reports anything as "very good" we accept that verdict without further argument. We didn't go to see the picture because we figured that "Twenty Million Sweethearts" were rather too many sweethearts for a man of our age.

Jaysee, Baseball Expert

Speaking of American Legion baseball. We doubt if we would mention the matter at all in an amusement magazine except for the fact that baseball is one branch of public entertainment the same as the stage, the screen or any other branch of amusement.

We have made a study of the American Legion Junior baseball rules and we have watched the playing of the various teams under these rules, and we give it as our opinion that there has been nothing that has been so helpful and instructive to the boys of the country as this junior baseball, except, possibly, the Boy Scouts.

If the rules as laid down by the Legion for the guidance of these boys are adhered to, as they should be, it is bound to make for better citizenship, and if we ever needed better citizenship in this country it is right now. But speaking of American Legion Junior baseball leagues brings us right down to this little cross-roads cow town on the Elkhorn River (where everybody else ought to be brought, too) and where we have as fine an amusement park as there is in Nebraska.

The Legion here has a baseball team, and this team has won the state championship twice and been runner-up once out of three tries, and yesterday they won the state championship again from Beatrice, making the fourth time, and if any of you boys heard somebody yelling you will know that we went down to see the game.

The success of this team depends largely upon the ability of Harold Cole, the coach, to select the players and train them. They are not allowed to swear, smoke, drink, argue with the umpires or to act in any way other than gentlemen, and this entire community would sooner see them play one game than to see the World Series, because there they play for money while here they play for glory.

Some people call us crazy at these Legion ball games and others call us crazy all the time, but we sure do enjoy seeing clean sport, no matter what it is, and Neligh has the most gentlemanly baseball team on earth, and we don't care what earth it is either or where it comes from, and if we don't stop right now Ernie will call us crazy, too.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

Chesterfield

STOLEN SWEETS: Sally Blane—I played this with the last fight picture to fair Sunday business. The recording on this is not too good, but the picture is a clever and pleasing comedy. Played July 29-30.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

Columbia

ABOVE THE CLOUDS: Richard Cromwell—Played this on Bargain Days to a very satisfactory business. Played July 10-11.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

BLACK MOON: Jack Holt—I was almost tempted to put this on the shelf from reports, but played on Friday and Saturday to the largest business in months. It seemed to be the "Black Moon" that brought them in fast and furious.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Tim McCoy—An average action picture. O. K. for small towns as a Saturday showing. Played July 7.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING CODE, THE: Buck Jones—A good western above the average. Played July 21.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD THE PRESS: Tim McCoy, Shirley Grey—This is a very good action picture featuring the popular western star, Tim McCoy, in a different role. This is a newspaper-gangster story and is full of action, thrills and fighting. This presents McCoy at his best in one of his best pictures to date. Although this is not a western picture, it will please all western fans and especially the kids. Played one day to good business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 28. —J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. Country patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable—What I could say would add nothing to what has already been said about this, the best all around picture release this year. Played July 1-2.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—One of the best pictures we have ever played. It simply cannot fail to please. The only Monday-Tuesday picture we ever played that built up business on Tuesday night.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House Theatre, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

LET'S FALL IN LOVE: Edmund Lowe, Ann Sothern—About 60 per cent will like this; the other 40 per cent won't. Played July 19-20.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

NO GREATER GLORY: George Breakston, Frankie Darro—Although lots of our exhibitors have given this a very black eye we found it a very wonderful play. The lesson that it taught was great. Wish our movie fans would just show half as much interest in the shows as the boy who wanted to be back with the gang when the big fight occurred. Be no need of advertising. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 7-8.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN: Fay Wray—An average program picture. I am still wondering why they gave this picture the title they did. I failed to get the connection. Played July 12-13.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

SISTERS UNDER THE SKIN: Elissa Landi—This is one terrible show. Nothing good about it. Recording very bad. Story much off. Not much to the acting or direction. So terrible I pulled the show after one day's showing. Running time, 68 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila., Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

WHAT PRICE INNOCENCE?: Jean Parker—Used this in place of "Man's Castle." About three times a year I really get enthusiastic about a show. Well, this is one of the trio that I will rave about this year. It's a year old but what of it? If you haven't used it, date it at once and show your patrons one of the best entertainments and moral lessons they have ever had thrust at them.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

First Division

FORGOTTEN MEN: War film—Truly a great war picture, if your customers want real war this will satisfy them, however it did not seem to draw for us. Played July 19-20-21.—L. H. Mills, Dixie Theatre, Oline Hill, Ky. Small town and brick manufacturing patronage.

First National

BIG SHAKEDOWN: Bette Davis, Charles Farrell—Just another picture to open a double feature program with average programmer. Played July 18-19.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

CIRCUS CLOWN, THE: Joe E. Brown—The best box-office picture from this star in three years. The trailer and circus bills helped this one plenty. Put it on your best days.—Warren L. Weber, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell—Another musical—hot weather—poor business. Played July 17-18.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

FOG OVER FRISCO: Bette Davis, Margaret Lindsay—This is a splendid picture. Every sequence is filled with fast and interesting action. Every one liked it and it is a sure fire repeater. Plenty good. Excellent business. Played Aug. 3-4.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. General patronage.

MANDALAY: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez—A fairly good program picture but no extra draw above average business. With all the Legion of Decency campaigns in full blast this is no picture to give to the public. The theme of this story is one of the reasons for the clean-up campaign. Played July 11-12. —R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

MAN WITH TWO FACES, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A good picture. Edward G. takes a double part in this one and does a nice job with his French accent. Play this one up. It will do you good. "Screwy ending." Played Aug. 1-2.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town patronage.

MERRY FRINKS, THE: Aline MacMahon—The reviewer who called this a howling success was right, only the cast does all the howling. If you like to hear eight people see who can talk the loudest, here is your picture. A picture like this hurts you for weeks after.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT ALIBI: Richard Barthelmess—What a pretty little picture this is. Good all around entertainment. The "Old Doll" nearly steals the show. Every one liked it. Good comment. Excellent business. Played July 29-30-31.—Earl J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Small town patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—Splendid comedy. We ran this old but it surely pleased. Average drawing power. Played July 22-23.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers—A very fine and pleasing picture. Powell and Rogers seemed to be at their best in this one. Very good. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 3-4.—A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers—What a show. This drew them in and how they did like it. Quite a few of my patrons expressed themselves as thinking it better than "Wonder Bar." Played July 15-16.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell—Here is a honey. It has everything that it takes for entertainment. The four Mills Brothers alone worth the price and Ginger Rogers is a better actress, better looking and just as much draw as any star I can think of. Nice torch voice and knows how to put it over.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson—And still another musical, produced of course on a magnificent scale. I gathered from my patrons that they liked all of it but Al Jolson and his smutty wisecracks. I played it on the two hottest nights of the century to slim business. Played July 24-25.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town business.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson, Dick Powell, Kay Francis—After using this one we have come to the conclusion that the musical picture cycle has about played its time, This is one of the socalled Colossal, Gigantic, Stupendous, etc., that did not do the average business of a western. Understand, the picture is a very good one, and great entertainment, but try and get them in to see it. Played July 15-16-17.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson, Dick Powell—One of the Warner Brothers specials which is a very big musical and which will bring you extra business. We played it during this hot weather and did not do so well. The scene "Going to Heavon on a Mule" is very good. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 22-23.—K. C. Preston, Lyris Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town and country patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson—Played this picture rather late. However it still did a little business. Not in class with "42nd Street" or "Gold Diggers." Played July 19-20-21.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small city patronage.

Freuler Film

WHEN A MAN RIDES ALONE: Tom Tyler—This is a good little western and will please your Saturday crowd. Played July 14.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

Fox

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple—Better than "Little Miss Marker." Too much can't be said for this one. Go after it in a big way. Good on any day of the week. Will draw entire family, old and young. Shirley lovable kid and can she act. Pleased audience one hundred per cent. Will pack 'em in any place. Business over capacity. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 29-30-31.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

BABY TAKE A BOW: Shirley Temple—Very good. Clean, wholesale entertainment for all the family. What a drawing star this cute kid turned out to be. More with this kid next season. Running time, 75 minutes. Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila., Penna. Neighborhood patronage.

BOTTOMS UP: Spencer Tracy, "Pat" Paterson—A very pleasing comedy-drama with music. Business average. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 20-21.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—Did a nice business with this but, like all other Fox shows the recording is not up to par. I wonder if the other exhibitors find Fox a little hazy on recording. Comments on this were satisfactory.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore—The sweetest picture in a century. I always did think it was possible to make a good picture and still leave sex and an assortment of legs out of it. Played April 20-21.—Rudolph J. Covi, Covi's Theatre, Hermine, Pa. Town and country patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S COURAGE: Warner Oland—Good show; this is the best of the Chan series. Contains plenty mystery and action. Good for Friday-Saturday business. Much better than previous Chan pictures. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 6-7. —W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General Patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—It still pleases the folks in its return engagement. Played July 24-25.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—This is one of the cleanest and best pictures of the year. Will Rogers at his best as the banker-horse-trader makes this excellent entertainment for the whole family and should draw an unusually large business. Wherever Rogers is liked, this is sure to do the business. It is a little old but we played two days to a very good business and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 30-31.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—Another good one from Will. The middle aged and the older will all agree that this is his best picture. Played July 22-23.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—Can only verify what most exhibitors have said before me, that this picture is a sweetheart. Pleased everybody and made a little money, which is most unusual these days.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House Theatre, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: George O'Brien—Not an action picture but pretty good program picture. Poor business but played this during our hottest spell in years. Mary Brian is good. Good cast. Played July 27-28.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn, Claire Trevor—Very good Family Night program picture. Everybody satisfied. Average receipts. Played July 28.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

I AM SUZANNE: Lilian Harvey—Very good novelty show. We had read complaints about the length so watched our audience carefully to see how it went over here. The marionettes were marvelous and people really enjoyed the show. It didn't seem long to those watching it but it was ten minutes longer than we had planned on according to running time listed, which was 85 minutes. The print we received ran 95 minutes. This time element was very important to us on this particular show. Oh well. Played July 3-4.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

NOW I'LL TELL: Spencer Tracy—One swell show all the way through. Good enough for any theatre any night. Spencer Tracy great in this one. It won't do any extra business because the title kills it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played Aug. 1-2.—W. A Collins, New Regal, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Lew Ayres, Alice Faye—Not a smash but it is full of clean fun. Lots of laughs, comedy, action and romance. Mitchell and Durant work hard for comedy and bring good results. Audience reaction great. Business good. Run play on any day of the week. Will please any audience. Running time. 76 minutes. Played July 4-5.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS: Alice Faye, Lew Ayres—What an entertaining picture this is. The name is quite misleading but the entertainment is clean. Alice Faye is coming up quite big. Why don't Fox make more with her. Business good. Running time, 77 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

SLEEPERS EAST: Wynne Gibson. Business poor. Fox makes some of the best pictures and some of the worst. This is terrible. Played July 13-14.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory—Here is one of the best Saturday pictures that I have ever shown in my theatre. Played June 30.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

SPRINGTIME FOR HENRY: Otto Kruger, Nancy Carroll. More walkouts on this than on his last one. Business? There wasn't any. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 31.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

SPRINGTIME FOR HENRY: Otto Kruger, Nancy Carroll—If we had only seen this picture before we played it, we would have paid for it and never have shown it on the screen. It is terrible. Do not play this one. It is certainly one to pass up Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 24-25.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: Warner Baxter, Madge Evans, Shirley Temple, Jimmy Dunn—Fox must have had a scenario that they did not know what to do with so they decided to make it into "Stand Up and Cheer." Looking around they had an actor that they wanted to put on the spot and that was Baxter. They dragged in by the tail everything they had in the studio including a penguin that was made up as Jimmy Durante with Stepin Fetchit that had no rime or reason for being in the show at all. With Durante becoming poison to our audiences they had to bring this in. The only saving grace to this picture was the sketch that Dunn and Shirley Temple put on and the girls that had plenty of pulchritude. Otherwise, and I give the reaction of the audience, it was jumbled up with a lot of stuff that could have been left out. Unskilled direction and confusion was apparent all the way through the show. Two in a row from Fox. "Scandals" and now this.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STAND UP AND CHEER: All Star Musical—Personally thought the musical numbers were excellent but not such a good story. Attendance about the same second night as first, which means something.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

SIX MORE SHOWMEN JOIN CONTRIBUTORS

Bott, Vero Theatre, Vero Beach, Fla.; David Dallas, Paramount Theatre, Borger, Tex.; A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill.; L. H. Mills, Dixie Theatre, Olive Hill, Ky.; Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D., and G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo.

Read their reports in the current issue.

Gaumont British

BE MINE TONIGHT: Jan Kiepura, Magda Schneider—Here is another picture produced in Europe and for a small town exhibitor it's a nightmare. The scenery is beautiful but my patrons could not understand all the singing. It went over their heads. They would not sit through the show. Only one patron, a music teacher, liked it. She said it was grand. If your town is full of music teachers and they will sponsor it, book it for one day, otherwise pass it up. It will save you lots of heartaches.—David Dallas, Paramount Theatre, Borger, Texas. Small town patronage.

MGM

BLONDE BOMBSHELL: Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy—Very poor. Whoever thought Jean Harlow was an actress? She might get by in short scenes but she isn't good enough for a complete show. And Lee Tracy's nasal twang has killed his drawing power here, yelling, screeching and talking practically the entire show and it does get on the nerves. Played July 5-6-7. Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery—Dandy program picture. Average drawing power. Not big but satisfied our patrons. Got lots of good comments. Pleased nearly all. Thrills, action, comedy, and romance. Played July 24-25-26.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies—Good musical. Not much drawing power here but it is splendid entertainment. Played July 29-30.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Bing Crosby, Marion Davies—If you have not played this picture, you have missed a good one. Book it and boost it. You won't be disappointed. Played July 8-9.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

HER SWEETHEART, CHRISTOPHER BEAN: Marie Dressler—Fine show that the masses can enjoy. Pleased nearly all but business above average. Marie Dressler's name means little here unless she is teamed with Beery or Moran. Barrymore's drawing power is practically nothing here. Played July 15-16.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns. Oregon. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez—A very interesting picture. Good small town picture. Pleased. Average business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 8-9.—A. Gasaway, Stand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

LAUGHING BOY: Ramon Novarro—This picture is much too hot for the average small town. Sorry we ever booked it. First MGM picture that caused walkouts. Lowest gross in two years. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 12-13-14.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. C. Small town patronage.

LAZY RIVER: Jean Parker, Robert Young—Swell entertainment for small town. Business slightly above average. Watch this little Jean Parker. She's going places. Running time, 77 minutes. Played July 23-24.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small city patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, William Powell—A very good show with fine story and acting. Lucky to have it booked on these dates as I used Dillinger's last picture in advertising and it brought them out. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 28-29.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—Gave general satisfaction. Well acted and produced. Most too much hospital for real entertainment. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 27-28.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jean Hersholt—Very good picture of its type, and there was some good acting by all the principals. Gable may be the star that pulled but Hersholt dominated the picture from start to finish. What a character actor is this man. He lived the part that he had. Never have we seen a more sincere portrayal of a doctor than Hersholt gave. Elizabeth Allan fine in her role, as also was Myrna Loy. But make no mistake, Hersholt did a nice job of stealing the picture. The cheers of the audience were for him, although Gable was good too in his role.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—Gable in his part was good, so was Myrna Loy. All about hospitals, doctors, nurses. Why you could almost smell the ether. Very, very depressing. Not so good for the present day summer slump and everyone told me the picture ended wrong, so I guess it pleased about 40%. Not even average business. Played July 29-30-31.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable—This is one of those pictures that only MGM can produce. Gable's performance the best. Rest of cast very good. We rate this as one of the best shows of the year. Done a good business and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 75 minutes. Played Aug. 2-3-4.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small city patronage.

MURDER IN THE PRIVATE CAR: Charles Ruggles, Una Merkel—There is not a dull moment in this picture and the comedy is unexpected and pleasing. The runaway car scenes are exciting. The photography merits unusual praise. This picture is far more entertaining than the title might indicate. Our business was less than average, perhaps due to title. Played July 29-31.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

OPERATOR THIRTEEN: Gary Cooper, Marion Davies—A splendid picture well played. Cooper and Davies played their parts well. Pleasing. Did good business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 15-16.—A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Max Baer, Myrna Loy—One of the very best. Good enough for your very best dates. The title kept a few women away, but it did a very satisfactory business. Fine story that pleased both men and women. No complaints and that is something here. Max Baer is fine. Sure hope he makes another picture. He has what it takes to make a real star. Recording terrible in spots but mostly o.k. Myrna Loy's voice much better in this than in "Penthouse." Played July 1-2.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—They came to see Shearer the first night, remembering "Smiling Thru," one of the most successful pictures, but they did not like this one and we ran to one-fourth of a house the second night. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 20-21.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery—A few more like this and the beautiful and talented Norma Shearer will walk in the footsteps of hundreds of other forgotten actors and actresses. Punk story material has ruined many a character. What an awful drop from "Smilin Through" for Norma Shearer. This picture should be great if played in the same country the story is written of. Why must the producers go British in so many pictures. We don't understand that lingo. Why not make it American? That's the language we understand. It may be great for the high brow society, of some big cities, but for the medium and small towns this picture is to them just another picture. One of my lowest grosses of the year. If any small or medium size town makes anything with this picture, please let me know and I'll send you a prize, for you'll deserve it. Played July 20-21.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—Gorgeous clothes and good acting. But, oh, that London accent. Picture not up to Shearer's standard. Average business due to Norma's first in two years. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 26-27-28.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small city patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—Best Crawford picture for some time, and pleased my patrons. It has a good plot and that is half of a show but the acting is very good and just enough music to make it a fine picture. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 21-22.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford—This picture had plenty of names to sell, Tone, Raymond, Vina Delmar as well as the one and only Crawford. I liked Edward Arnold in this picture. His part was very much natural. Not many flaws in this one. Business fair or a little better. Running time, 92 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila., Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

SADIE McKEE: Joan Crawford—Some liked it, some did not. Personally thought it a good show but no draw like the previous Crawford pictures. Edward Arnold stole the picture in his drunken role. Gene Raymond had everyone wondering if he was going to forget the words to the song he was singing, his part very bad.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

SHOW-OFF, THE: Spencer Tracy—Not an outstanding picture according to the dope, but fair enough. I've seen worse. Then too Madge Evans was in it and as far as I'm concerned that's all I want to see. Running time, 81 minutes. Played August 3-4.—Rudolph J. Covi, Covi's Theatre, Hermine, Pa. Town and country patronage.

SONS OF THE DESERT: Laurel and Hardy—Not much drawing power but the show was fine. Got lots of laughs. Lots of people do not like this kind of comedy. They think this pair silly and you couldn't possibly drag these people in. But for those that like these comedians at all, it will surely please and then some. Played July 29-30. —Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—It's a thriller and will please that class of patrons who like 'em wild. More noise than "All Quiet on the Western Front." MGM put in everything they could think of to make it a thriller. Played July 22-23.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—This is a 100% "goofy" picture. One feels that about 90% of it is faked, but the faking is for the most part mighty well done. But they will come to see it in droves and we must have some pictures that will do business or quit the game. Running time, 81 minutes. Played August 3-4.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community.

THIN MAN, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—An excellent William Powell story for your very best days. We played this picture on a Sunday-Monday date and it held up better than other pictures have been doing. William Powell is certainly gaining in popularity in our town, Myrna Loy likewise. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 15-16.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

THIN MAN, THE: Myrna Loy, William Powell—A very clever detective story, well acted and directed. Should go over anywhere. This type of picture is liked. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 27-28. —J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery—A good Saturday picture with plenty of action and noise. It failed to draw the women but the kiddies thought it great. Running time, 110 minutes. Played July 14-15.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

WOMEN IN HIS LIFE: Otto Kruger—Fair program picture. Rather depressing and sordid in spots. Receipts fell to practically nothing the last night. There is some fine acting by Otto Kruger, and Una Merkel can always be depended on for some good laughs. Played July 26-27-28.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BLUE STEEL: John Wayne—This is a very good western picture of the Monogram Lone Star productions with the popular John Wayne as the hero and star. It is full of action, thrills, fighting and fast moving. A small western town in the mountains is the center of the action and the mountain scenery adds much to the entertainment. Wayne is one of the best western stars and draws good. Running time, 54 minutes. Played August 4.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LUCKY TEXAN, THE: John Wayne—A very interesting western from Monogram. Once you get John Wayne started he has a good following and this one held up to a good average business. Played July 20-21.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

LUCKY TEXAN, THE: John Wayne—Make no mistake, these are good as any western on the market. Have played three of them and they are better box-office on one night stands than many of the socalled stars pull in, in two or three nights. At least they are clean and have something doing in them.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

MANHATTAN LOVE SONG: Robert Armstrong, Dixie Lee—One of the best pictures Monogram has turned out this year. Dixie Lee is especially good. Don't be afraid to boost this one. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 24-25.—W. B. Floyd, Vero Theatre, Vero Beach, Fla. Small town patronage.

WOMAN'S MAN: John Halliday—Just a program picture that will get by. Played July 3-4.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

BIG EXECUTIVE: Ricardo Cortez—Nothing to write home about, just another program picture that got by on a family night, with another picture. Played July 11-12.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft—Fair program picture. Some good music, the dances being the best part of the picture. Raft not a drawing card for us. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 5-6-7.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small city patronage.

COME ON, MARINES: Richard Arlen—Very good comedy action picture that will make them laugh their heads off. Real old fashioned marine slang. The children that the marines came to save turned out to be a bunch of full grown beauties all swimming in a pool with a little bit more on than birthday clothes, but pleased 90%. Played July 27-28.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

COME ON, MARINES: Richard Arlen—A dandy picture for your action night or nights and one with plenty of comedy. We played the picture on Saturday and it pleased our Saturday crowd. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 28.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

COME ON, MARINES: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino —A good program picture that pleased about 75%. Business average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played August 1-2.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

COME ON, MARINES: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino —A very nice show, has comedy aplenty as well as action and is a picture that will please any audience. Mine all liked it. However, if your town is all stirred up over decency pictures don't invite the minister to come and see it. It does not have any suggestive dialogue or scenes, but it does have a lot of good looking girls running around in their scanties, so judge it by how hard shelled your critics are. Played August 2.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DOUBLE DOOR: Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor—Mystery play but nothing to it. It was spooky in places but was interesting most of the time. Our patrons did not like it and the ticket receipts showed it too. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 26-27. —William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

DOUBLE DOOR: Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable—Just fair horror picture that barely got film rental. Played July 24-25.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

ELMER AND ELSIE: George Bancroft, Frances Fuller—Very weak. Not much to this one. George Bancroft miscast. Poor story. Did not draw. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 27-28.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

GOOD DAME: Frederic March—Very poor. Why is Sylvia Sidney placed in romantic parts? We have heard more criticism of her than almost anyone else on the screen. Business on this was very poor and the few who saw it left dissatisfied. Played July 17-18-19.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

GREAT FLIRTATION, THE: Elissa Landi, Adolphe Menjou—There must be a reason for such pictures, but it doesn't come from the small towns. Elissa Landi nice to look at, but I have not yet seen her in a picture that seemed to suit her. Would suggest you see it before dating. Played July 28.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

GREAT FLIRTATION, THE: Elissa Landi, Adolphe Menjou—Just another program picture. Too much foreign accent, which our people don't care for. Running time, 71 minutes. Played August 3-4.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

KISS AND MAKE UP: Cary Grant, Genevieve Tobin—Not much to this one. Personally did not care for it. No comments from audience. Did big business three days but attribute draw to Baer-Carnera fight picture. Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 8-9.—W. A. Collins, New Regal, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

LADIES SHOULD LISTEN: Cary Grant—Poor send-off for Paramount's new season. Trying to make a comedian of Cary Grant won't go over. On the same order as "Kiss and Make Up" and just about as bad. Silly. Nothing to it. Business way off. Played two-reel Dillinger with this but did not draw. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Aug. 5-6-7.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS MARKER: Shirley Temple, Dorothy Dell, Adolphe Menjou—Very good, and the much tooted young star Shirley measured up to her reputation. The picture was well liked, but when you think of a star who by her work in the picture promised to go far and that is Dorothy Dell who met such a tragic death, there is a kind of creepy feeling to see her so alive in this picture, and know that she will never be seen again. Many of our audience expressed the same reaction and their regrets. Paramount in this picture has given something for Fox to shoot at for their young star that is getting more money than most of us have seen for some time. This I know that "Baby Take a Bow" is not the picture that this one is.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Second highest mid-week gross for 1934 on this. Pleased nearly 100 per cent. What more can one ask for?—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Burns and Allen, Lombardo orchestra—Gracie really runs wild in this one. And if your patrons like her this one will tickle 'em plenty. Some nice music and three good vaudeville acts. A good hot weather show. Played July 23-24-25-26-27.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS: Burns and Allen—Only a program picture without much pull. Burns and Allen are okay for small bits, but an hour of them is too much annoyance. Some of my patrons said "Never Again." Lombardo and his music are okay but no hit tunes.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—A very pleasing little program picture with some swell singing by Lanny Ross. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 30-31.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Jack Oakie, Victor McLaglen—Not so hot. Patrons did not care so much for it. Running time. 89 minutes. Played July 1-2.—A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Carl Brisson, Jack Oakie—This is a story of murder committed and solved behind the scenes while a Broadway show is going on. Audience interest is held to the very last in solving the murder. And the several numbers of the show are exceptionally good. Put this on your best days and you will not be disappointed. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 19-20.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Kent Taylor—I picked this old western for a Saturday date and it made good. Played August 3-4.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Good entertainment. Better than average drawing power. Played July 31-Aug. 1-2.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

OLD-FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields—This is W. C. Fields' best and is full of good clean comedy and will please any audience who enjoy comedy. Did not do any extra business possibly due to poor title. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 22-23-24.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

OLD-FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields—Very funny. Fields sure played the part and the picture was pleasing to all. A good small town picture. Played July 24-25.—A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

OLD-FASHIONED WAY, THE: W. C. Fields—Very good. Just one laugh after another. Fields just suited his part. What's the matter with the exhibitors of New England that they do not send in any reports?—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House Theatre, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON: Gary Cooper, Fay Wray—I picked up this old one to replace "Eight Girls in a Boat," which I figured too hot for my public. Part of the audience liked "One Sunday Afternoon," part of them thought it too slow. Played August 5-6.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE SCANDAL: Mary Brian, Phillips Holmes—It was hot these two nights or we would have done better. This play is a laugh riot. Ned Sparks is the one who holds the limelight. Running time, 65 minutes. Played 17-18.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

SHE MADE HER BED: Sally Eilers, Richard Arlen—What I would call a darn good entertainment. Nothing sophisticated or hard to get—an all around small town entertainment. Comedy, thrills, romance and all in about the right proportion. You don't have to worry about this one.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie, Dorothy Dell—Some will like while others will dislike. Good cast work hard but get no place in an ordinary program picture. Drew no extra business. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 15-16-17.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

SHOOT THE WORKS: Jack Oakie, Ben Bernie—Not good, not bad, just fair to middling. Can be used on family night okay.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House Theatre, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: Burns and Allen, W. C. Fields, Charles Ruggles, Allison Skipworth—A natural for laughs, this is a very, very good comedy and what a cast. This picture will fit in good for any theatre for the middle of the week. I only wish I could get my hands on about five more pictures for the coming year with this same cast in them. Pleased 100% on a family night. Played July 25-26.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: Charlie Ruggles—One of the best comedies. W. C. Fields' scenes are masterpieces. Average drawing power. Pleased nearly all but had a few walkouts. Played July 10-11-12.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant—Fair play. Cary Grant's superb acting is what makes this play a hit. Sylvia Sidney was good but not as good as she usually is. Running time, 73 minutes. Played July 14-15.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney—A good program picture played at the beginning of the week and it sure was a great help. Sylvia Sidney takes a very good part as does the rest of the cast. Business fair. Running time, 74 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila., Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby, Carole Lombard—It was hot when we had this play so that is the reason we only did average business. Good play and wonderful singing in it. Several song hits which your patrons will enjoy. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby—Good program picture but not a special. There are some good scenes but story is poor. Bing Crosby is fine but he is being killed at the box-office by too many pictures and too many comedies. Average drawing power. Played July 8-9.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

WHARF ANGEL: Victor McLaglen, Dorothy Dell—Here is a good play. I can see nothing that the Catholics wish to condemn in this story. McLaglen is the leading player and holds the limelight through the play. Running time, 62½ minutes. Played July 10-11.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

WITCHING HOUR, THE: Judith Allen, Tom Brown—A rather weak picture of the mystery type that has the hypnotism theme worked into it. One day is all it will hold up. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 17-18.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO

CHANCE AT HEAVEN: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—Here is one sweet little picture that will satisfy in most any spot. Played July 5-6.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

CHEYENNE KID: Tom Keene—Just another western that has nothing to distinguish it from a thousand others. Played July 26.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COME ON DANGER: Tom Keene—This is rather old Tom Keene Western which we played on Saturday and which pleased our Saturday crowd. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 21.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town and rural patronage.

CRIME DOCTOR: Otto Kruger—A dandy mystery drama. Kept everyhody in suspense. The surprise ending was worth admission alone. Running time 74 minutes. Played July 9-10.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D.

FLYING DEVILS: Arline Judge, Bruce Cabot—I dug this one up for my July 4th show and it is plenty old but no one had heard about it so they didn't know it was a last year's show. A year ago on the 4th I used a comparatively new show and a very good one but it didn't get rental film. "Flying Devils" gave me almost three times the gross I had hoped for and is an ideal small town action show. The trailer service company gave me a miss-out on this one so didn't have even the usual advertising on this. It is the sort of thing that keeps us in the show business.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio—Strange as it seems, this did not click here. I have to go on record as being the only exhibitor to give this an unfavorable report. Little comment either way but what criticism there was, was almost entirely adverse. Personally I can't see why this drew so many excellent reports. We actually had walk-outs on it.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY!: Wheeler and Woolsey—Less wisecracks in this. More of a stunt show. I thought "Diplomaniacs" would about finish this pair here but very much the contrary, for we had the third highest gross of the year. Suggestive to a slight extent but that kind of stuff gets over o.k. in a comedy.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS: Ann Harding, John Boles—Very good picture. Acting by Harding and Boles excellent. The ladies went for this picture in a big way. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 15-16.—W. B. Floyd, Vero Theatre, Vero Beach, Fla. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF VERGIE WINTERS: Ann Harding—Picture was well received, especially by the ladies. Nice piece of acting by Ann Harding. Average draw. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 30-31.—Esther Schaber, Strand Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small city patronage.

LOST PATROL, THE: Victor McLaglen—A very powerful picture that held everyone spellbound. Saturday business just so-so. Played July 27-28.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

LOST PATROL, THE: Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff—This is only a fair picture. It is 100% talking, but the action is missing. It is a drama of the desert without a woman in the entire cast. Practically the entire show is confined to one locale, a small oasis in the desert. This is a picture for the men, and if the ladies see it, they will not like it. Played one day to average business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 3.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

MURDER ON THE BLACKBOARD: Edna May Oliver, James Gleason—Just fair. A close runnerup for "Penguin Pool Murder," made by the same stars. Bars of music used for the murder theme on the blackboard in this one was the only difference, with Oliver, the smart school-teacher detective, too much to type like the Pitts and Summerville pictures from Universal.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. Small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—Good play. Katharine Hepburn was certainly good in this play. The role fit her perfect. The play was good. It took place in the hills with Katharine Hepburn playing the role of a poor man's daughter. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 21-22.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—A good picture and one that drew well in our town. We played it on our best nights and the second night was about as good as the first. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 26-27.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—Played this a little old but it is a mighty fine picture. Hepburn's acting is very good, in fact much better than in "Little Women." Was well liked and I think will please any audience and good for Sunday, a clean picture. Played July 29.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SON OF THE BORDER: Tom Keene—Good western. Plenty of action. Will please most anyone who wants to be entertained. Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 3-4.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

STRICTLY DYNAMITE: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez—Terrible. The worst thing Durante has ever been in. Lupe Velez sillier than ever. Mills Brothers sang one song that was fairly good. Small patronage on the first night, nothing at all on the second night. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 26-27.—W. B. Floyd, Vero Theatre, Vero Beach, Fla. Small town patronage.

STRICTLY DYNAMITE: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez—No doubt but what it is a good Durante picture, if your puhlic likes Durante. But mine don't and I do not think there are very many that do, it is not the type of comedy the general public likes. He lays it on too thick. Mills Brothers does not mean much in the billing as they only sing two numbers in the first reel. I think a little Durante with a good cast and story would make a great picture but he is not strong enough to hold up a show alone. Played August 5.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

THIS MAN IS MINE: Irene Dunne, Ralph Bellamy—Excellent entertainment for adults. The entire cast give natural and convincing performances and our patrons were enthusiastic in their praises. Average receipts. Played July 26-27.—M. R. Williams, Texon Theatre, Texon, Texas. Small town patronage.

TWO ALONE: Jean Parker—A very sweet little picture. Little Jean Parker, who endeared herself to the hearts of thousands as Beth in "Little Women," again repeats in "Two Alone." A small town natural. Played July 17-18.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BELOVED: John Boles, Gloria Stuart—Another one of these cradle-to-the-grave things which are usually very depressing. Boles' singing was good. (Wish they had let Gloria Stuart sing). People seemed to like the picture. Business off due to heat wave. Played July 22-23.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—There are a great many Negroes near our town and all of them that heard of the "Black Cat" turned out. I believe more colored people came to this picture than any we have ever had here. Personally, I didn't care for it but as the box-office gross was very good I shouldn't kick.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CROSBY CASE, THE: Wynne Gibson, Onslow Stevens—Good murder mystery drama. Fair business considering the heat. Played July 20-21.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

GLAMOUR: Constance Cummings—If you are in a small town, take my advice and never run this. Absolutely nothing to it. I don't often squawk about a picture hut it surely is a shame to charge admission to anyone on this one. Played July 28-29.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich., Small town patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—Here is a good one if your patrons like Tracy. Ours seem to come to see him. Played July 26-27.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—A fast moving newspaper reporter story. Very good. Pleased about 60 per cent. Business only fair. Running time, 76 minutes. Played July 23-24.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains—With an English setting, no picture can go over in this spot. For the type of show this is, it is very good. The terrific heat held the gross down. Quite a number mentioned the fact that they didn't care for it. No favorable comment.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House Theatre, Kasson, Minn.

POOR RICH, THE: Edna May Oliver, Edward Everett Horton—A very funny and entertaining comedy. Played July 31.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

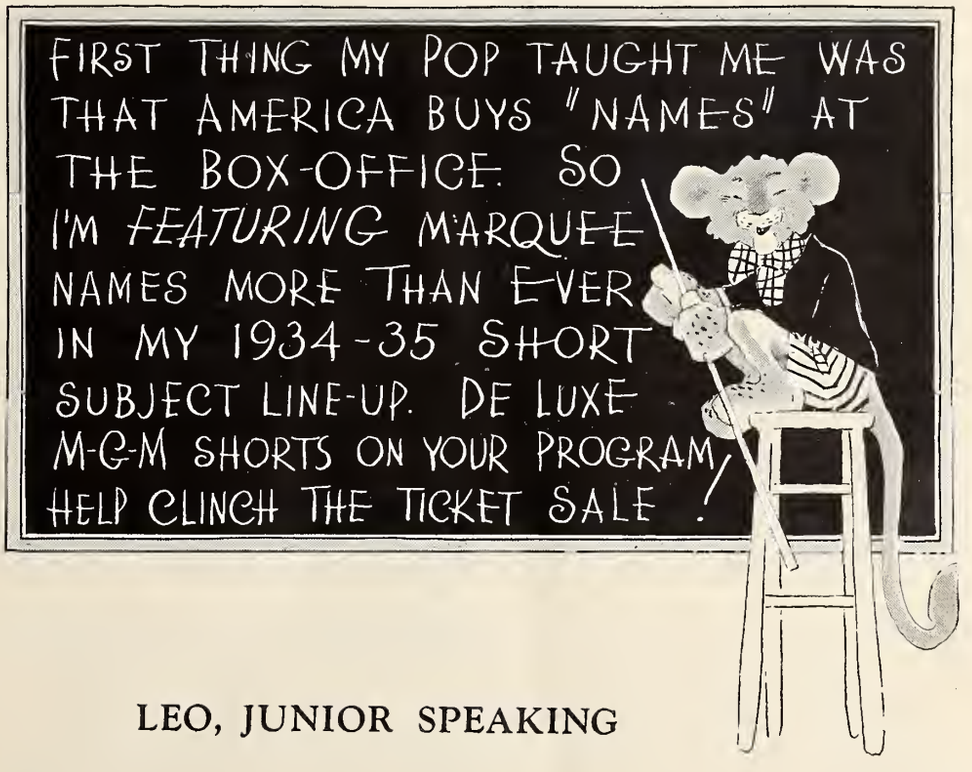
SMOKING GUNS: Ken Maynard—Over the same patterns as a lot more that we have run. Bandit, hero, heroine. The producers and directors do not seem to have any ideas for a western except that. We have run about eight this year that did not differ very much one from the other. With the Purity League so active, what a chance to turn out some good outdoor pictures that would be different in theme. I know of six stories by Hal Evarts that have run in the Saturday Evening Post this last year that would make wonderful pictures, all out in the open. One is running now, "Wolf Dog," that is right down the alley for an outstanding picture that would not have to pass the Purity League. A little restraint on the number that these he-men stars battle would be better. It's not in the books for them to whip so many unless they are a Tarzan.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

BROADWAY THROUGH A KEYHOLE: Constance Cummings—No extra draw on this one. Played July 24-25.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CATHERINE THE GREAT: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—May be artistic for art's sake but it is terrible for small towns. Walkouts plenty. Customers went away mad. Better pass this one up. Running time, 83 minutes. Played July 18-19.—W. A. Collins, New Regal Theatre, Elvins, Mo. General patronage.

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett, Franchot Tone—Only a fair picture to very poor business. This is a comedy romance with music. It is an old story and offers only fair entertainment. There are two songs and a girl spectacle that put the show over together with Russ Columbo and the Boswell Sisters. The costumes are very attractive, but my patrons are tired of these girl spectacles. Played two days to poor business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played August 6-7.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.



Warner

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis, Warren William—Very nice little picture, but very short. Miss Francis is very good as usual, but Jean Muir nearly steals the show. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 15-16.—W. B. Floyd, Vero Theatre, Vero Beach, Fla. Small town patronage.

DR. MONICA: Kay Francis, Warren William—This picture did not do justice to Francis and William. Story weak. Poor business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 22-23.—A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—This is a good picture of its kind and one that will appeal to both the ladies and men. It is a lively drama with romance. It is the story of a gambling lady, her life and love affairs. It is good entertainment and fast moving from start to finish. Miss Stanwyck turns in some great acting as do the rest of the supporting cast. Played one day to good business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 2.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HAROLD TEEN: Hal LeRoy—My patrons were divided on this. Some thought it good; others didn't. Personally consider it average. Played June 28-29.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

HEAT LIGHTNING: Aline MacMahon—A very clever and interesting picture with Aline MacMahon in the lead and she does a very good job of it. All about an auto camp in the middle of the desert, where it looks like nothing ever happens, but plenty happens, with wellknown characters in the supporting cast, that make this picture a fairly good evening's entertainment. Pleased about 90%. Played July 25-26.—R. H. Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

HE WAS HER MAN: James Cagney, Joan Blondell—Not so good for small town. Business average. Cagney and Blondell played their parts well. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 29-30.—A. Gasaway, Strand Theatre, Tuscola, Ill. Small town patronage.

HE WAS HER MAN: James Cagney, Joan Blondell—About as bad as anything I've seen recently. Second and third nights spoke for the merits, the lowest in years. It's trashy and nothing to entertain.—Warren L. Weber, DeLuxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

KEY, THE: William Powell, Edna Best—This is a fairly good picture of the program class. It is a dramatic romance of the eternal love triangle thrown against the exciting history of the 1920 Irish revolution for a background. The newcomer, Miss Best, turns in some great acting as do the rest of the excellent supporting cast. However, the show did not get over. Played on a midnight show to very poor business. Running time, 71 minutes. Played July 28.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SMARTY: Joan Blondell, Warren William—This is a very good comedy romance that will please the average theatre-goer. It is another matrimonial mix-up with lots of comedy and except for one scene contains no sexy elements. It is good entertainment and should draw a good business because of the stars and supporting cast. Personally I consider this good for the whole family. Played one day to very good business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played August 1.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SMARTY: Joan Blondell—Consider this an extra good little program picture. Played June 26-27.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

VOLTAIRE: George Arliss—Marvelous show but business poor. Costume pictures keep patrons away here. Played July 20-21.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

WOMEN HATERS: Musical No. 5—Very entertaining as well as many laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

Educational

BIG MEOW, THE: Tom Howard—Terrible. This is one of the worst comedies Educational has made. Tom Howard is not as funny as he has been. Something wrong somewhere. Running time, 18 minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila., Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

BIG MEOW, THE: Tom Howard—Fair comedy. Tom Howard's comedies are usually very good but this is about his poorest so far. Running time, two reels.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

MR. ADAM: Star Comedy Specials—Slow. Not many laughs. Running time, one reel.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

MGM

BABES IN THE GOODS: Todd-Kelly—This is another good comedy from the comedy team of Todd-Kelly and one that will keep the audience laughing all the way through. General patronage.

BACKS TO NATURE: Thelma Todd, Patsy Kelly—Fair. Patsy Kelly hard to understand in this at times. Running time, two reels.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

It is all about the trouble they are having getting started. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

GOOFY MOVIES NO. 2: Leo should bow his head in shame after producing and then forcing such shorts as this one on the exhibitors. This is ten minutes of the worst entertainment we have screened in the past year and our patrons didn't hesitate to tell us so. It is a few scenes from some old newsreels and pictures with a few wisecracks by Pete Smith. The exhibitors should form an organization to prohibit the producers from selling such trash as this just as the churches are bannnig indecent pictures. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

HELL'S FIRE: Willie Whopper—This is the best issue of this series to date. The first issues were not so good and there is still lots of room for some improvements. LUNCHEON AT TWELVE: Charley Chase—Here is a good comedy with Chase. He sings a little in this one and my patrons seem to think he should always sing and ask for his banjo again. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

MIDSUMMER MUSH: Charley Chase—Not so good. Charlie Chase comedies are usually very good and get some extra business but this one fell down. Running time, two reels.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

WILLIE WHOPPER:—Good one-reel short but the recording on the colored Whoppers is very bad.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

BARBER, THE: W. C. Fields—Old, funny and rough in spots.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

FLYING BODIES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A Grantland Rice Sportlight and this is exceptionally good. Running time, one reel.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ON PARADE NO. 5:—This is a very good issue of this series and one of the best. These show many scenes of Hollywood and the movie stars at work and play. MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE, THE: Popeye Cartoon—A funny cartoon.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Michigan. Small town patronage.

NEW DEAL RHYTHM: "Buddy" Rogers—Disappointed. Don't see why they couldn't have made a good band act out of it. Running time, nine minutes.—Perry L. Lessy, Diamond Theatre, Phila., Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

NEW DEALERS, THE: Eugene Pallette, Walter Catlett—Good slapstick comedy.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

OIL'S WELL: Chic Sale—Here is a good two-reel comedy from Paramount. After all of the others I must admit they can make good two-reelers when they want to. This is good entertainment and is the best two-reeler to date. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHE WRONGED HIM RIGHT: Betty Boop—A good cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

COME HOME, W. R.!
ALL IS FORGIVEN

"It has been some time since I have sent in any reports but could not refrain any longer, as I had a real cluck tonight just when I needed a decent one, so here it starts.

"I find that by following 'What the Picture Did for Me' and taking the favorable and adverse comments on the features and then averaging them up, I can get a good line on what I am going to get in features. Could not get along without this department and am sorry I have neglected it as long as I have."—W. R. BOUGHN, Jr., Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb.

SING, BABIES, SING: Baby Rose Marie—One of the Screen Songs and this is very good. Running time, one reel.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

STRONG TO THE FINISH: Popeye—Excellent as are all of the Popeye cartoons. This one is about Popeye getting the children to eat spinach so they will be strong like Popeye. Running time, seven minutes.—K. C. Preston, Lyric Theatre, Salem, Mo. Small town patronage.

RKO

IN-LAWS ARE OUT: Edgar Kennedy—Not so hot. People are tired of Kennedy's foolishness. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. E. Floyd, Vero Theatre, Vero Beach, Fla. Small town patronage.

PREFERRED LIST: Headliner Series—A very silly musical or so we thought. Practically all the lines are sung by chorus and individuals. DeMille Goodwill Tour Is Underway

Cecil B. DeMille left Hollywood last week on his flying lecture tour across the continent. His first stop, August 10, was at the Outdoor University at Denver, under the auspices of the Denver Post. The remaining engagements on his lecture tour are as follows:

Boston, University Club, August 20; Philadelphia, University Club, Aug. 22; Washington, D. C., Press Club, Aug. 23; Chicago, Better Films Council, Aug. 28; Atlanta, Ga., Board of Review, Aug. 29; Dallas, Tex., Parent-Teachers Association, Sept. 4, besides engagements in Cleveland, Detroit and New Orleans.

He will immediately assume charge of the publicity and fund-raising campaign for the City Fusion Party in connection with the next November election in New York.

PLUS EXPLOITATION

With Al Lichtman's opinion recently reported in Motion Picture Daily, we do not disagree. The United Artists sales chief states that admissions must be raised if the industry is to continue to turn out good pictures.

But Mr. Lichtman does not go far enough. He neglects to emphasize equally the necessity for strong and consistent exploitation.

That United Artists, through its smooth-functioning exploitation department, is proving the box office value of sending men out into the field, should have been reason enough for Mr. Lichtman to stress also the general need of more showmanship and by the same token the added services of talented showmen.

An admission rise of five cents right all along the line would undoubtedly bring much needed extra revenue weekly. But the adoption by the industry heads of a hard hitting, week in and week out exploitation drive, in our opinion, would do as much and more toward raising grosses to healthier levels.

MAKE IT STICK

Following closely upon the heels of the fan magazine discussion in these pages, comes the recent ruling voted by the major studio publicity directors to clamp down on unrestricted fan magazine interviews with contracted players. Interviewers will now have to submit their ideas before any engagements can be made, and finished articles must also be approved. Publicity heads claim the move has been made necessary due to the trend toward sensationalism in fan stories.

No one can question the prodigality of the motion picture industry in the distribution of this form of publicity. Both stars and studios share equally the guilt of allowing themselves to be so exploited.

The resolution to control the sources of harmful publicity is not the first time the studios have acknowledged the need for such regulation. In view of existing conditions, it is imperative that the new ruling be strictly enforced.

And while we're digging up the old time giggles that actually happened, Frank Boucher sits in with the gag about the mountain man who steered his family up to the cashier's window, laid down a handful of silver and, as his progeny regarded him with great awe, casually asked for five tickets, either in the "ostrich" or the "mezzine."

HOW THEY DID IT

What has become of the early exploiteers?

Well, most of them are still around earning their three squares and a bed, some are prospering in other lines, and quite a few have risen to important motion picture executive posts of responsibility.

The question is asked and answered apropos of the series inaugurated, on a following page, on early exploitation campaigns, the first of which is authored by Joe Lee, who knows most of the answers.

The purpose of these stories is twofold. First, to describe interestingly how it was done when theatre exploitation was "just a pup," and second, to emphasize that the authors, starting in the ranks, have used the ladder of exploitation in a steady climb to bigger jobs.

TWO STEP UP

The ambition to be an exhibitor "on his own" no doubt reposes in the bosom of many an able manager. The majority obviously can only regard this goal as distant but now and then circumstances make possible an opportunity and the wish becomes a fact.

Bob Wile and Al Beckerich, two long time Round Tablers, are the latest showmen to report auspicious entries into the ranks of exhibitors, the former at the helm of the Granada, Pearl River, N. Y., and the latter in cooperation with Harry Wilson, soon to reopen the Academy of Music, Newburgh.

Although it does not necessarily follow that every experienced manager should make a successful exhibitor, Bob and Al have demonstrated sufficient ability to put it over. On behalf of the membership, we extend to them every good wish for a long continuance of their good fortune.

Speaking of Mayor La Guardia's action in revoking the license of that Brooklyn theatre for putting on a lobby stunt involving small children, Hector, the bootblack, suggests what he considers a more effective but less drastic idea, and that is to fine each participating mother $50, the money to go to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Managers.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!

Davis Creates Ace Gift Ticket Plan

Many managers have difficulty in working out a satisfactory method of accommodating patrons wishing to purchase admission tickets to be used as gifts to friends or in return for some favor. Potential buyers no doubt are disinclined to use the regular admission ticket for this purpose, as obviously it does not have the appearance of a gift. Besides, tickets purchased for matinees may be brought to the theatre at night, or vice versa, and further, these tickets may not be presented on the day for which they were intended.

And thus the entire idea is bad business, says "The Manager," peppy house organ of Famous Players Canadian, in detailing how Manager Walter Davis, of the Capitol, Winnipeg, in cooperation with Home Office Auditor Norman Jackson, worked out an acceptable solution.

The photo below illustrates the special invitation four and a half by three and a half inches created by these showmen. Patrons wishing to send gift theatre tickets obtain these from the manager, who endorses them on the back. Then the necessary names are filled in at top and bottom and the invitations are mailed or given to the recipients.

When they are presented at the box office, an exchange is made for the regular matinee or evening tickets, the cashier marking on the card the number and price of each ticket issued in exchange. At the close of business, manager takes these invitations from cashier, paying her full amount from petty cash to cover tickets issued for same, and in return collects this amount from person whose signature is on bottom of invite.

Davis reports that this method is working satisfactorily, and states that while this cannot be carried out indiscriminately, it is effective in accommodating those desiring to give theatre tickets as gifts or courtesy.

Producers Offer Prizes In Theatremen's Contests

Looks like an open season for new film contests, what with Mascot offering $500 as exploitation prizes on "Young and Beautiful," and Universal putting up $100 for winning slogans on "Gift of Gab."

The Mascot prizes are: $250 for first, $150 for second and $100 for third. Subsequent runs as well as firsts are eligible for the money, with contest running up to midnight of Nov. 1, 1934. Prizes will be given for the three best exploitation campaigns on "Young and Beautiful," these to be selected by a committee of judges.

Entries should be forwarded to Mascot Pictures Corp., 1776 Broadway, New York, or to the Mascot Studios, Hollywood, Cal.

Universal Invites Slogan-eers

Speed is indicated in the Universal contest for a slogan to fit "Gift of Gab," as the picture is to be released on September 3. Three prizes are offered, as follows: $50, first; $25, second, and five prizes of $5 each for the next best.

Entries to be considered must be written by theatremen directly connected with any chain or independent. The "30 star" idea is offered as a suggestion. It is requested that slogans be forwarded immediately to Exploitation Dept., Universal Picture Corp., Rockefeller Center, New York.

Harrison's Wallpaper Heralds

Edward Harrison, Capitol Theatre, Pittsfield, Mass., says the old stunts can be worked again and again, as witness his recent heralds for "Manhattan Melodrama," for which he used wallpaper, advising that he had to "tear the paper from the walls to make room for the crowds," etc., etc.

Truck Bally Clicks For Indian Member

Despite the innumerable police obstacles in the way of any attempts at successful theatre exploitation in Calcutta, India, and in the face of 110 degree temperatures, Manager P. DeCamac, of the Globe Theatre, in that foreign spot, put together an entirely praiseworthy campaign on "Queer Christina" and "Devil Tiger," for which, as has been noted, he received a First Mention in the July competition.

For the most part, street ballyhoos are out in Calcutta, but in this instance De Camac obtained permission to put out an advertising float and the accompanying photo shows the rear view of the truck with DeCamac at the right. It is reported that the stunt bordered on the sensational, as its like had never been before seen locally.

As a goodly portion of theatre business in that country comes from the natives, all theatre advertising must be printed both in English and in the Indian dialects, and this was carried out in a series of circus heralds and billings. An extensive newspaper campaign was also effected, topped by a full page smash unusual in that country.

A 12 page road show program was another feature of this member's drive, as were cardboard die cut novelty heralds. Commanding attention also was a series of cut-out lobby displays in which reproductions in wood of the "Christina" press book cover were used extensively. .

Milk Company Cooperates On "Bulldog Drummond"

Plenty of publicity was gained for William Taylor, Loew's State, Houston, Texas, on "Bulldog Drummond" through a tie-up effected with Borden's whereby they distributed a few hundred two-color cards in as many grocery stores and arranged for announcement at the end of their national Sunday night broadcast calling attention to the world premiere at Loew's.

Managing editor of local sheet was sold on idea of publishing the life story of Loretta Young as a morally decent girl in contrast to some of the stuff that had been run recently. Street cars were bannered, five Max Factor windows arranged for and cards in frames were placed in leading hotels.

An illuminated twenty-four sheet was posted back of theatre facing busy street and parking lot. Shadow boxes used in foyer, stairways and entrance to lobby.

Offer Free Tropics Trip on 'Adventure'

Adventurously minded women between the ages of 18 and 50 were offered through a newspaper contest tieup an opportunity to win a free trip to Haiti for the best 500-word essay on "Why I Would Like to Be an Adventure Girl." This angle was part of the campaign on "Adventure Girl" at the New York Rialto by Bob Sisk's RKO exploiteers working with Monte Prosser and Marc Lachman.

For the woman appeal, fashion tieups featuring Joan Lowell were made, including a line of silks named after the title, and a millinery hookin with Miss Lowell.

Jungle windows were displayed by the Columbia Line and Cook's, and the jungle atmosphere was also carried out in the lobby (see photo). A newspaper series telling of Miss Lowell's experience in New York as a job hunter, and the personal appearance of the star herself in conjunction with the showing were other stunts reported.

Managers Battling for August Honors; Arrangements Being Made to Present July Award

by A-MIKE VOGEL

As this issue goes to press, we have received a report from Manager Jack D. Braunagel, now in charge of the Granada Theatre, Boise, Idaho, that Nevin McCord, former skipper of that house and winner of the Quigley Award for March, has been promoted to City Manager, Marcus Theatres, in Twin Falls, Idaho.

It's a struggle of giants, men!

Stimulated by the wide recognition given the previous winners, and encouraged by the endorsements of superiors in every part of the country, more and more showmen are participating in the Quigley Awards.

Campaigns for the August honors are already piling up at Committee Headquarters, from big cities and small towns, from first runs and subsequents. Every one is welcome. Every manager everywhere is invited to send in an entry for the Quigley plaques, and quite a healthy number are accepting the invitation.

Two big weeks remain for this month's competition, enough time to put over and forward that big campaign, and remember, folks, that all entrants receive exactly the same consideration from the judges, who will be announced in the next issue. It isn't what you spend so much as what you do.

Plans are now being completed to present the July Award to Charley Curran for his campaign on "Here Comes the Navy." It is hoped that the actual presentation can be made by Governor Herbert Lehman of New York, and further information on this will be published next week.

Other Exploitation Aces In July Winner's Campaign

Although a lot of Curran's campaign has already been run in a previous issue, quite a few added slants were included, among the ideas put over. Charley's opening night parade made a great flash.

Among the marchers were 500 members of the Naval Reserve who brought along their band. They were followed by hundreds of members of the Junior Naval Reserve and bluejackets from the Texas and New York. The entire turnout was reviewed in front of the theatre, after which the paraders entered.

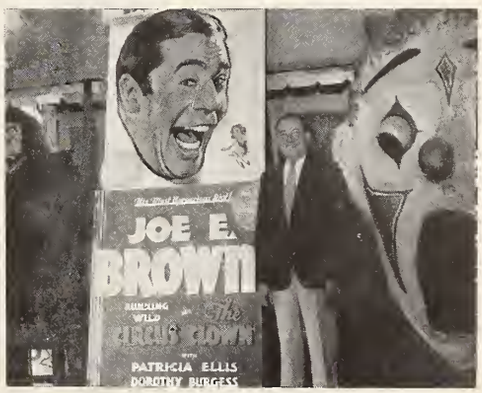
Other navy gags had a gob in Times Square wigwagging a message to another sailor atop the Strand marquee, and for a street gag, a navy goat mascot was led through the Broadway section, his blanket carrying the theatre ad.

Many store hookups were made, of navy-inspired styles, coiffures, etc., and Old Gold broke a big display campaign featuring the Cagney endorsements. To be commended also, was the newspaper publicity.

Real Circus Stuff In Frank's Advance

Circus, more circus, and yet more circus was Manager A. Frank's keynote in his campaign on "Circus Clown" at the Lyric, Camden, N. J., what with all the atmosphere and properties of the Big Show itself.

Following the example of the old time Big Top, Frank topped off his advance with a street parade held in conjunction with one of his newspapers, bally covering a distance of two miles through the business section of the city. The parade consisted of an American Legion band, local orphans, newspaper boys and ushers in clown suits leading trick ponies and followed by sound truck calliope.



Usher Rides Trick Donkey

A trick donkey was promoted and an usher dressed in costume rode the bannered animal a week ahead. An old time hurdy gurdy was planted in the lobby, and pink lemonade also served to passersby. The lobby itself was given complete circus treatment, the front being covered with freak show banners, tenting and canvas circus entrance. Doorman was dressed in regulation ringmaster's outfit and all ushers wore clown suits and clown makeup a week ahead. Frank even dug up a regulation circus box office stand through which tickets were sold.

Inner Lobby Transformed

The inner lobby was completely transformed, the walls covered with freak show banners and a number of animated circus figures in the display commanded attention. Mechanical life-sized buffaloes, elephants, apes, etc., constantly were the center of the curious, and the accompanying photo shows Abe himself alongside his mechanical clown with rotating eyes, driven by a concealed motor.

Bannering of local busses, special theatre parties to children and extra posting were some of the other ideas used by this showman to round out a highly commendable campaign that well merited the First Mention he received.

Damen Again Clicks With Feather Flash

From overseas comes a striking window display turned out by Dillon Damen, advertising and publicity manager for Warners in London, for the showing of "Fashions" at the Regal Theatre. Dillon titled it "Venus and Her Galley Slaves," the whole thing done in colors with the exception of the real ostrich plumes, all of which were white.

The illusion of movement was achieved because the feather sea on which the barge rests (see photo) and the waves on the floor were all in perpetual motion by means of a fan arrangement hidden from view. The sun in the background was illuminated by four different diffused lightings, while the whole window was flooded with brilliant lights from arcs. Display was in one of the most prominent thoroughfares and Damen reports that thousands stopped to admire it.

Krisel Promotes First Double Truck in China

Alexander Krisel, United Artists manager in Shanghai, China, planted a cooperative double truck in the China Press, tying in with local merchants. This is said to be the first time anything of its kind has ever been pulled there and credit goes to Alex for putting it over successfully on "The Bowery" at the Metropol Theatre.

Floor of the lobby was covered with sawdust, barrels to sit on and real lager was donated by a local brewer and Krisel says there were plenty of customers. A newspaper scrambled photo contest using the portrait of Jackie Cooper was also promoted.

An aeroplane flight against time was made by Allan Cooper, Denham Theatre, Denver, Colo., to bring "She Loves Me Not" from Pueblo for the midnight show. However, Al arranged for the run to the flying field, the trip to Denver and to the theatre under police escort.

Rosenthal Plants Depot Plug on "Wild Cargo"

When the Railway Express brought in from Chicago an unusual hand-carved old-time original stage coach that was used at the World's Fair tying up the progress of 95 years, Morris Rosenthal, Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., hopped to it and secured permission to place one-sheet cards in the waiting room of the depot and bumper cards on the trucks to sell Frank Buck's "Wild Cargo."

Dodge people were tied up for a parade of their cars (see photo), all of which were bannered for the attraction. An animated display was made for the inside lobby with a painted cut-out tiger shown leaping over a wall. This was hooked up to a flasher and stuffed animals were placed alongside the set piece.

Outside lobby carried triangle board display with front painted and enlargement of Buck and the snake on his arm. Top and display had a stuffed leopard looking down on the snake's combat with Buck. Front carried idea out by using tree branches and grass mats.

Ads were run in comic section week before and all ushers and employees wore silk badges. Opening day Morris tied in with local radio station for a 15-minute broadcast using transcription record. Theatre announcement preceded this and followed the broadcast.

La Temple Baby Contest Sponsored by Cooper

For "Baby Take a Bow," Max Cooper, Fox Theatre, Hackensack, N. J., ran a Shirley Temple crayon coloring contest in the newspapers and gave 50 passes to winners. This feature gave Max a chance to inaugurate a baby movie contest for five weeks. During the first four, coupons were distributed and the one having the most votes for the week was given a screen test. At the end of the fourth week, screen test of the four winners was shown and patrons given opportunity to vote for their favorite baby. Three merchants who cooperated in the contest paid for cost of taking the film. Max further promoted an electric pianola which played song hits in the lobby.

For "Operator 13" a local music store was contacted and urged to feature the song hits from the picture. Max also borrowed a midget studio piano and used a girl in evening clothes (see photo) to plug the tunes one week prior.

Evans Invites Mayor To Attend "Drummond"

Harold W. Evans, Loew's State, St. Louis, Mo., put on a stunt with Western Union for "Bulldog Drummond" that gained him plenty by having Ronald Colman wire Mayor Dickman an invitation to attend the premiere. Message was enlarged and two boys delivered it to the Mayor. Local dailies had their photographers on hand to cover the event. Photos broke papers day before and all Western Union offices used wire blow-ups for window displays.

Book tie-ups in which cut-outs and scene stills of Colman were used. Taxis carried special tire covers and window streamers were used in local shoe stores. Newsstands displayed cards plugging mystery magazines and "Drummond." Liberty Magazine carriers distributed heralds and a special matinee was later arranged for them. Grocers distributed several thousand heralds with packages.

Sock Beauty Pageant Staged by Naff

L. C. Naff, publicist for the Crescent Amusement Co., Nashville, Tenn., reports excellent business on a beauty pageant staged there recently. Twenty-two contestants (see photo) from as many towns were given free trips, along with chaperones, to Nashville for a series of entertainments and to appear at the Princess in the finals.

Entertainment consisted of a sight-seeing tour of city, lunch at the University Club, a banquet in the evening and breakfast the following day at the home of Mr. Tony Sudekum, president of the Amusement Co.

Naff writes us the finals proved a great success and the winner of the first prize received an all-expense trip to Hollywood with chaperone and an opportunity for a screen test at the M-G-M studios.

Tie-Ups Engineered By Stern on "Riptide"

Tony Stern, recently promoted to the Court Theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., got busy as soon as he landed there and promoted a display on "Riptide," securing window from Kresge in one of the busiest spots in town. Tie-up began three days prior and created plenty of word-of-mouth comment according to Stern (see photo).

Another feature of Tony's campaign was the "Riptide Title-Slogan Contest" which appeared daily for two weeks in one of the leading papers without any additional cost.

On George White's "Scandals" a stage effect was constructed in the lobby, including mechanical orchestra moving their instruments, Rudy's arm directed the band.

Costless Lobby Display Constructed by Black

Harry Black, manager Rialto Theatre, Glens Falls, N. Y., constructed a mighty fine display (see photo) on Frank Buck's "Wild Cargo" at no cost, borrowing the background from a Chevrolet dealer, the candles from a department store, the palms from a florist and the stuffed tiger from a furrier in Troy.

The enlarged telegram is from Frank Buck conveying his best wishes on the theatre's first anniversary. The title box was transparent, and Harry tells us the photo doesn't half do the display justice.

Impersonation Contest Arranged by Lashley

The Greenville Piedmont was induced by H. T. Lashley, Carolina, Greenville, S. C., to sponsor a "Harold Teen" impersonation contest for kids, the winners to perform in the theatre lobby on the Saturday matinee; prizes being free tickets. The paper also sponsored an auto race with the entrants using collegiate striped cars each provided with exactly a quart of gas—cars to go as long as the gas held out. All "Harold Teen" cars were bannered with copy on picture and playdate.

Tie-ups included florists, Postal Telegraph, men's wear shops and all soda fountains in town. Special heralds were distributed to the homes of all high school students.

A twenty-four sheet was mounted and displayed atop the marquee and radio station broadcast recordings of the songs from the film and provided spot announcements.

Allen Effects Tudor Window for "Henry VIII"

Bernie Allen, United Artists' manager, and L. C. Fama, exploiteer in Wellington, New Zealand, worked out a sock campaign for "Henry VIII," one of the outstanding stunts being a window display in one of the largest department stores (see photo) which featured furnishings of the Tudor period, a life-sized reproduction of Laughton as "Henry," assorted stills, photos and theatre announcement.

In addition, the whole city and surrounding suburbs were sniped, street cars carried posters and for street bally a man dressed as an ancient "beef eater" was stationed on the corners of congested streets holding a lance to which was attached a shield carrying theatre copy.

A local firm tied in with a "King Henry" brand of chocolate and an effective hook-up was effected with the Afga Film Company, which stressed through window cards the facts that the "biggest triumph of the year was photographed on Afga Film."

Some recent Brazilian exploitation is illustrated by the accompanying front of the Broadway Theatre in Rio de Janeiro, turned out by Iramos Ponce, owner, for his showing of "Ann Vickers." Watson Builds Blue Front on "Blue Room"

J. Watson, manager of the Savoy Picture Theatre, Hull, England, dug down into his bag of tricks for Universal's "Secret of the Blue Room," decorating and illuminating his entire theatre entrance and lobby in blue, the only relief being a white phosphorescent display over the cashier's cage.

Six grandfather clocks synchronized to strike twelve as the performance ended were placed in the lobby and on staircases. Display cards "It is midnight—what happened at one in the Blue Room?" were scattered at vantage points in theatre.

Blue display tie-ups were arranged with wallpaper stores, furniture shops, chemists and candy stores. Week before opening ads ran in the "houses to let" section reading "Fine castle containing the famous blue room which is haunted. On view at the Savoy Theatre."

Jack Rosenberg, New Spreckles Theatre, San Diego, Cal. distributed two by four tags with keys attached on "The Key", with copy to effect that $2.50 would be given to the first and second keys to open lobby door and two passes each for the next twenty-three. Keys were handed out at groceries and plugged in papers.

A tie-up with a local flour mill netted several thousand circulars on "Little Man" for insertion in all bread packages and on "Black Cat" Jack used the cat costume for a street ballyhoo and beach coverage.

Sid and Mort Create Campaign Chart

For the purpose of aiding managers to plan and budget their campaigns, Sid Dannenberg, Warner Cleveland zone exploiteer, and his assistant, Mort Goodman, have gotten out a very complete four-page chart, in which every possible advertising, publicity and exploitation angle is listed under the proper heading.

As an instance, under "Screen" is carried teaser snipes, advance type trailer, manager's endorsement, and regulation production trailer. "Lobby" heading covers, teaser cards, special advance displays, exploitation tieup displays and live displays.

In addition there are the following heads: Publicity, Exploitation, Newspaper Advertising, the back page given to recapitulation of individual and total campaign costs.

ON NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

In His Second Article, Mr. Keene Emphasizes Advertising Angles That Managers Often Neglect

by LIONEL H. KEENE
Loew's Southern Representative

To continue, too much cannot be said on the subject of newspaper advertising. It is used 365 days of the year. It is acknowledged an important part of your selling campaigns. It deserves lots of thought. Yet, so many theatre ads miss their sales point by a mile. In reviewing them, you wonder why. The answer is obvious, and the blame most times may be properly traced to the manager.

A conscientious manager spends a great many hours daily about his theatre. Yet, so many give so little time to this feature of their operation. Today such facilities are available, through various sources, to make ad-writing comparatively easy. True, sizes of ads are regulated according to local newspaper rates, but of the ad layouts, there is always a possible selection that will make for attractive copy. Sometimes, a theatre will play a picture either pre-release or on release date, and for reasons for which no one is directly responsible, there are not any press sheets, or even advertising accessories, available.

In such cases, certainly a manager's showmanship is tested, but it will not prove a handicap. It is to the manager's interest to read the daily newspapers and trade papers, and the publicity material producers mail you from time to time, clip and file under the name of the picture anything you think may be helpful when it comes time to exploit this particular show.

And, remember, the other fellow's idea even though you have played the picture, may be just as good in a campaign on some other picture. There is little that is original in exploitation; only too rarely does there come to your attention a brand new stunt, but it is still new if it has not been executed.

Ad Layout Important

But back to ad layouts—important to the public, as well as the theatre, are: of course, the name of your theare; what time your doors open; your admission prices. If it is the summer season, and you have a cooling plant, your head sig cut should immediately convey the "Cool" idea, with possibly a permanent catch line. Then follows your attractive sales talk, with an illustration whenever space permits, on your feature picture, followed by a detailed descriptive list of your short subjects, which may be headed by the caption: "Plus", or "Added Entertainment," or some line that will convey the fact that they are not just "fillers", but important to your program and selected with a view to the patron's enjoyment.

In connection with some of the more important short subjects, space again permitting, use an illustration such as Mickey Mouse, Walt Disney's Silly Symphony, Laurel & Hardy, etc. There are many short subjects being produced today that are really good entertainment, but not unless you tell your public through the medium of your newspaper ads.

Further, in connection with your advertising of a short subject, sometimes the manager may not know it has any box office value until he sees it on his screen. This was brought to my attention in reviewing a short subject that featured a band very popular on the air, but was not mentioned in the ad. Another short featured a popular screen star, but you wouldn't have known it from reading the theatre's ad.

One theatre I have in mind which has a newspaper contract of six inches minimum daily, on the day before the opening of the next program, used seven and one-half inches, four inches given to the last showings of the current picture, and three and one-half inches on the coming show. Had I been manager, I would not have increased the minimum at all. Six inches would have permitted of two inches, including the head sig cut, on "Last Times Today" of the current picture, and four inches on the next feature. Another manager, because an executive complimented his style of announcement of the short subjects in his ads never thought of a new idea to break the monotony to the local readers until it was mentioned to him.

It is real showmanship when the manager who is handicapped by lack of good product steps to the front in his community as far as business is concerned, sheerly through personal efforts and salesmanship. But the chap who has the product, and falls down—he's just a bad manager.

ONE OF FIRST THRILL CAMPAIGNS

Exploiteer Relates Details of Novel Ideas Used Some Years Back to Sell "Chill" Picture

by "DOCTOR" JOE LEE

In creating and planning an exploitation campaign there are three basic rules of showmanship that must always be borne in mind. If the campaign does not conform with these rules it is a failure. They may be briefly summed up as follows: (1) the public want to be thrilled; (2) it wants to be made to laugh; and (3) women love to cry. If with your campaign you can do all three, then you have an unquestioned winner.

"Doc" Joe Lee

One of the best and most successful campaigns that I ever put over was for the RKO picture, the "Isle of Lost Ships" when it played the Greenpoint theatre in Brooklyn. This picture was a thriller par excellence, but it contained nothing to make them either laugh or cry.

Offers Free Smelling Salts

Therefore in order to drive home the desire to make the public want to come and see it a new novel and original idea was required. Weeks before the picture was due to show we ran a novelty trailer as follows: "If you faint during the showing of the 'Isle of Lost Ships,' spirits of ammonia and smelling salts will be furnished you free. Just call an usher."

This trailer naturally caused a lot of talk and attracted a lot of attention from everybody attending the theatre. They knew that something unusual and out of the ordinary was coming. Then a full week before the picture an emergency hospital was built in the lobby of the theatre with a uniformed trained nurse in attendance. All care was taken to impress upon our patrons the complete and comprehensive manner of this display even to the sign stating that a local doctor would be in attendance at every performance to treat patrons free of charge.

Joe's Ambulance Bally

THE AMBULANCE HAD NO MOTOR

Not the least amusing of Joe's account on this page is his comment on the sudden call for the services of the vehicle illustrated below, and what happened when it was discovered that the ambulance had no motor. At any rate, the misadventure brought a lot of extra publicity on the stunt that Doc reports one of the first times the hospitals were unwittingly used to help put over a thrill picture.

—MIKE

The day the picture opened a climax of ballyhoo was attained by having an ambulance in front of the theatre with driver in uniform and also another trained nurse. Every once in so often the driver would let loose on the mechanical ambulance gong and any one who was dumb enough not to have noticed the ambulance as they were walking by could not fail to look up and see the sign on the side offering free transportation to the hospital (see photo).

The practical result of this campaign from a box office standpoint may best be summed up by stating that it was necessary to call out the police reserves to handle the crowds on three successive days.

Naturally this campaign was tied up with the theatre's newspaper advertising and publicity, which all called attention to the free medical service in the event that any patron fainted. And one of the peculiar and fortunate breaks which sometimes occur without being definitely planned occurred in connection with this ambulance. We had combed the entire city trying to find one of the old-fashioned kind that would permit of a good sign on the side and at last located one in the garage of one of the hospitals. But it had no engine in it. Nothing daunted, we had it trucked over in front of the theatre where it certainly attracted attention.

Ambulance Would Not Work

Then without warning a man patron actually did faint and his case was so serious that it was necessary to get him to a hospital quick. The old ambulance wouldn't work so we used a taxi cab. Then one of the Brooklyn newspapers wrote a long story about there being a scarcity of ambulances in the city and here was a theatre using one and having it stand idle all day. It sure made a good controversy and it did not come out until after the run of the picture was over that the ambulance couldn't go.

It is my firm belief as a result of years of experience that a good exploitation campaign will add from 40 to 60 per cent to the box office value of a poor picture and that even with a good picture it will very materially increase the sales. You cannot create a desire to make the public want to come in the theatre unless you tell them about what you have to show, and the way to tell them is to do it in a way that they cannot fail to understand.

manages the Hancock Theatre in Austin, Texas; second run pictures and occasional vaudeville. Bill worked as doorman, cashier and assistant manager for Louie Novy, club member, when the theatre was independent. Became manager of the house when Novy went in with Interstate Circuit. Hellums is a graduate of the Business School of Administration of the University of Texas and entered theatre business at the tender age of sixteen to help work his way through college.

doesn't leave a doubt in our mind as to whether or not he is happy in his line of endeavor, because he says "absolutely, positively, yes," he'd choose show business again if he had to decide all over again. Ralph manages the Roanoke Theatre in Roanoke, Ala., and says he spent several years with a big chain store where progress was slow, so he up and left them to act as doorman in Ashburn, Ga., then sign work and on until he attained his present positioin.

publicity and exploitation director of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, Canada, scarcely needs any introduction via these pages, since he and Gene Curtis, winners of the Quigley Award for June have certainly occupied plenty of space in our pages. However, Ken, everyone must be formally introduced here, and we are happy to welcome you. Don't let the fact that Gene leaves your house prevent you from keeping us posted on what's what at the Palace.

is another Warnerite to come through from up in Dunkirk, N. Y., where he holds the managerial reins of the Capitol Theatre. Dalton says he has both pictures and attractions and operates a fairly good size house. I'm sure you've been following our pages and know how active the Warner boys are, so you have a little something to live up to if you are to uphold the good old W. B. traditions. What say, Dalt?

manages the Tri-States Strand and Garden Theatres in Des Moines, Iowa. Art first engaged in show business as usher at the Paramount, Des Moines. From there as chief to the Des Moines and thence to assistant of the Strand and Garden. Then to the Paramount as assistant, and was then promoted to the Garden and Strand, Ottumwa.

CHILDREN MOB POLICE IN HUNT FOR TREASURE

Armed with picks, shovels and virtually every other conceivable weapon for digging treasure, a horde of Baltimore boys and girls—estimated at between 8,000 and 10,000 strong—swept Druid Hill Park today in maddened quest of buried loot.

It was the hour of their fondest dreams and they flocked to the Mansion House from every section of the city, restless and feverishly seeking a clue as to where Long John Silver, swashbuckling pirate of fictional fame, had buried his 200 pieces of treasure a few hours before.

POLICE OVERWHELMED

The modern version of Robert Louis Stevenson's famed story "Treasure Island," in which he immortalized the character of Long John Silver, was staged by The Baltimore News-Post and Loew's Century Theatre in conjunction with the motion picture, "Treasure Island," which opens on the Century screen tomorrow.

So great was the crowd and the impelling spirit of youth behind it a special detachment of park police was helpless to cope with the situation and John Silver was forced to flee to safety behind locked doors of the Mansion House until time for the hunt to begin.

CAR IS MOBBED

Arrival of the official News-Loew's automobile at 1:30 P. M. was the signal for a sudden rush, and the youngsters stormed forward, demanding their souvenir pirate caps. Again park police were unable to stop the stampede and the car was forced to break through the line and speed away to safety across a ravine.

A few minutes later, the News-Loew's Cadet Band lined up in front of the Mansion House, and after much difficulty the march to the treasure field was begun. Long John quietly moved into his position and joined the procession.

Then it was every boy and girl for themselves. They swept the hills and valleys like insects, combing and examining every foot of ground as the line advanced. Occasionally, a gleeful cry wafted above the drum of noise to denote a discovery.

PUBLICITY

QUITE a hullabaloo seems to have been had in Hollywood on the issues between the interests of the motion picture and the fan press, starting with a proposal and project to subject to studio approval all star interviews and ending in a glad-hand meeting in which the writing gleaners of fan pabulum promised to be "constructive," etc.

Stories about motion picture players, written for the entertainment of the readers of the movie columns of the daily press and for the fan magazines are just as definitely merchandise as the pictures they make on Hollywood's stages.

The fan press, with its army of writers and reporters, gathers its editorial wares for the cost of collection even as beach combers and fishermen. The fan press sells personalities on the printed page with just as definite an amusement policy as that of the picture makers.

A picture "name" is the property of the bearer, a property which is leased or rented to the producer under contract. It would be entirely practical, if the parties to the contract saw the transaction in that light to make the contract exclusive and covering all media. Because in the main such contracts are not exclusive the motion picture is often confronted with competition from the other media, most conspicuously the radio, and is occasionally finding its interests invaded by the printed page.

Publicity departments presumably exist for the purpose of controlling the by-product use of the personalities bought by the studios for the screen and directing such external attentions in directions calculated to protect what the studio bought and enhance the value of the output. That would be merchandising.

It would be a great service to the industry if publicity departments and studio press agents were so engaged. The practical fact is, however, that Hollywood publicity activities consist mainly in breathless pursuits of fan magazine lay-outs and covers and items in the local gossip columns calculated to tickle the vanities of the players. The typical Hollywood star is more impressed and concerned with a paragraph in a Los Angeles paper than a column in the New York Times or a national newswire story by the Associated Press.

Far too small a fraction of the publicity activity of the industry appears to bear upon the selling of motion pictures, which is generally held to be its business.

Fan writers necessarily represent their publications and those publications are concerned only with profitably operating with a view to selling copies to readers and space to advertisers. There is no very large compelling community of interest with the motion picture and the theatre. The consequence is that a great deal of material that gets into print is mere notoriety.

It is also to be observed that in some quarters there is a highly exaggerated estimate of the values of publicity. The best of all publicity media to the general public is the screen itself, about which the motion picture industry has done substantially nothing.

Speaking of publicity, one is to be reminded of the interesting case of Miss Maud Adams, who contrived to be one of the greatest stars of the American stage by the release of only one photograph, no interviews, and the expedient of being seen nowhere save on the stage. Mr. Charles Chaplin, in relation to the reach of his fame, was aided by less publicity pressure than any other player of the screen. It may also be observed that "America's Sweetheart" and her husband, the leaping romancer, have declined in box office appeal in the same ratio as their domestic life has been aired by the fan press.

Too much and too intimate publicity for players has the same destructive influence as back-of-the-set pictures and stories about "how movies are made."

The motion picture's merchandise is illusion.

The only publicity which matters is that which enhances the illusion, contributes to the glamour.

MERELY MUD

THE Smithsonian Institution in Washington has been a bit in print of late because what it had been treasuring as "the oldest ear of corn in the world" has proved to be a clay rattle, made in facsimile by some clever Indian of the long time ago in Peru. To one familiar with the history of the motion picture exhibit at the Smithsonian and its persistent errors, it is not surprising that they could not tell an ear of corn from a hunk of mud.

WE'RE THE "CONSPECTUS"

THE nimble handed editor of To-Day's Cinema, London, is more to be complimented on his eye for copy than his memory for its sources. His issue of Tuesday, August 7, is led by an article which appropriates material from Motion Picture Almanac's special feature on "best sellers" with a lightsome credit to "an American conspectus."

Looking over the records for the last six months it appears that the 150 leading advertisers in the general national merchandise field have spent about 15 per cent more for space than in the like period last year, Printers' Ink records.

TEACHING SCREEN

An educational system, whereby 100 to 1,000 pupils would be handled by a single teacher, is envisioned by Colonel F. L. Devereux, vice-chairman of the National Advisory Committee of Citizens, through the use of the motion picture. At a New York meeting of the National Schoolmart the prediction was made. . . .

MANILA'S LIKES

Manila's population finds its greatest cinematic enjoyment in the work of Jose Mojica, Fox Spanish actor, last week declared N. A. Tuason, Manila theatre owner, in Hollywood buying equipment. Janet Gaynor has a large following while such stars as Clark Gabel and the diminutive Shirley Temple are unknown. . . .

SEPARATE DEALS

Individual distribution deals only will be the future releasing policy of Harold Lloyd, he declared last week in New York, where "The Cat's Paw," his first release through Fox, opened. Who will handle his next, as yet not even planned, he does not know.

FAN MATERIAL

Agreeing to eliminate all false or salacious material from interviews, fan magazine writers last week settled their differences with studio publicity heads, following a conference at the Coast MPPDA office. Publicity chiefs' first intimation indicated all interviews would have to be submitted for approval before publication. The writers pledged "clean, constructive and honest material." . . .

WRITER CREDITS

Answering the Coast Academy's recognition by producers of their code of fair practice for writers, the Writers' Guild, beginning with the next issue of the Actor-Writer magazine, will list all writing credits monthly. Upon this service the Academy had based its claim for producer recognition. . . .

SUNDAY FILMS

Surprising was the plurality, two to one, by which the population of Lincoln, Neb., last week legalized Sunday motion picture exhibition in a special election. Three times during the past three years had the proposition been defeated at the polls. . . .

CHARITY RACKETS

Strongly backing a Better Business Bureau drive in San Francisco to rid the city of charity racketeers are local theatre owners. The proposed ordinance provides that charity solicitors must obtain a police permit or suffer fines, jail sentences. A bare-faced swindle, perpetrated last year, was the cause of the movement. . . .

REEL SHOT

To get an unusual shot, that of an evangelist at Birmingham, Ala., stirring a "Holy-roller" revival meeting to a frenzy by wrapping a rattler about his neck, a newsreel man paid $10, had the snake's captor, one George Lumpkin, draw the snake's poisoned fangs, protecting the evangelist, three others who displayed their "faith." Only one, Rev. Dewey L. Dotson, knew of the trick. Faithful Rev. H. A. Kuykendall took up the snake, believing it still fanged.

CALLED RED AIDERS

As District Attorney Neil McAllister of Sacramento pushed plans for drastic injunctions making communistic contributions or expressions punishable without trial, four film stars, James Cagney, Lupe Velez, Dolores Del Rio, Ramon Novarro, involved in the action, vigorously denied communistic contributions, leanings. They came into the picture when their names were found on slips of paper in the apartment of the secretary of a communist subsidiary. . . .

ELLINGTON BARRED

Britain for British bands only, is the background thought in the refusal of England's ministry of labor to grant a permit to Duke Ellington and his music organization to play in British motion picture theatres. . . .

PRODUCTION ARRANGEMENT

Elaborating an interchanging talent plan, Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president of 20th Century Pictures, returned to New York from Europe last week, announced the joint signing of talent between 20th and London Films has been extended to include actors, directors, technicians and between 20th and British and Dominions pictures and Pathe-Natan in France. . . .

SCULPTOR BOOM

To work at Universal City last week went 20 sculptors, their job to make 50 statues for the company's picturization of Thorne Smith's comedy novel, "Night Life of the Gods." The best sculptors in the west have been employed on this $25,000 assignment. . . .

MEXICO'S PROBLEM, TOO

The Mexican Union of Cinematographic Exhibitors is asking the government to drop its proposed 10 per cent tax on rentals on the plea that thousands would lose their jobs through a resultant closing of American branches. New officers of the association are: I. Martinez, president; Adolfo Rodriguez, secretary; Guillermo Vega, treasurer, and Jose U. Calderon, local representative general at Mexico City. . . .

SOUND DEVICE

Perfect synchronization of lip movement and sound, long sought by motion picture producers, was claimed last week in Budapest by a young engineer, Karl Pulvari. An electrical apparatus which catches and holds for proper lip movement the vowel sounds, his invention, he claims, makes it impossible to detect a difference between an original and synchronized film. . . .

25 YEARS ON SCREEN

A silver anniversary on the silver screen is observed by Lionel Barrymore with the appearance at Broadway's Capitol of "The Girl from Missouri," in which Jean Harlow and Franchot Tone are starred. A quarter century ago Barrymore first stood before the black box camera of those days at the Biograph Studios in New York, with Mary Pickford. That picture was the one-reel "The New York Hat." . . .

SIR NIGEL PLAYFAIR

Last week in London, after a major operation, died Sir Nigel Playfair, 60, one of England's most beloved stage personalities. Actor, manager, playwright, producer, Sir Nigel in 1918 bought the small Lyric theatre from under the nose of a motion picture company, there developed one of the most famed little theatres of the English stage. Recently he played in several English pictures. . . .

RADIO PUBLIC PREFERS ITS DRAMA SERVED IN THEATRE

Dance Bands Favored, with Single Comedians Taking Lead Over Sketches; Half-Hour Programs Are Preferred, Survey Finds

Public Spending Same Time at Radio Dials as Last Year; Ad Programs Displease Few, but Many Say They Are Too Long

The American public—sitting before its radio loud speaker—has expressed a sharply defined preference for musical entertainment on the air and an equally definite distaste for virtually all other programs. Evidently the public still prefers to go to the motion picture and legitimate theatre for its drama and comedy. This is to be inferred from the fact that the great preponderance of persons interviewed in a survey to determine radio entertainment tastes indicated a preference for dance bands and vocal and semi-classical renditions.

Surveying the country to determine radio taste, Ross Federal Service, sales survey and business checking organization, says that radio advertising is the most effective and economical medium at present to develop sales. However, in many instances the broadcast advertising campaign of a national advertiser has failed to achieve the desired results, and this because the programs used were presented unintelligently—that is, they did not take into consideration the public's impatience with long sales messages mixed with their entertainment.

It has become increasingly evident to the radio field, as in other amusement branches, that more detailed data is needed in order that entertainment purveyors and broadcasters specifically may better analyze the tastes of the public.

National advertisers, in order to assure success in their broadcast advertising campaigns, have spent huge sums for "big names" of the radio, stage and screen on the theory that this would make for a large listener following. On the whole, this theory is said to have worked out satisfactorily, but in recent months there has been considerable doubt as to whether equal, and possibly better results, could have been obtained at less cost, through less stress on the "big names" and commercial announcements and more attention to variety of entertainment.

In order to determine what types of programs appeal most to the listening public, Radio Art assigned Ross Federal Service to undertake a house-to-house canvass in ten large cities of the United States. The results of this survey follow:

TYPE OF DRAMA FAVORED

In the field of dramatic presentations, radio patrons the country over appear to prefer mysteries, with adventure and romance next in popularity. It is interesting, however, to note the difference in taste in the various localities represented. For example, while Boston and almost every other city in the survey prefer mystery dramas, Chicago, the second largest center, is strong for adventure, and so are Kansas City and St. Louis. In many sections radio listeners prefer romantic drama to adventure, but in no city is the romance more popular than either mystery or adventure, as shown in the following tabulation:

City	Adventure	Romance	Mystery	No Choice
Boston	23%	21%	44%	12%
Chicago	43	16	33	8
Cincinnati	24	33	36	7
Cleveland	16	25	56	3
Detroit	30	15	48	7
Kansas City	36	31	33	0
Milwaukee	24	23	51	2
New Orleans	21	22	51	6
New York	27	19	54	0
St. Louis	41	23	36	0
Total Percentage of Whole	28.5	22.8	44.2	4.5

TYPE OF MUSIC FAVORED

Dance bands furnish America's most popular musical entertainment, the tabulation shows, with semi-classical and vocal music next, although numerically far behind. In one city only—Cleveland—is jazz outweighed by semi-classical music in popular vote. Sixty per cent of persons in Cincinnati expressed their preference for dance music, 54 in Milwaukee and 52 per cent in St. Louis. Dance music is found to be in the least popular favor in New York City, where vocal renditions appear to be preferred.

In New Orleans, classical and operatic music are equally appreciated, but here again the jazz band reigns. Thus New York remains the sole exception to the influences of the fox-trot, waltz, tango and rhumba.

TYPE OF COMEDY FAVORED

In the comedy field, radio patrons appear to be about equally divided in their preference for single comedians and humorous sketches. In Boston, 50 per cent expressed their preference for single acts and the same number for sketches. In Cincinnati, however, they like their comics by themselves, the vote there showing 60 to 40 per cent in favor of the comedian over the sketch. Milwaukee, on the other hand, is far more appreciative of the comedy skit than of the single act and the same holds true of Cleveland. The results of the vote:

City	Comedians	Humorous Skits	No Choice
Boston	50%	50%	0%
Chicago	45	53	2
Cincinnati	60	40	0
Cleveland	20	74	6
Detroit	49	51	0
Kansas City	27	73	0
Milwaukee	31	67	2
New Orleans	57	42	1
New York	42	53	5
St. Louis	57	41	2
Total Percentage of Whole	43.8	54.4	1.8

TYPE OF NEWS REPORTS FAVORED

News reports, currently presenting the radio with one of its most perplexing problems, are definitely in the public favor. The majority of persons have gone on record as preferring straight news summary broadcasts, although the established news commentators—such as Edwin C. Hill, Lowell Thomas and Boake Carter—have proved their popularity. New York and New Orleans alone stand out for their preference of the commentators over spot news broadcasts.

Sporting news is next to spot broadcasts in popularity.

TIME LENGTH PREFERRED

For possibly the first time, radio listeners have been given an opportunity to express their

PARAMOUNT REORGANIZATION IS SEEN NEARING COMPLETION

Progress Being Made by Large Creditor Groups in Drafting Reorganization Plan Brings End of Bankruptcy in Sight

The long-awaited complete financial and corporate rehabilitation of Paramount Publix Corporation—in bankruptcy for a year and one half—may be a fact by October 1st.

Meanwhile, unofficial estimates of Paramount's earnings for the first six months of 1934 were placed at $3,000,000.

From authentic sources it was learned confidentially this week that the reorganization of Paramount, which would end its bankruptcy status, appears to be almost a certainty as a result of the progress being made in the construction of a reorganization plan for the company by the three important creditor groups: the debenture holders' protective committee, Frank A. Vanderlip, chairman; the banking group's committee, headed by Percy Johnston, president of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company; and the stockholders' protective committee, represented by Maurice Newton, of Hallgarten and Company.

Indicative of the proximity of the reorganization — October 1st having been the very first prediction to date — is the decision of those close to the company's reorganization proceedings to effect, at the time of reorganization, a revision in the structure of the board of directors. The new board will be considerably smaller in the point of the number of members. It will be a "working board," divested of the honorary memberships that are usually a part of the directorates of large corporations.

A reorganization plan may be ready within three weeks. The foundation is understood to have already received the approval of the three large creditor committees. Their approval is necessary to whatever plan is eventually adopted.

Progress to date has also resulted in the withdrawal of the full membership of the creditor groups in participating in the drafting of the reorganization plan, and now only the designated representatives of their committees find it necessary to confer.

The creditors' groups maintain an important part in any reorganization proceedings, this being also true of the general creditors' committee, which includes Electrical Research Products, Inc., but their opposition to the nearly completed plan is said to be of considerably less significance than would be opposition coming from any one of the three other creditor groups closely associated with the plan.

Without consent of any one of the three groups, adoption of a reorganization plan would be out of the question, it was explained, whereas dissensions outside of these three principals would only "be heard in court and there with doubtful effectiveness."

Creditor groups having the largest claims in both amount and number wield the greatest influence in reorganization of any debtor corporation under the new bankruptcy laws, and the three groups named in Paramount meet this condition.

Earnings of Paramount Publix Corporation for the first six months of 1934 are unofficially estimated at approximately $3,000,000, after depreciation but before taxes and interest. Although audited statements have not yet been completed, Paramount officials indicated that box office receipts currently are running from 5 to 10 per cent ahead of a year ago, which is considered to be a fairly satisfactory showing.

Investigation at Paramount revealed that the estimate of earnings was made by unofficial sources, and, it was believed they had been compiled by some of the outside creditors' committees engaged on the reorganization plans. As such they are not official. No official audited statement of Paramount earnings has been completed as yet for the second quarter.

Cash Position Improved

Paramount's funded debt, not including obligations of real estate subsidiaries, which are being separately reorganized, consists of $11,918,000 of 6 per cent bonds and $13,259,000 5½ per cent bonds. Bank loans amount to $13,000,000 and there are approximately 3,300,000 shares of common stock, said Wall Street Journal.

At last reports the managements of the parent company, now in bankruptcy, and the receivers had built up a cash position of substantially more than $10,000,000.

Work on reorganization plans is proceeding, but no definite program has as yet been worked out. Committees for stockholders and bondholders are understood to be working in accord on the problem. According to the Dow-Jones Wall Street Journal, it will take at least another month or so before any action can be taken.

Assessment Called Undecided

"The problem of whether an assessment on the common stock will be necessary has not yet been settled," the Journal said. "From one point of view, large cash balances might make it possible for the company to come out of bankruptcy and resume normal operations without a contribution from stockholders. However, the banks which advanced the $13,000,000 loans are understood to want this amount reduced. Undoubtedly the liquid position of the company would be materially improved by additional cash working capital, but even if an assessment should prove necessary, current earning power indicates that there will be substantial equity left for the common shareholders," it was said.

In New Orleans this week bondholders of Saenger Realty Corp. and Saenger Theatres, Inc., were given $70,000 as interest at six and one-half per cent for the period November 1, 1933, to May 1, 1934.

Of special significance in the Paramount situation was the move taken on Wednesday by counsel for the corporation's trustees toward prosecution of the suit to set aside the $13,000,000 credit transaction between Film Productions Corporation, which held the rights to certain Paramount negatives, and 12 creditor banks.

The move was the first one to be taken since the filing of the action 15 months ago, and the Paramount trustees' counsel took action Wednesday in seeking an examination before Special Master John E. Joyce, of officers of three of the defendant banks.

Unofficial Estimates Place the First Six Months' Earnings of the Corporation at $3,000,000; Film Productions Suit Is Up

12 Banks Cited

The subpoenaed officers pleaded they were unprepared for the examination, and Master Joyce granted a postponement until Thursday without prejudice to a petition by the banks for a further postponement.

The officers, who were subpoenaed for examination under Section 21-A of the new bankruptcy laws, are associated with the National City Bank, Bankers' Trust Co., and the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. Other defendant banks to the suit are County Trust Co., Manufacturers Trust Co., Commercial National Bank & Trust Co., Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Co., Tradesmen's National Bank & Trust Co., First National Bank of Chicago, Empire Trust Co., and Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association.

Large Credit Available in 1932

All these 12 banks in 1932 were parties to a transaction which made available to Paramount a $13,000,000 credit secured by title to 23 negatives held by Film Productions Corp.

Following Paramount's bankruptcy in the early months of 1933, the three trustees for the bankrupt—Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson—commenced negotiations with the 12 banks to re-transfer title to the pledged negatives from Film Productions to Paramount Publix. It was the contention of the trustees that the transaction, which made the banks creditors of Film Productions, gave the banks a preference under the Paramount bankruptcy. Further, the trustees contended, the banks properly were creditors of Paramount Publix and as such would have the same standing as other general creditors of the bankrupt.

These negotiations failed, however, and in June, 1933, Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, the trustees' counsel, filed suit in U. S. District Court in New York in an effort to have the transaction set aside.

Further move to prosecute the action, however, was not made until Wednesday. Samuel S. Isseks, of trustees' counsel, said it is anticipated the case will be up for trial in October, and that if trial is not reached by the end of that month a motion would be made to obtain a preference for the case on the Federal court calendar.

WEEKLY DRAMATIC NEWSREEL WILL BE LAUNCHED BY "TIME" OCTOBER 1

News Magazine to Enter Field Probably as an Independent; New Technique Revealed in Construction and Presentation

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Time Magazine will present a motion picture newsreel—"The March of Time"—to the theatre-going public on the Monday morning of October 1, and thereafter. It will be a weekly release, independently produced, and probably distributed in the same manner, reenacting in dramatic form the causes and results of the news of the day. United Press will cooperate in the coverage.

Emerging this week from their laboratory of experimentation, in rented quarters in the Fox Movietonews Building on New York's noisy Tenth avenue, were the two persons who have crystallized the idea of a dramatized newsreel: Roy E. Larsen, a vice-president of Time, and well versed in the self-styled "curt, clear, complete" technique of news presentation of that weekly newsmagazine; and Louis de Rochemont, formerly associated with Truman Talley at Fox Movietonews, and himself a graduate of the modern school of newsreel journalism.

Both of these young pioneers—they're each 35—had been working quietly behind locked doors on the theory that in the proper picturization of each news sequence there should be depicted: (1) the events leading up to the beginning; (2) the events that transpired between the beginning and the end, and, (3) the end itself, all three parts to be built up dramatically at both the studio and on the actual scene of the incident.

They set to work with the idea that the practice of showing only "headline flashes" of the day's news, leaving so much of the unpictured background of the occurrence, and its causes, to the imagination of the theatre patron, loses for the present newsreel structure all but a little of the dramatic value.

Too, they believed that the present extensive use of a word-description in printed titles is inadequate to tell the story.

And so with the beginning of the new week they brought to an end their experimentations, during which they had formed three complete test reels showing how Time will present the news in the new style. These first reels were intended solely for purpose of registering reactions in the field. The appraisals were rated high, claim the sponsors, by audiences who were on hand at the "sneak" previews that were staged both on Broadway and in second and third-rate communities in the East and along the New England seaboard.

Time has been toying with the newsreel idea since last April, but not until last week did the management definitely decide that it would expand its news gathering and news dispensing activities—already embracing the printed word and the radio—to include the use of the motion picture screen.

From a first-hand inspection of the product one gathered an understanding of the reason why the various managements of the industry's five newsreels are at least a little disturbed over the threatening competition, for the testing reels reveal a technique in newsreel construction that appears to be far in advance of the present day, in pictorial planning of news presentation, in the apparent evaluation of the news, and in the appeal of its dramatic interest to the public.

In the process of formation at the moment is Time's own worldwide staff of motion picture camera news gatherers. They will be trained to widen the eye of their camera, after filming the actual event, to the characters on the sideline who have a very definite relation to the event, and also to the background and to the sideline "color" surrounding the incident, all of which are ordinarily ignored in the everyday haste of the newsreels to get to the screens of the country first with a "flash," regardless of how vague are the details, and which usually show only the end of an event.

Reenactment in the home studio of a news incident which would not ordinarily be covered by the newsreels because of the impossibility of meeting the conventional "deadline" time limit, or because of geographical impracticabilities, is a new departure revealed in the first Time reels.

Film library shots that are interesting and pertinent, supplementary studio production, and the dubbing of voices that simulate the voices of non-English speaking world figures—a feature of Time's radio broadcasts—will all be employed in constructing the reenactment of Time's new dramatic newsreel.

There will not appear any titles descriptive of any action or phase of the news picturized in the reel. Actual pictorial material will be substituted throughout in order to increase the dramatic value. A narrator will conclude each clip with the bare announcement: "Time Marches On!"

Fluctuation of the tempo of the action will be marked by appropriate music, scored by a symphony orchestra in the home studio while the cut negative is being projected for that purpose. The distorted music that is usually picked up on the actual, noisy scene by portable sound recording units will all be eliminated and in its place will be substituted a similar rendition clearly recorded at the studio.

The fast, worldwide news gathering and news dispensing services of United Press will also be utilized, an arrangement for a cooperative tieup with Roy Wilson Howard's "U. P." having been concluded during the week. United Press will have no other interest in the reel. The arrangement will work out similarly to that existing between the related International News Service and Metrotone News, both William Randolph Hearst properties.

Six days will be spent in production, and on the seventh day release prints will be placed in transit on fast planes, going forth from the independent De Luxe Laboratories in New York. The present newsreel system of releasing 104 reels a year—twice weekly—requires three days of production, or less. Time is one of the basic elements in this system of hurried "scoop" coverage.

Of interest to the trade at large is the fact that Time Magazine's debut in motion pictures will bring to the industry in the fall the second new newsreel structure, the Hearst interests having already completed arrangements to compile its own reels, a joint news-gathering plan with Fox having been cancelled by the Hearst interests early in the summer. MGM will continue to release Hearst Metrotone News.

Of interest to the exhibitor in the field

Worldwide Camera News Gathering Staff Is Now Being Organized; United Press Will Aid in Coverage Cooperatively would be Time's rental and the method of distribution. Neither of these matters have been determined.

At the moment it appears very unlikely that any tieup, such as the joint Fox-Hearst arrangement, will be effected with any of the large distributors now marketing a reel (Fox, MGM, Paramount, Pathe, Universal). Nor is it likely that a deal will be made with any of the non-participants in the newsreel field (Columbia, United Artists, Warners and the independents).

"Time" indicated on Wednesday that a new and "radical" method of distribution is being considered. Following completion of a confidential study of the industry's distribution and exhibition structure and system, the management will determine through which channel its reel will be delivered.

In any event, production by "Time" is definite.

The plan in its present form would not permit of the issuance of more than one reel weekly. In order to effect quicker distribution the company will probably use twice the number of prints than are required to blanket the market according to present newsreel distribution schedules.

Newsreel sales to theatres by large distributors are made comparatively easy when the distributor ties-in the newsreel with his feature product in negotiating a new sales contract with the exhibitor. This is done frequently, the exhibitor being compelled to buy the newsreel in order to obtain the features. The theatre owner usually needs the features and so he must, of necessity, contract for the newsreel. Time Magazine will have no such wedge as merely an independent producer of a weekly newsreel.

Some exhibitors have inquired of Motion Picture Herald's "Code Question Box" whether they have any protection under the industry's NRA code against the practice of distributors tying-in newsreels with features. There is none.

Then, too, large companies do not find any difficulty in disposing of their newsreel to competitive distributors' large circuit affiliations, because of the buying power they hold themselves with their own circuit properties. Time's independent reel will not be in the favorable position of negotiating large contracts through such connections.

The probabilities that both of these threatening distribution handicaps may reduce sales possibilities of an independently-released "Time" reel do not appear to worry the management of the magazine. They disagree with the opinion held in some quarters that a tieup with one of the large corporations is necessary for the successful sale of the reel.

On the other hand, Time is in a rather enviable position with its radio broadcasts and

"If I Were A Theatre Manager"

by THE REVEREND WILLIAM S. DANDO

Perhaps inspired by a certain social consciousness growing out of recent agitations, when the staff of Fox West Coast Service Corporation, met in convention assembled at the Jayhawk hotel in Topeka last week, it had as its guest speaker a minister, the Reverend William S. Dando, Presbyterian, from Emporia, Kansas. His address presented an even tempered outlook on the community responsibilities and opportunities of the motion picture theatre, together with an appreciation of the all too human traits of producers and audiences alike. A condensed version of his address is presented here.—THE EDITOR.

AS human life is at present situated, and for that matter constituted, we probably need more play houses than libraries, and of course their organization and control call for more than casual attention. Taking it by and large, people are neither dangerously bad nor positively good, and it is easy to mess up the thing by imposing on them a lot of standardized stupidities. Of courst, no method ever devised by man for the discipline and direction of life can compare with a good home—a home that radiates good will, good judgment, and good taste: But the home has become an uncertain quantity; its secrecies have been invaded and its prerogatives usurped by commercial and social agents who have taken over many of its older functions. A new and world extensive mentality has been built into the modern scene.

Talent, health, friendship, sex culture, taste operate along old and well known lines, and Mr. Man has ascertained some dependable ways and means of understanding and interpreting them. He has exploded the theory for instance, that it is wise to familiarize oneself with evil in order to learn how to combat it. He knows that laughter is not the unpardonable sin, but is one of the finest of the physiological functions, and that the play element is one of nature's safety valves.

I am not quite ready to believe that the salacious and abnormal aspects of life furnish a true cross-cut section of human experience, that the neurotic and erotic types control, the attitude of yellow journalism and gaudy moviedom notwithstanding. And yet I would be the last one to vote for a drab press and an insipid screen. Alongside our cherished freedom of the Press must be maintained an equally well ballasted right of way for the freedom of the camera.

Though I must admit that sometimes I imagine it insults my inteligence and shocks my sensitiveness, as when the courtesan ousts the madonna, as when blood and muck is sprinkled with perfume and as when the bawdy wise crack runs away with the show. I hate to see a big premium put on profanity and lewdness.

The fact is, the Screen is an instrument of such range and quality that I am jealous for its prestige and its usefulness. I don't want too much of either Salome of Mrs. Grundy.

I go to the Play House as often as I reasonably can and am not confined to one or two types of show. I like historical romances, either in fidelity or in burlesque; I luxuriate in extravaganzas like the Gold Diggers. The lilt, color, rhythm, costume dances and the repartee and pantomime are medicinal. It is not hard for me to see that the Movie Talkie has been a blessing to many in these depression times. You can't foot up that value on a blackboard.

The mere act of showing or witnessing pictures on Sunday does not disturb me greatly. In fact, it is conceivable they might become a source of social good and of community harmony. The real point at issue is elsewhere. A good picture shown in good faith, and redeemed of a too blatant box office psychology might not impossibly impart to Sunday a degree of character of adjustment very much needed today. And I who am saying this very much deplore the invasion of continental licenses into Sunday. It is more a part of my temperament and training to hold the good day inviolate to some of its better traditions.

But as a Business Manager I would exercise whatever right I might have in making possible such showings on Sunday as would not coarsely or carelessly violate the nobler sanctions of the community spirit and taste.

I would want to feel that in my position I was actually crediting and sustaining good taste, not belittling or debasing it. .

I see a slow process of adjustment and a constantly improving technique, by which I hope the movies will work out their own salvation and perhaps some of ours.

If I were a manager of a Picture House I would try to get a refocus on my business, day by day, forever sifting my judgment with ever more facts and with more disciplined observation. And as far as it was practicable, I would communicate my findings and share my opinions on the principle of Community Mindedness, identifying myself with the best traditions of my town and the larger aspirations of its real citizenship. We complain and often rightly so that ministers have a detached perspective but I have known producers and promoters of the Silver Screen of whom the same thing could have been said.

Perhaps not all managers are fitted, either by temperament or training for this sort of community and scientific interest, but its advantages are readily seen.

As a manager in an average community I would have to reckon with the inevitable Puritan Complexes. I should remind myself frequently that the complex is not all bad. There are elements of strength and beauty in it which I could not deny nor try to deplore. On the other hand it is my most inveterate foe and does not always fight with clean swords; it often puts poison on the point.

As we intimated a while back, this Puritan Complex must have a scapegoat on which to pin the sins of the generation. Prohibition was a similar subterfuge for everything was charged up to that. The War was another blanket cause of everything wrong since. Even the Automobile has been damned as the vilest jurggernaut that ever polluted the common highways. Like fire and water all these things are bad masters, but good servants.

Some of these groups seem inclined to pick on the movies and as a manager I couldn't afford to be too touchy. I am not trying to say that the manager should turn preacher or reformer, but if the theatre is acknowledged as among the greatest of the educative forces, then I have a dignified relationship on my hands, which is worth a lot of my energy, thought and enthusiasm. I can avoid unfavorable and drastic external regulation in the measure I determine my policy on creative social impulses, on my community loyalty and understanding.

Personally I am not so much upset by the so-called baneful pictures as by the banal ones; not the insane but the inane antics. It is the absence of taste and the resort to vulgarity, is where I get my bad moments. All this I know, may sound unpracticable. Entirely slapstick and bizarre effects are the bill of fare demanded by the perverted taste of a moronic constituency. It probably meets their need and responds to their taste but it is poison to other types and other communities and so should not be shoved around indiscriminately.

HAYS TELLS BISHOPS PRODUCTION CODE SHOWING DEFINITE RESULTS

Letter Sent by MPPDA Head To Archbishop McNicholas Brings a Very Cordial Reply Indicating an Understanding

An exchange of letters between Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, was made public this week.

Archbishop McNicholas is chairman of the Catholic Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures, appointed at a conference of American bishops held in Washington, D. C., last November. Wrote Mr. Hays:

August 10, 1934.

The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O.P.
Archbishop of Cincinnati,
Norwood, Ohio
Your Excellency:

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the members of which produce a very large per cent of the motion pictures in the United States, is happy to be able to inform Your Excellency that arrangements previously outlined which are intended more effectively to influence the character of motion pictures produced by members of our Association have been carried into effect. These arrangements are producing results which, when they become fully known to Your Excellency will, I believe, be a source of gratification.

Your Excellency will, I hope, realize that even with the utmost determination on our part a reasonable length of time from this point on is necessary in order that the results of our efforts may become known and generally understood. In this connection, likewise, it is our hope that the confusion now arising from black and white lists may be avoided. It would be a means toward a better understanding and more rapid progress toward our common objective if these instances were eliminated in which in one locality a particular picture is placed on a recommended list and in another locality the same picture is placed on a condemned list. Without doubt these are incidents growing out of the confusion of the campaign.

We wish not to discourage, but definitely to encourage, all reasonable criticism and comment on our motion pictures. We are glad to have our motion pictures freely discussed by persons who have actually seen them and it is entirely agreeable to us to have those persons communicate their opinions of the pictures to those groups and communities with which they may be identified. Facilities for pre-release reviews of pictures to that end have been established in Hollywood. The open and frank discussion of individual pictures, which is consequent upon such deliberate and experienced information, aids materially in the discriminating selection of its entertainment by the public.

Your Excellency is informed that the organized industry has arranged to place an emblem and declaration of its approval upon each motion picture released subsequent to July 15 indicating that it conforms with and has been passed by the industry's revised plan of self-regulation. The industry is arranging to give wide publicity to the use of this emblem in its various announcements. It is proposed that company advertisements will, through the use of this emblem, identify motion pictures which have been approved. Local exhibitors will be encouraged further to afford this guidance to the public.

I am, Your Excellency,
Sincerely yours,
(s) WILL H. HAYS

Archbishop McNicholas' reply, dated August 14th, is as follows:

August 14, 1934.

My dear Mr. Hays:

I thank you for your letter of August 10th. I am pleased to learn officially from you that the industry's revised plan of self-regulation of which the Committee of Bishops was informed at its meeting on June 21st, has now been carried into effect. It is to be hoped that it will effectively and permanently influence the character of motion pictures.

One must recognize the reasonableness of the point you make concerning the time required to show proper results in the new program. It is assumed, however, that the industry will shortly give such evidences of good will and determination as to justify a confident expectation of satisfactory and permanent results.

I notice your reference to the confusion arising from the multiplicity of lists, both black and white. It is to be hoped that the emblem of your organization's approval will ultimately be the solution. If the emblem itself could be made a sufficient guarantee that any picture bearing it assures the public of a wholesome screen and is worthy of general patronage, all confusion would end.

From many sources the suggestion has been received by the Bishops' Committee that in giving approval to moving pictures certain lines of distinction be drawn. One recognizes that there are legitimate dramatic values in life, affording themes of proper and profound interest to mature minds, which would be utterly unfit for the impressionable minds of youth. Those who have thought the problem through are convinced that many pictures should bear approval for adult patronage, while others could well be approved for general patronage.

There are many motion pictures now on the market, presumably intended for circulation during the next few months, which do not bear your emblem of approval. In the application of the industry's announced agreement to allow the cancellation of such pictures in the event of protest on moral grounds, it is urged that a broad and sympathetic interpretation be given which will definitely relieve theatres under contract from the legal obligation to show pictures which are objectionable to their patrons.

It must be presumed that the right to review and to criticise a motion picture bearing the emblem of your approval cannot be restricted. In discharging its responsibility to the public by complying with the requirements of the moral code, the administration set up by your organization to regulate the character of motion pictures can and should be helped by reasonable criticism.

Your wish definitely to encourage all reasonable criticism of and comment on motion pictures is very gratifying and should prove helpful. This willingness of the industry to receive from competent sources criticism tending to guide the code administration will assure also that freedom essential to moral leadership in any given community.

The widespread organization of the Legion of Decency has a clear objective which is in no sense destructive. Its members will be urged to keep up an active interest in the moral significance of motion pictures. This interest will prove very helpful in the formation of a general and well-informed public opinion. Such a program cannot but redound to the best interests of the motion picture industry.

With best wishes, I am,
Faithfully yours,
(s) JOHN T. McNICHOLAS

The correspondence between Mr. Hays and Archbishop McNicholas was released to the daily press across the country for Monday publication and received wide and extensive attention.

COMPARATIVE USE OF RADIO

The questionnaire on the comparison of the public's use of the radio in 1934 with last year shows that the majority of persons spend the same amount of time at the loud speaker as they did in 1933. Many persons replied they were using their sets more this year than last, while some indicated less use.

The greatest increase in use of sets is shown in Milwaukee where 33 per cent of the persons reported more use. Twenty-six per cent of Chicagoans reported less use in 1934 than in 1933. The comparison follows:

City	Less	More	Same	Don't Know
Boston	24%	25%	50%	1%
Chicago	26	28	44	2
Cincinnati	27	25	43	5

SHOULD ADVERTISERS BE LIMITED

Despite the apparent popular favor for advertising on the radio listeners expressed themselves quite definitely that the time reserved for commercial announcements on programs should be limited.

Boston recorded the largest vote against limiting advertising time with St. Louis and Kansas City second and third, as follows:

Lightman on Committee Of Values of the MPTOA

M. A. Lightman, former president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has been named to the MPTOA's committee on entertainment values, which acts as a clearing house for the comments of exhibitor members on audience reactions, and their opinions of screen personalities, direction, story material and the life, which is brought to the attention of producers.

The MPTOA urges that comment and reports not be confined only to the most recent releases, since reports on the older pictures "can be just as illuminating." The announcement continues: "Here's the first real chance exhibitors have had to register intelligent comment where it will influence future production."

Prepare Test Cases Against Music Taxes

Test cases to determine the validity of increased music tax collections from theatres by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers are to be prepared by counsel for the special exhibitors' national emergency committee, according to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The move will be made as the first step in the exhibitors' battle against ASCAP's plan to increase music royalties.

The test cases, however, will be filed with the deliberate intent to permanently and completely eliminate the music fee collection and prosecution of the cases is expected to be assigned to Newton D. Baker's law firm, of Cleveland.

"Organized exhibitors are swinging solidly back of the fight, as initiated by the emergency committee, against the arbitrary and unwarranted music tax boost," said the MPTOA. "We urgently recommend that every exhibitor in the United States take time personally to write a letter of protest to his Congressman, to his two Senators and to each candidate for Congress in his district. Demand action on two things: a rigid and thorough Congressional investigation of the ASCAP and appropriate legislation by Congress to regulate the exaction they combine to extort for music for which the composer is well paid by the producer of the picture on the basis of merit, but for which you are forced to pay an arbitrary fee not based on merit or value."

Although he has not yet entered the controversy between exhibitors and the Society, Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA Division Administrator, said this week that he would not refuse to aid exhibitors if so requested.

Court Suspends State Tax Law in Washington

The state tax commission of Washington, in Seattle, has been enjoined by court order from enforcing the state business tax law of one-half of one per cent against the gross revenues of film exchanges. The suit against the state was brought by Paramount and seven other national distributors.

"Time" Magazine Will Release Its Newsreel Oct. 1 with the magazine itself offering extensive possibilities of support for the reel. The management intimated this week that the radio program, which weekly dramatizes news events for millions, and the magazine, with its 450,000 weekly readers, will both be employed to further the merchandising interests of the Time newsreel. That both of these mediums of exploitation are invaluable to the exhibitor can not be denied.

Mr. Larsen reported that the Time people are of the opinion that the reel can be sold as a supplement to newsreels where the exhibitor has already purchased the regulation number from the large distributors.

In any event, Time's officers this week vehemently denied a Broadway report that they had effected an arrangement with Fox, either for joint production or joint distribution. This story was born over the weekend when it became known that working quarters for the Time reel had been set up in the Fox Movietonews building on New York's west side. "We are in the Fox building merely as a tenant paying rent, nothing more," explained Mr. de Rochemont.

Walter Winchell started other erroneous reports about the future status of Time Magazine in motion pictures, when he declared in his syndicated "On Broadway" gossip column, that, "The entry of a famous 15-cent weekly magazine into the film business as a major producer is set for one of October's major sensations—involving the purchase of a large producing firm, plus a huge radio tieup."

Mr. Winchell batted only a one-base hit when he cautiously credited an unnamed 15-cent weekly magazine with entering the film business. He then struck out twice when he said that the magazine (1) would make its entrance as a major; (2) purchase a large producing firm.

Other reports had it that the product will embrace a series of regular one-reel dramatic subjects in which Time would dramatize in celluloid its nationally popular radio broadcast. "The March of Time." The company's motion picture efforts, concentrated not in shorts but in a newsreel, will not necessarily dramatize the Time broadcast or the news items appearing in Time-Magazine. The Time structure of presentation will be the basic note, however.

Time's radio broadcasts will be returned to the air on the evening of Friday, October 5. Last year they were sponsored by a national advertiser. The new fall program will be Time-sponsored, enabling the company to deliver to the listening public whatever of its own advertising messages it chooses.

Time's newsreel will bring to the motion picture a distinguished young editor, Henry Robinson Luce, 36-year-old Chinese-born of American parentage, who with the late Briton Hadden founded the weekly newsmagazine in 1923.

Roy E. Larsen, vice-president of Time, Inc., is the circulation and promotional executive. It has been his job of late, besides toying with a dramatic newsreel, to oversee the magazine's radio broadcasts. He is a Harvard graduate.

Mr. Larsen's father, deceased, was a noted motion picture figure some years ago when he supervised the Keith theatres in New England and managed Keith's at Boston.

Louis de Rochemont is best known in motion picture newsreel circles for his work in connection with the Fox Magic Carpet series of travelog short subjects. He was on the executive staff of Fox Movietone News for years.

WALL STREET SEES HEALTHIER BOX OFFICE RETURNS FROM NEW FILMS

Current Releases Have Met a Favorable Reception, While New Product Will Start a New Upturn, Says Dow-Jones

Gain Due to Increased Public Spending and To Decreased Expenses of Overhead and Operations of All Producers

Current motion picture releases have met a favorable reception in the field, Wall Street observers report, and with the showing of the first of the 1934-35 product in the country's theatres during the next few weeks, at the beginning of the fall show season, revenues of both large and small companies are expected to make a further upward turn in reflecting a healthier state of business at box offices.

In spite of the heat wave, the drought and the church campaign, theatre box-office receipts in the past two months have been running slightly ahead of last year.

These are the observations of Dow-Jones' Wall Street Journal, an editorial mouthpiece of the financial sector, which added that recovery in earnings of the first six months of the year by the motion picture was notable as compared with the first half of 1933.

The gain, it was said, was due partly to increased public spending power and partly to decreased operating and overhead expenses of the producing companies.

Certain cities in the field, of course, have done badly due to special local conditions, but the results on the average in the matter of earnings are satisfactory.

"The church campaign so far has had no serious effect upon box-office receipts and the industry does not expect it to have, principally because the new season's productions are designed to meet all reasonable criticisms," added the financial journal.

With a drive now on to stir up business with the new product the usual seasonal gain in box-office receipts is expected to be shown from now on.

Again it was admitted that losses from theatres have been cut to a minimum, that writeoffs of old films were completed during the first six months, and that salary and production expenses were lower.

"From the present outlook, income in the motion picture business may be expected to continue into next year at about the rate reported in the first half," it was said.

"The amusement industry has passed through three or four years of readjustment and deflation following the rapid expansion which took place in 1929 and prior years and is now fairly on the road to normal operations and earning power. This does not mean, however, that the record profits of 1928, 1929 and 1930 will be reached in the near future."

Verifying the existence of the upward trend, Wall Street Journal cited recent earnings of the large companies, as follows:

Loew's, Inc., reported for the 40 weeks ended June 7 (the first nine months of its fiscal year ending August 31), $5,750,750, or $3.45 a share on its 1,464,205 shares of capital stock, against $2,336,027, or $1.11 a share in the 1933 period.

Fox reported a net profit of $1,199,242, or 49 cents a share on its 2,426,409 shares of Class A and B common stock for the 26 weeks ended June 30.

Warner Brothers for the 39 weeks ended May 26 reported a net loss of $558,836 against a loss of $5,021,775 in the 1933 period.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum, in receivership, reported a net profit of $498,131 for the quarter ended March 31, following a loss of $4,384,064 in the year 1933.

Paramount-Publix Corporation (in receivership) has not yet reported this year.

Columbia Pictures Corporation reported for the 39 weeks ended March 31 a net profit of $739,339 equal after preferred dividends to $4.17 a share on 167,885 shares of common stock against $546,778, or $3.02 a share on the 1933 period. "Columbia owns no theatres and is exclusively a film production company so that it has not had the problems of many of the larger companies. Due to its small capital one highly successful picture has an important effect on earnings available for the common stock," it was said.

Says Fox Comes Back Quickest

The Dow-Jones interests sounded a generally optimistic note in its appraisal of the individual companies, which follows:

"Drastic changes that have taken place in the industry have necessitated a new appraisal of the outlook of the various film producers. Loew's, Inc., is the only major film theatre company that has not gone through any serious financial difficulties, so that it may be considered the present leader in the industry in financial position and earnings. Reduction in leases of theatres operated by subsidiaries has reduced overhead. In 1933 unusually heavy write-offs were necessary to bring film inventories down to a value consistent with the reduced level of general business. However, the company has had no reorganization of capital or personnel which were unsettling factors in other companies.

"Fox Film Company, the first to reorganize its capital structure, now has no funded debt and was the first of the reorganized companies to get back to normal operations. Obviously changes in financial structure or in management personnel are disturbing to the smooth running of a business. Fox has had a good record of film successes and its lack of theatres under current conditions is an asset.

Radio-Keith Has Still to Reorganize

"Warner Brothers, which acquired a heavy funded debt consisting largely of obligations of the parent company, has not reorganized and although it has scaled down debt of subsidiaries and theatre rentals its overhead is still large so that earnings have not shown the same degree of recovery as other companies that have more drastically revised their capital structure.

"Radio-Keith-Orpheum has not as yet prepared a reorganization plan. This company, the newest among the large companies, has, practically speaking, only gotten into its stride in the last few years. The attempt to create a full grown producing and theatre company during the boom period of expansion was obviously difficult. Its film production programs have been greatly improved in the last few years. New stars and directors have been acquired in the general shift in the industry which has been under way and the company now ranks with other leaders in quality of productions. Its theatre division is less successful but probably can be reorganized on a basis that will show the parent company no operating losses.

"Paramount, formerly the largest company in the field, is now on the eve of reorganization following a year of receivership. Separately incorporated theatre owing subsidiaries are being reorganized on a basis that will enable them to run "in the black" and it is probable that the company will come out of receivership with its large chain of theatres virtually intact. Large cash balances have been built up during the receivership that will greatly facilitate reorganization. The film division of the company operated at a substantial profit, about $1,600,000, in the first quarter of this year and the theatres whose statements are not consolidated have been slightly "in the black." Changes in management personnel inevitable during a receivership have undoubtedly to some extent disorganized normal operation of the business and the company has also lost a few important stars. However, film production quality is holding up well and the outlook for earnings for the remainder of this year seems favorable."

Fox Circuit Bids Off Under New Bankruptcy Law

Federal Judge Julian W. Mack in U. S. District Court, New York, last week signed an order placing the 87 theatres comprising the Fox Metropolitan Circuit under provision 77-B of the new Federal bankruptcy laws. The move, which came after several weeks of negotiations for the circuit's assets by various bidders, principally Loew's and Warners, completely obviates any previous possibility of foreclosure sale.

Under the circuit's new bankruptcy status, Irving Trust Company becomes temporary trustee until September 12th, when a general creditors' hearing will take place before Judge Mack and a permanent trustee named. Irving Trust has been equity receiver until the present, and, it is expected, will probably be named permanent trustee.

With the bankruptcy, the circuit will continue operation intact. The possibility of any new bid for the theatres also is eliminated through Judge Mack's order.

After a new plan of reorganization is evolved, which justifies presentation to all bondholders, it will be turned over to Judge Mack for approval.

A. T. & T. Declares Dividend

The board of directors of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company last week declared a quarterly dividend of $2.25 per share on the 18,662,275 shares outstanding. The dividend is payable October 15 to stockholders of record September 15.

New Schedule of Assessments for Producing Units

There was comparative quiet during the week along the code fronts on both coasts and in the field. Developments of any importance were few, as follows:

The Code Authority was preparing to go into session on Thursday to draw another schedule of code expense assessments for producers and distributors, the NRA at Washington having ordered the original draft abandoned as a result of complaints against the size of assessments made by some 37 producers and distributors. Principal point to be established is the designation of a common denominator for taxing both distributors and producers according to annual gross income. On the Authority's finance plan are: S. R. Kent, Fox; Nathan Yamins, Allied; Harold S. Bareford, Warner; Charles L. O'Reilly, New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce.

Code assents were still being received by the Code Authority from exhibitors, although the deadline for filing was August 15.

Would Ban Premium Clause

Washington conferences being held by President Roosevelt and General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, with Administration advisers, over a permanent reorganized NRA structure, caused some speculation in the industry as to the effect of the reconstruction on the motion picture code in its relation to NRA officers and supervision. In some quarters it was believed that Sol Rosenblatt, Division Administrator, in charge of amusement codes, may be given greater power and that William P. Farnsworth, Deputy Administrator, may take over active charge of the film code, although continuing under Mr. Rosenblatt's jurisdiction.

Many exhibitors were understood to have petitioned the NRA to eliminate from the code that clause which permits of the regulation of the use of premiums. Mr. Rosenblatt replied that the NRA would not act unless modification or elimination of the clause was asked for by the industry, and in that event a public hearing would be held.

Whether a statute of limitations exists for filing complaints under the code, involving exhibitors and the trade practices, is a question that the Kansas City Grievance Board has asked the Code Authority to decide.

The Authority's contract committee will report the findings of its study of clauses in new sales contracts at the meeting on Thursday. Some exhibitors had charged that new contract clauses violated code clauses. The code takes precedence over contracts.

Zoning Hearings in New York

The 64 Local Grievance and Local Clearance Boards in the field have disposed of 1,000 complaints since they started hearings on May 15.

The Authority abandoned its plan to establish sub-committees in the field to hear complaints against new clearance and zoning schedules. Instead, all hearings will be held in New York. The Milwaukee schedule was disposed of last week, while on Tuesday the Code Authority heard appeals on the schedule for Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport, Conn. The large circuits and distributors struck hard at the Connecticut clearance draft.

On August 28 the trade in Cincinnati, Columbus, and Dayton, Ohio, will travel to New York to be on hand for the appeals hearing on the schedule for those cities. On August 29 appeals will be heard for the schedule for Cleveland and Toledo, while on August 30 the Detroit draft will be aired.

Dozens of decisions were handed down in the field this week by Local Grievance Boards in cases brought by exhibitors against other exhibitors for alleged violations of the various code trade practices. The Code Authority, too, was active, deciding many appeal cases taken on decisions previously rendered by the Grievance Boards.

In Hollywood, the Extras' Standing Committee was prepared to mail 12,000 questionnaires to determine the extras to be selected for registration.

The legitimate theatre code emerged from hearings in New York and was sent to the NRA at Washington.

The film laboratory code was finally finished. At the last hearing attempts to establish minimum prices were abandoned. A minimum wage of $16 weekly was agreed to.

Kirk Russell, of MPPDA, Dies

Kirk Russell, 62-year-old newspaper cartoonist and newspaperman of the old school, and the executive newspaper contact for the Hays organization, died in New York last Saturday morning. The end came from paralysis of the throat and complications.

A Masonic funeral service at Scarsdale in Westchester was attended by most of the staff of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

Mr. Russell was born in Cleveland on the morning of November 28, 1872. In his first working days he was a telegrapher, later joining the postal service, where he became a friend and associate of Will H. Hays, then the Postmaster General.

Mr. Hays took Mr. Russell with him into the motion picture business when the MPPDA was formed, some 12 years ago. He was well known to most of the country's newspaper editors and city desks. It was said that it was his watchfulness that kept the Hays executives informed of the editorial attitude of the press toward the industry.

Newspapers and magazines knew him, too, as a cartoonist. Sometimes he appended the appellation "Mingo" to his drawings, dozens of which he drew to ridicule the "blue nose" type of reformer.

Speaking for his colleagues at the Hays organization, Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel, said, "Kirk Russell was genuine in every sense of the word. He will be sorely missed by all who knew him."

Fairbanks Returns to Hollywood Production

Douglas Fairbanks, one of the star-owners of United Artists, returned to Hollywood this week from England. He announced, after a long absence from Hollywood Boulevard, that he would again produce in California, making one or two pictures a year, the first to be "Marco Polo," for which he will travel to China shortly, for exteriors.

Many of the old Fairbanks silent productions will be reenacted in talkers, although he may not appear in all of them.

Alicoate Sails for Survey

John W. Alicoate, publisher of The Film Daily, sailed for Europe last week on a survey tour of studio activities abroad. He will be gone about one month. Louis Nizer, film attorney, was among his fellow passengers.

Peter Clark, Noted Stage, Equipment Builder, Dies at 56

Peter Clark, the president and founder of Peter Clark, Inc., New York, theatre stage builders, died early this week at his summer home at Fairfield, Conn. Mr. Clark had suffered for some months of a kidney ailment, and was 56 years old.

Often described as one of the foremost theatrical technicians, one of his most widely known inventions was the hydraulic lift for elevating theatre orchestras or organ consoles to varying levels. His development of counterweights vastly simplified the problems of scene shifting. The stages of Radio City's great Music Hall and the RKO Center theatre in New York were Mr. Clark's achievement. His last task was the remodeling of the RKO Center stage, so that "The Great Waltz" could be presented during the coming season.

Born in New York March 19, 1878, Peter Clark attended public school, worked in the iron works of his father, and took a mechanical engineering course at Cooper Union. Having learned the iron business to his satisfaction, Mr. Clark and Hugh Lavery formed the stage construction and equipment firm of Clark and Lavery in 1905. Four years later, buying out his partner, Mr. Clark's firm became simply Peter Clark, Inc., and thus has remained ever since.

In 1907 he formed a connection with Florenz Ziegfeld, working on every Ziegfeld production from that time until the death of the producer. He built the equipment for the Hippodrome in New York, designed mechanical illusions for the Music Box Revues and worked on many of Sam Harris's shows. It was his very proud boast that he could put together any illusion that was physically possible.

Perhaps his most famous illusion, which mystified and delighted audiences for years, was that of groups of bathing girls calmly strolling into pools of water, and vanishing. It was a simple trick, based on the fact that air pressure can hold back water. It was said that Mr. Ziegfeld outdid the others in ordering difficult and unusual stage effects, but Earl Carroll is credited with the trickiest trick the firm ever handled, an undersea scene for the "Vanities" which opened the new Earl Carroll theatre in 1931.

His biggest single task was for charity, the staging last summer of "The Romance of a People," the pageant depicting the history of the Jewish race. The sets were built on a vast scale, for the open air, and then had to be moved to an armory, which taxed the strength of Mr. Clark.

Surviving are his wife, two daughters and five sons.

New Technicolor Stock Arranged

Technicolor's stockholders have approved a proposal to eliminate the corporation's 100,000 preferred shares and to increase the common from 800,000 to 1,000,000 shares. Action was taken in line with the plan to revise the capital structure.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS ACCEPT BREEN PRODUCTION CODE SEAL

Hollywood Producers Hold Formal Discussions with Production Code Administrator on Submission of Their Pictures

BULLETIN

Independent producers late Wednesday agreed to accept the Production Code Administration seal, at a Coast meeting. I. E. Chadwick, independent producer, was elected to represent independents in the MPPDA review of pictures, sitting in with Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator. Independents and the MPPDA agreed to combine their strength in maintaining right moral standards.

The sentiment of a large section of the independent production structure in Hollywood suddenly started to swing this week toward official participation with MPPDA member companies in the Production Code Administration, governed by Joseph I. Breen, for controlling the moral standards of motion pictures in keeping with the requirements of the Legion of Decency.

However, there is one independent production faction, apparently headed by W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, which does not favor working with the Hays Production Code Administration.

In an effort to adjust the differences existing in the independent ranks over the use of Breen code machinery, Trem Carr, a leading independent, outlined arguments for and against the seal, at a meeting on Wednesday.

If and when the independents decide in favor of the Administration system of "censorship," socalled—and it appears likely that they will so decide immediately—I. E. Chadwick, another independent leader, will represent the producing group at private conferences with Mr. Breen to arrive at a plan for facilitating a fair distribution of the certificates and seals among the indedendents. The independents will pay a part of the cost of code machinery expense.

One of the problems raised by the independents at their meeting with Mr. Breen was whether or not the facilities of the Administration are adequate for handling the large number of independent pictures which would be submitted immediately in the event the independents agreed to participate.

Attending the meetings, besides Mr. Johnston and Mr. Carr, were M. H. Hoffman, Kenneth Goldsmith, Larry Darmour and I. E. Chadwick.

The complaint voiced last week by independents, that circuit theatres controlled by the large interests are discriminating against their product because it does not bear the code seal, was echoed in Hollywood over the weekend by Mr. Johnston, who on the eve of leaving California for a northwest sales tour, declared that the independents refused Mr. Breen's offer of the facilities of the Administration for obtaining seals for independent pictures.

The remarks of Mr. Johnston, vigorously attacking the Hays "censorship," had been voiced before the swing of independent sentiment toward the Administration regulations had become apparent.

Independent producers will not be governed by the Hays office, declared Mr. Johnston in refusing Mr. Breen's offer.

He said that "the point at issue is not that we cannot get the seals, but that we should not be compelled to use the facilities of the Hays organization, even at the moderate cost they have suggested. Inasmuch as every producer is asked to contribute to the upkeep of the Code Authority, one of its duties under the industry's NRA code should be the enforcement of the morals code as well.

"We do not consider the Hays organization the moral guardian of the motion picture industry," declared Mr. Johnston. "Nor do we intend to let any organization whose whole aim and interest has been at such wide variance with our own set itself up as a board of censorship for any part of the industry which has no voice in the government of the controlling body."

Mr. Johnston's remarks appeared to be the sentiment of the unnamed independent producers who oppose the submission of their product to Mr. Breen.

Expresses Independent Feeling

"The independent producers are heartily in favor of the decency campaign," Mr. Johnston continued, "but they believe that the Code Authority and not the Hays office should be the final court of appeal.

"Pictures made by independents were not the ones which brought on the present national clean picture campaign, which on the contrary can be laid to the lax enforcement of the Hays moral code. Independent producers have experienced little or no censorship difficulties," he said.

Mr. Johnston also declared that it was his understanding that the Hays office, in its "eleventh hour" decision to give a seal to Larry Darmour's (Majestic) "Scarlet Letter," had advised Mr. Darmour that independent producers availing themselves of the Hays office "censorship" service must bear a share of the cost.

Last week, Mr. Johnston said that the independents—he did not reveal identities—will ask the Code Authority at its next meeting to enact a code of morals and to set up machinery for regulating motion picture standards. This, however, the Code Authority is not empowered to do.

Meanwhile, an unnamed independent producer is understood to have asked Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA Division Administrator in charge of amusement codes, to investigate the MPPDA for its alleged discrimination in the issuance of production code seals. It was indicated in Washington that Mr. Rosenblatt will confer about the matter with the Hays officials.

Breen to Go on Air

Mr. Rosenblatt was understood to have been informed by the unnamed independent that various independent producers have been submitting their pictures, voluntarily, to the Production Code Administration, and that these pictures have been accorded certificates of approval, but do not receive a seal for inclusion in the leader of the production. This seal is supposed to be attached to all product before it will be shown in theatres belonging to Hays members, it was charged.

The Hays office indicated that Mr. Rosenblatt had not communicated with any of its executives regarding the complaint.

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, Darryl Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century Pictures, arranged for a series of broadcasts, beginning on the evening of August 29, at five p. m. (Pacific Time), to be delivered by Mr. Breen as code Administrator, on the subject of motion pictures.

W. Ray Johnston Apparently the Leader of the Faction in Opposition to the Use of Hays Plan for Securing Seals

Urging exhibitors to "get behind" motion pictures and asserting it is high time the exhibitor tells "his home folks that the show at his theatre is really better than ever before," the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week issued a lengthy bulletin purporting to prove that future films have not been and will not be weakened by studio concessions to the church crusade.

The bulletin declares that production compliance with the aims of the Legion of Decency does not, however, relieve the exhibitor of the problem of juvenile attendance at his theatre and urges the MPTOA membership to develop special family night programs and selected pictures for children.

"We should not permit the idea to grow that pictures are wishy-washy and namby-pamby as a result of the church crusade," the bulletin states. "It is not true. Red-blooded, thrilling, dramatic entertainment is being shown, maybe minus the vulgarities and indecencies, but just as robust and with as much punch and entertainment value as ever. It's about time the exhibitor told his home folks that the show at his theatre is really better than ever before."

Throughout the field the church campaign for better pictures appeared to have quieted down appreciably. At Albany, a joint legislative committee to make a thorough study of motion picture censorship would be created under a resolution introduced in the Assembly this week.

"Education psychology" is the answer to the clean film problem, said Rev. William D. McLean, at Chicago.

At Cincinnati, the Fraternal Order of Eagles defeated a resolution to participate in the Legion of Decency movement.

Protestant churches of New Orleans, with exception of Lutherans, oppose censorship.

Methodist Episcopal churches throughout the country pledge themselves to boycott films offending decency, "public morality and the Christian ideals of life."

In San Francisco Catholic churches ceased publication of their blacklists and started "stressing" the white lists.

At Vatican City Italian film fans were taken to task by Osservatore Romano, the Vatican's official organ, for failing to cooperate in the Catholic drive against objectionable films.

Washington film reformers asked Will Hays whether the code, producers or exhibitors are responsible for bad films.

Clean and Classic

Here is a test of the public cry for clean films. "Treasure Island," the Stevenson classic of high adventure, the book for boyhood's own heart, has been screened. The film will have its world premiere at Loew's State Theater next Friday. It is a marvelous book. It should make a marvelous film, thrilling and entertaining but utterly free from taint.

An excellent chance, this, for the screen-going public to show its appreciation of a clean film and to encourage producers to offer this type of entertainment. If clean, wholesome films receive box office support, as they should, then the problem of the unwholesome film will be settled the right way.

Treasure Island

Long John Silver, beloved rogue of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island," comes to Boston this week, in a talkie opening Friday at Loew's State.

Here is a response to the demand for cleaner movies. In "Treasure Island" the public should find cleanliness and action, literature and charm.

Buccaneers, hidden gold, pirate ships, stranded men! What a hearty dish to set before a people!

"What fool's cut a Bible?" thundered Long John Silver.

"No good'll come o' that," moaned Morgan.

What wise man made "Treasure Island" a talkie? Good ought to come o' that.

A Clean Picture

With the agitation for cleaner movies it will be interesting to note the public's response to "Treasure Island," announced for its world premiere at Loew's State Theater Friday.

Here is an excellent chance for the public to express approval towards elevating the tone of pictures.

This immortal masterpiece by Robert Louis Stevenson has delighted and excited countless millions of readers, and now that it has found its way to the screen we trust it will enjoy an equal measure of success.

(Boston Post)

"TREASURE ISLAND"

The screen version of Robert Louis Stevenson's masterpiece, "Treasure Island," is to have its world premiere in this city on Friday. This is important for two reasons, first that the film will undertake to reproduce a great adventure story, and, second, that there can be no possible objection to its character, provided the adapters stick to the tale and do not attempt to drag in any extraneous dirt—indeed, it is difficult to see how they can do that.

While "Treasure Island" is primarily a story for the youngsters with good red blood in their veins, it also has a certain fascination for grown-ups. It should make a first-class movie and those who go to see it ought to take a new lease of their youth besides encouraging what is said to be a perfectly clean picture. In these latter days there has not been any too many of that sort.

Now is the time to go to your editor for the co-operation which this glorious entertainment merits from the press!

CODE "MONOPOLY" HIT AS ALLIED MEETS

Myers Charges "Big Eight" with "Politics" in Speech Prepared for Atlantic City Convention

Some 200 independent motion picture exhibitor members of the Allied States Association, chiefly from the eastern sections of the country, descended Wednesday upon Atlantic City, N. J., to attend the 15th annual convention of that organization, this year being held coincidentally with the eastern regional conference of seven Allied units.

Officially the convention was scheduled to get under way on Wednesday; actually the majority of its participants were ensconced at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on the Boardwalk Tuesday afternoon for unofficial preliminary "sessions."

Heading the various contingents was Sidney Samuelson, Allied of New Jersey chieftain, who for one year also has been chief executive of the national body. New officers for the national Allied were scheduled to be elected Tuesday night, but whether or not Mr. Samuelson would accept reelection appeared somewhat problematical.

Might Reject Resignation

For some weeks past Mr. Samuelson had not committed himself with respect to possible reelection to the Allied presidency. It was understood the membership "would not let him resign."

Mr. Samuelson had given the industry to understand that his local activities—meaning New Jersey—had not been giving him enough time to devote to national affairs. Whether or not a $5,000 offer made by the "local" will make any difference remained to be seen, the offer not having been disclosed by Mr. Samuelson until Wednesday.

Despite the interest which always precedes the election of new officers or the reelection of old ones, the chief event of the convention was to have been the annual message of Abram F. Myers, chairman of the Allied board and general counsel, scheduled for the closing session of the meeting on Thursday.

Earlier in the week Mr. Myers' office had sent out copies of the general counsel's speech, which gave every indication that Mr. Myers would not fail his cohorts in living up to his reputation as a masterful speaker. The copy of his speech ran six full-length single spaced legal pages!

Myers Cites Many Evils

Some of the highlights of Mr. Myers' contemplated oration follow:

"If it be true that 'whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth,' then the independent exhibitors must have stood high in Divine favor during the past year. The depression will, in due course, pass out by natural processes, if not hindered by too much experimentation in government. But in the matter of the intolerable burdens fastened upon them by the NRA and the combinations of producers, theatrical chains and copyright owners under color of the laws of the United States—which are by far the most serious blows suffered during the past year because the most enduring—the exhibitors can and must strike lusty blows for their liberation and the preservation of their rights.

"Adoption by the industry of the proposals, resolutions and pleas of Allied since her formation early in 1929 would have spared the industry the ruinous results of overbuilding, the campaign of the Legion of Decency and other reform bodies, the extortionate demands being made by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and would have prevented the coming struggles in the uncertain and dangerous field of politics in which the several divisions of the industry will engage in a struggle that will prove a spectacle for gods and men," Mr. Myers is quoted.

Mr. Myers then launched into a dissertation of the reasons for the success of the producers in "gaining unfair and discriminatory preferences and advantages from the government."

Mr. Myers accused certain producers of making "bold bids for favors" in cultivating the friendship of politicians and in contributing to their campaign funds, stating that this was one of the reasons for the apparent government sanction to the alleged monopoly of the "Big Eight."

Advises Caution in Morals Drive

The Allied counsel then went on to say that the motion picture Code Authority had at no time hesitated to use the power vested in it by the Code to ruthlessly select the members of the local boards and in preventing the clearance and zoning boards from taking action to relieve the exhibitors from evils of unreasonable protection.

Mr. Myers touched briefly upon the campaign of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to increase the reproduction seat tax from 100 to 600 per cent. He intimated that, because of ASCAP's political connections, the law would in all probability sustain the organization's demands.

Of the Legion of Decency campaign, Mr. Myers advised exhibitors to proceed cautiously, but "to work with these groups and obtain their sympathy and support in solving exhibitor problems—such as compulsory block booking, designated playdates and other practices—which directly affect the public and in which those bodies have a legitimate interest."

Allied units attending the convention were the MPTO of Maryland, Allied Theatre Owners of Rhode Island, Independent Exhibitors of New England, Allied Theatre Owners of New Hampshire, Allied Theatre Owners of New York, Allied Theatre Owners of Vermont, and New Jersey Allied.

Film Aid Seen In Tariff Bargaining

By FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

A materially broadened field for American motion pictures overseas is seen by Administration officials in the reciprocal trade agreements which are now in negotiation.

Not only is expansion of film exports anticipated as a result of treaties under which foreign countries now having quotas or other barriers will relax their regulations, but a general improvement in trade is expected to be reflected in heavier theatre attendance abroad, bringing about an increase in the number of theatres and a consequent demand for more pictures.

First Agreement with Cuba

The first of the agreements to be negotiated under the reciprocal tariff legislation enacted by Congress last session was consummated, as expected, with Cuba shortly after President Roosevelt returned to Washington from his trip to Hawaii.

Details of that agreement are being closely guarded but, so far as can be learned, no mention is made of motion pictures. Nevertheless, it is expected that the stimulation to trade given by the pact will shortly serve to improve the position of the Cuban exhibitors.

While in several foreign countries American films have been handicapped by quotas, import restrictions, exchange regulations and like barriers, it is said, domestic producers have been suffering in most areas from depression conditions which have resulted in the closing of theatres or their switching to cheaper films from other sources.

Expect General Improvement

While the only direct effort of the Administration to serve the producers will be in such countries as have erected artificial barriers against our films, it is believed that a general improvement in conditions will come about gradually in all countries as our markets for their major products are widened, and that this increased prosperity will be almost immediately reflected in the amusement industries.

At the same time, it is said, the film industry is one of the few in this country which need not fear increased competition from abroad as a result of the new trade agreements.

It is not expected that any great increase in picture imports will result from these treaties, although a few countries with production ambitions would like to have their pictures shown generally throughout the United States. For the most part, however, they realize that their type of film is not particularly popular in America, although experience has shown that when an outstanding picture is produced it can be shown here to good advantage.

Pathe to Vote on A Reorganization; Plans Expansion

That Pathe Exchange, Inc., may return to active motion picture production in the role of financier as a result of its reorganization plan—announced to the industry about four weeks ago—appeared likely this week, although official confirmation or denial of this has not been obtained. It is known, however, that Pathe has an expansion program planned and that under the proposed financial reorganization a provision is made for new working capital up to $4,000,000. The proposed reorganization, together with an explanation of the contemplated expansion will be submitted to company stockholders at a meeting September 11.

In a letter to the stockholders, Stuart W. Webb, president, cites prospects of improved earnings, both as a result of the planned expansion and of new laboratory contracts recently entered into by Pathe which will increase the company's laboratory business during the second half of this year.

Earnings of Pathe Exchange for the first six months of the year amounted to $116,433, after deducting all expenses, taxes, amortization and depreciation, but before interest charges. This compares with earnings of $40,154 for the corresponding six months of 1933. The company's net profit after interest totaled $42,642, compared with a loss of $54,274 for the corresponding six months of last year, Mr. Webb's report states.

Pathe's current assets as of June 30, 1934, including $513,000 cash, amounted to $1,069,326, and current liabilities were $159,799. This compares with cash of $620,936, current assets of $1,069,196 and current liabilities of $152,664 on December 30, 1933.

Consolidated income account for the six months ended June 30, 1934, compares as follows:

Zukor To Devote Most Of Time to Production

Emanuel Cohen, in charge of Paramount Production on the Coast, announced last week that Adolph Zukor, company president, will in the future spend the greater part of his time on the Coast. The announcement followed Mr. Zukor's return to Hollywood from New York. The studio will have 30 pictures in production between now and November 1, Mr. Cohen said, an average of one going into production every two days.

Zanuck Budgets $6,500,000 for Ten Productions

Darryl Zanuck's return to Hollywood this week from New York and Europe was immediately followed by an announcement that a budget for Twentieth Century's 10 1934-35 productions has been set at $6,500,000, nearly double the total spent by the company on 1933-34 releases, and averaging $650,000 per negative for the new product. Production on the first will start in three weeks.

Mr. Zanuck, whose company releases through United Artists, had been to Europe with Joseph M. Schenck, United Artists president, and while abroad engaged talent and purchased story and play material.

Regarding the Legion of Decency movement, which reached a climax while Mr. Zanuck was abroad, he declared the drive need not alarm Hollywood to the point of excluding sex from pictures. "It is all a matter of proper handling of situations," he added.

Film Man Appeals Claim Against Bankrupt Company

J. Don Alexander, president of the Alexander Film Company, Colorado Springs, has appealed his claim against the defunct Alexander Industries, Inc., for $118,858, to the United States Supreme Court. He claims he loaned $135,000 to the company and that only $20,000 was returned. The trustee in bankruptcy held that instead of the company owing Alexander, he owed the company $40,000. The Alexander Industries, Inc., now bankrupt, manufactured airplanes. The claim of Alexander was denied by the lower federal courts.

Pugh Forms Export Firm

Ralph J. Pugh plans the formation of the Motion Picture Export Corporation, with temporary headquarters at 55 West 42d street, New York. Thomas W. James will be president and treasurer and Mr. Pugh, as vice-president and general manager, will handle foreign sales of independent pictures produced here and abroad.

Has New Sound Device

A device which is said to permit broadcast sound to reach the ear from a wide angle with increased realism has been invented by Maximilian Weil, New York electro-acoustic consulting engineer. The invention is called the "audio projector."

NRA Upholds Code Authority Duals Decision

That the motion picture code of fair competition affords protection to small enterprizes within the industry is the contention of the National Recovery Administration in Washington. NRA officials commented this week on the decision made by the Code Authority prohibiting Clearance Boards from penalizing theatres playing dual bills.

"The Milwaukee clearance and zoning board, one of the self-governing units of the Code Authority, had drafted a zoning schedule to penalize exhibitors playing double features," NRA asserted. "Independent producers and exhibitors appealed to the Code Authority, inasmuch as many independent productions are part of double feature programs and numerous smaller theatres depend upon offering their patrons dual features."

MPTOA Questions Decision

The NRA then upheld the Code Authority's decision in the question which maintained there could be no discrimination or penalty whatsoever against theatres playing double features in the drafting of new clearance and zoning schedules.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week, however, appeared to be dissatisfied with the decision of the Code Authority on the Milwaukee appeal. In a bulletin the MPTOA stated in part:

"Fortunately rulings of the Code Authority can be reversed at any time by a majority vote. There is nothing in the code to prevent individual exhibitors taking clearance as they see fit over double feature houses. If unfair double feature competition spreads as a result to the detriment of exhibitors, the responsibility rests squarely on the interests who put this one over."

Independent producers and distributors may retain Lowell Mason, special counsel for the New York Independent Theatre Owners' Association, as counsel in their fight on bans on dual bills.

Circuits Agree to Ban Duals

Double features are not considered to be an "industry evil" in Akron, Ohio, according to Robert Menches, head of the local exhibitor organization.

Loew's in New York this week reported its willingness to drop duals in Greater New York and New Jersey provided all other theatres take similar action. Both Allied of New Jersey and the Independent Theatre Owners Association are eager to end double bills in New York if the circuits will cooperate with them. Warners and Skouras Brothers were the first large circuits in the New York territory to take the first step in the adoption of a strictly single bill policy at its theatres. The Warner circuit has signed 56 houses in Northern New Jersey to an agreement banning duals and the Skouras Brothers have added their 16 Jersey theatres.

In St. Louis, however, the move to end duals is temporarily off, despite the fact that every exhibitor in the city with the exception of Warners has agreed to abandon double bills.

40 MANUFACTURERS USE FILMS AT WORLD'S FAIR

Some of the Country's Largest Corporations Show Product In Pictures to Boost Sales

Some 40 of the country's largest manufacturers have accepted the motion picture for its widespread appeal as an advertising medium for building good-will for their various products, and all are now utilizing the scope of the film at the World's Fair in Chicago to dramatize to millions of Fair visitors the product, history and methods of manufacture and merchandising with all of the vividness of sight and sound.

"The use of motion pictures and of kindred devices prove that the eye is being recognized more and more as of major importance in both selling and education," according to "Sales Management," "the magazine of modern marketing."

Commercial motion pictures sponsored by national manufacturers had a short life on the screens of the country's regular motion picture theatres, some three years ago, due, principally, to the power of the press in fighting the threatening competition of films as an advertising medium and the resulting losses in advertising revenue faced by the publications. Since then films have been used extensively by the manufacturers in connection with demonstrations, sponsored showings in auditoriums and the like and at exhibits. However, they have never before been used in such concentrated fashion as at the World's Fair this year.

"Generally speaking," said Sales Management, "the films shown at the Fair have not as their purpose immediate sales. Usually, the institutional good-will building theme is emphasized. The World's Fair, too, has been a proving ground for testing out the comparative values of two types of film shows. These are the 'closed shows,' in which doors and seats figure, and the 'open show,' which may be an aisle show, which merely stops the passing crowds, or the 'stand up' show, usually in a niche or small room with railing."

Some of the showings at the Fair are presented in an expensive and elaborate fashion and utilize standard 35 mm. films. There are 11 of these, the remaining exhibits using 16 mm. film, which places them, Sales Management says, in somewhat of an amateur classification.

In addition to the 40 regular film showings, several large manufacturers are using colored slides, balopticons and similar devices which combine photography of art with illumination and often with sound. Neither do they include such exhibits as the Microvivarium, which combines the microscope and light to cast minute organisms, vastly enlarged, upon the screen.

Outstanding pictures now being used at the World's Fair are said to be those of the Ford Motor Company, Rock Island Railroad, General Motors and Chrysler among the 35 mm. groups, while in the 16 mm. classifications are those of the Northwestern Railroad, Union Carbide & Carbon, Elgin Watch, Sears, Roebuck, and Western Union.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Studebaker and Rock Island are reported to be the better examples of the so-called "closed" show. The first three have gone so far as to provide large seating capacities in air-conditioned theatres, and uniformed ushers.

Shows like those of Western Union, New York Central lines, Elgin Watch and Northwestern Railroad, have fairly liberal seating capacities, but might be termed "semi-open." These have no doors, and the audience, while seated, moves in and out at will.

The Ford Film, "Rhapsody in Steel," is generally accepted as the No. 1 film show of the Fair. The Ford theatre has 229 seats and standing room for 100 more, and is air-cooled.

The film starts with a Ford car making a brief announcement, by the use of trick photography the two bars of the bumper giving "lip motion." The illusion is that of a mighty mouth speaking. Music for the film is a specially prepared score for which Musical Director Edwin Ludig of Audio Productions, Inc., drew from the noises in the Ford factory.

The film carries practically no sales dialogue. Dramatic scenes were photographed in the Ford plant.

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

As this show is the story of Mrs. Wiggs, her brood of children and their friends and neighbors, it is distinctly a family picture. It is drama, the kind playing upon the sympathies. Yet because that motivating element is tinged with human natural comedy almost always and in one instance being given a flamboyant slapstick tinge, it is lightly impressive without being depressing. Packing a heart sock, it's not an out-and-out tear-jerker. There are too many smile-provoking contrasts for that. The direct appeal is to the home folks. It offers little to kindle the interest of the sophisticated moderns. There are romantic accompaniments, funny as they concern Zasu Pitts and W. C. Fields, but subordinate to the heart interest accruing to Mrs. Wiggs' trials and tribulations as they concern Evalyn Venable and Kent Taylor.

Nevertheless, because of the manner in which it attempts to meet the most exacting current standards, the prestige of the book from which it was adapted, the work of Pauline Lord as Mrs. Wiggs, the drawing power of Miss Pitts, Fields and Evalyn Venable, it has box office potentialities. That pull may be best reflected in the neighborhood and smaller town houses.

As the story is familiar, only a sketch of the highlights should be necessary to understand what constitutes the picture's appeal. Opening sequences in the Wiggs hovel in Cabbage Patch place the audience in the proper mood. Mrs. Wiggs, left nothing by her Klondike gold-rush-bound husband but five children, a lot of trouble and no money, ponders the governor's Thanksgiving proclamation. There's only weak stew to eat. Jimmy is dying, Asia would blow herself blue in the face and Billy is out peddling kindling. But Miss Lucy brings a big basket and the family and sympathetic Miss Hazy have a happy holiday.

As Mrs. Wiggs reanimates Billy's almost dead horse, Miss Hazy avidly peruses a matrimonial bureau pamphlet. The sway-backed nag puts Billy in the wood peddling business again and a vaudeville show is announced for the opera house. Wanting his mother to see it, Billy would trade a load of wood for a ticket but Bob makes it a family party. Although Jimmy is taken to the hospital, he insists that his mother go to the show. The family's preparations for the big night, their experiences in the opera house and the old fashioned vaudeville show are riots of fun. It turns tragic as Mrs. Wiggs is summoned to the hospital. In a sequence that won a burst of applause, she tells Jimmy about the acts, finishing just as the boy dies.

For an interlude comes the slapstick comedy romance and marriage of Miss Hazy and Stubbins. Then more trouble for Mrs. Wiggs. Avaricious mortgage holder Bagby, learning that the railroad wants the Wiggs' plot, demands his overdue money by noon. Willy would sacrifice his horse to get the necessary $25. But Bob and Lucy would intervene. A mad dash back to the hovel and Mr. Wiggs has returned. He has no bag of gold, but searching the suit given him by the Salvation Army, he finds just enough to foil hard-hearted Bagby. Then the happy ending; Miss Lucy happily rid of her no good Stubbins, the Wiggses set to enjoy the railroad windfall which will permit the old man to do a whole lot of heaving "Thunking."

In this picture, the producers have made a sincere effort to adhere to new standards. Its commercial success is almost entirely dependent upon the willingness and enthusiasm of those who exhibit it to market it in the same spirit. It should give a pretty good idea as to how general patronage is to respond to filmed classics of literature.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Dames

(Warner)

Musical Comedy

Another in the series of spectacular Warner musicals, "Dames" has as one of its outstanding features the inclusion of more actual story than have the majority of its predecessors. Spectacle, however, remains the outstanding exploitation feature, and in this, as in others of its kind, the exhibitor will find a wealth of material for outright ballyhoo. Another distinguishing characteristic is that it is, possibly, one of the cleanest musicals ever made. There is nothing in it which can possibly be construed as offensive.

The story concerns itself with an eccentric millionaire, Ezra Ounce, played by Hugh Herbert, whose passion for moral uplift of the American people has become an obsession with him—an obsession equally as great as the problem of how and to which members of his family he shall distribute his huge fortune. Guy Kibbee, a brother-in-law, is selected by Ezra to be the beneficiary of a considerable part of the money provided he is found to live up to the millionaire's moral requirements. Dick Powell, heir to another branch of the Ounce family tree, already has been disqualified for a share in the Ounce millions because of his penchant for the theatre.

En route to New York with Ezra to stamp out vice in "that den of iniquity," Kibbee encounters complications in the form of Joan Blondell which nearly result in his "undoing," and eventually he is virtually blackmailed by Miss Blondell for sufficient money to produce Powell's first show. Ruby Keeler, Kibbee's daughter, is in love with Powell, and her father is horrified when he goes to the theatre and discovers she also is in the show. Herbert, hearing of Powell's venture, is determined to break up the premiere and discover the identity of its "disgraceful" backer, who is, of course, the well-meaning Kibbee. Herbert engages the services of a score of gangsters to wreck the performance, but things do not work out quite as planned. Kibbee and Herbert become more than adequately intoxicated on a potent hiccough medicine and the more they imbibe the better Herbert likes the show. Unwittingly, he gives a prearranged signal to the gangsters and a riot ensues. Herbert and Kibbee go to jail along with the gangsters and the entire cast, Herbert, between hiccoughs, having decided that New York and show business are not so bad after all.

In the theatre scenes, Busby Berkeley has again outdone himself. There is plenty of music and comedy, and, in addition, the exhibitor has a fine set of names for his marquee. Exploitation should be along ballyhoo lines, with particular attention to motorized floats carrying girls and music from the show broadcast through loud speakers. There is no reason whatever why the children should not see "Dames."—Ayer, New York.

Belle of the Nineties

(Paramount)

Comedy-Melodrama

No matter how supercritically straightlaced one's clientele, no exhibitor has occasion to worry about this Mae West. Its moral value being beyond dispute, it's Mae, again the glamorous girl who startled the industry and its supporters in "She Done Him Wrong," in a hokum melodrama of the gas light era. There's comedy, drama, music, thrill, excitement and glitter in the show. All of it is dominated by the colorful alluring West personality. It is alive with the quality that makes big theatre successes. By the same token, its breezy, easy going, in spots slowly tempoed entertainment, is of the type often demonstrated as what the neighborhood and small town patrons like.

Ruby Carter, "The American Beauty," predecessor of all night club-sporting world queens, partly to get away from the arduous affection of prizefighter Tiger Kid and partly because the opportunities for her own peculiar talents will be greater, shifts the scene of her operations from St. Louis to New Orleans. as the gaudy attraction of Ace Lamont's "Sensation House," she is the pulse-quickening, heart-cracking toast of the town. That Ace would reserve her for himself, thereby only arousing the jealous fury of his erstwhile flame, Molly, only sets the audience in a mood as to what to expect from this deep-dyed villain and what he will try to do to Ruby.

The Tiger landing in town and coming under Ace's baleful influence, a match is arranged with the champ. Everybody knows that there's going to be a lot of double crossing. First of the dirty work is when Ace fixes it with Tiger to rob Ruby of her jewels while he (Ace) and she are taking a buggy ride along the lake shore drive. But Ruby hasn't been around for nothing; she's nobody's dumb-belle. Then comes the fight which Ace has fixed for Tiger to be the losing favorite. Figuring that here's a chance to kill two birds with one stone, Ruby uses some of her gems to lay one trap for Ace, checking the safe combination via opera glasses as he locks 'em up. Then during the fight as Tiger is going along nicely, she slips a dose of knockout drops in his water bottle and the Tiger wakes up on the floor, long after 10 has been counted.

In the meantime, Ruby sings "Troubled Waters," one of her three numbers, a negro spiritual to the accompaniment of a choral background. The lines of this are such that no showman should overlook in ad copy in their pertinence to Mae West and this picture.

After the fight comes the climax. Love-sick Tiger, eventually convincing Ruby that like most pugs he was just a dumb tool in the hands of a smart guy, confesses his part in the holdup. Then as Ruby hints to him that Ace is the gent who slipped him the knockout drops, he rushes in on the already harassed gambler. There is a fight, Ace is killed and fire breaks out. Ruby recovers all her jewels. She and Tiger rescue Molly, whom Ace has locked in a closet as the horse-drawn apparatus dashes to the scene of the conflagration which cremates Ace. Then, for an epilogue, Ruby and Tiger drop in on a backwoods preacher for a marriage ceremony.

Probably not an all-family attraction, being too flamboyant for the juveniles, "Belle of the Nineties" is something that the adults of both sexes above the late teen years should go for in a big way. The advance publicity already received probably has kindled a keen desire on the part of this class to see the picture.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Crime Without Passion

(Paramount - Hecht, MacArthur)

Drama

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, one of the most successful writing teams currently contributing to the motion picture, make their debut as producers in their own right with "Crime Without Passion." The picture, while addressed especially to intelligent audiences, is packed with tense and thrilling action. Possibly the names, Hecht and MacArthur, may prove a strong selling point, where they are known.

The picture is weighted with suspense, dealing with the calculating mental processes of the legaly trained brain of a man who has committed murder. Catchwords hinging on the story's essence—the destruction of a man by the super-intelligence of his own mind—should make attractive advertising copy. Cast names, aside from that of Claude Rains, who was last in "The Invisible Man," will mean little, although the producers have gathered a group of players who handle their jobs effectively. A newcomer who promises much is Margo, and the distinction of her name in itself may be used to advantage. Her performance is sharply dramatic and able work is turned in by Stanley Ridges, Whitney Bourne and Greta Granstedt.

The story deals with a brief and startlingly final episode in the career of Lee Gentry, a criminal lawyer, played by Rains. Gentry defends men he knows to be guilty purely for the sport of it, but his utter contempt for the dictates of society blinds him to the solution of his own problems of the heart. Accidentally he shoots Margo, from whom he is trying to cut loose in order to engage in an affair with another woman, Whitney Bourne. Then, thinking he has killed her, Gentry proceeds to cover his tracks with the analytical cunning of a master mind. This accomplished successfully, Gentry discovers to his horror that Margo is not dead and in a blind fit of nerves shoots and kills her former lover, thus bringing an unpremeditated end to his own spectacular career.

Hecht and MacArthur, who wrote, directed and produced the film, have concocted a most unusual motion picture which moves from beginning to end. "Crime Without Passion" is fundamentally a director's picture, and Lee Garmes has made its pictorial values of the highest calibre.—Ayer, New York.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. A Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur production. Written, produced and directed by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. Photographed by Lee Garmes. Settings by Albert R. Johnson. Special effects by Slavko Vorkapich. Release date, August 17, 1934. Running time, 70 minutes.

Desirable

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

Despite a weighty, dramatic sounding title, this picture is an expertly acted and directed comedy drama which for the most part leans toward the humorous side. Moving at a smooth, even tempo, the film is chock full of droll humor tempered by lilting romance and marked by high caliber portrayals, all of which are sales pointers. This is clean entertainment for every one.

In less expert hands the film might not have surmounted the time honored theme. Jean Muir is the outspoken and unsophisticated daughter of Verree Teasdale, a famous stage actress. As a blanket to shield her age from the public, the actress keeps her daughter bottled up in private schools, where she is forced to chum with girls younger than herself.

The blowoff comes when George Brent, head of an advertising company, who thinks he is in love with the actress, is given the key to her apartment and discovers Miss Muir, who has come home unexpectedly, fed up with it all. Brent's affections switch to the girl and he steps into the situation for the girl's welfare. In order to force the actress into permitting her daughter to lead her own life, Brent threatens to disclose the family relationship to the actress' public.

To avoid this, Miss Teasdale has a coming-out party for the girl, which fails to fit in with Miss Muir's scheme of things, but results in her first kiss and subsequent engagement to Charles Starrett. Her mother sees a way to get even with Brent and rushes the engagement announcement.

Miss Muir spends a week at Starrett's country home to get acquainted with the family, but is disillusioned when the family deplores the fact she had no famous ancestors in the Revolutionary War. There follows a series of climaxing incidents, which wind up with Miss Muir sending for her only friend, Brent. There is a sudden realization of her true love for Brent, the engagement is broken despite Miss Teasdale's intervention, and the two are left to their destiny.

Production values coupled with top-notch performances by Miss Muir and Brent are indicative of the selling potentialities.—Watt, Hollywood.

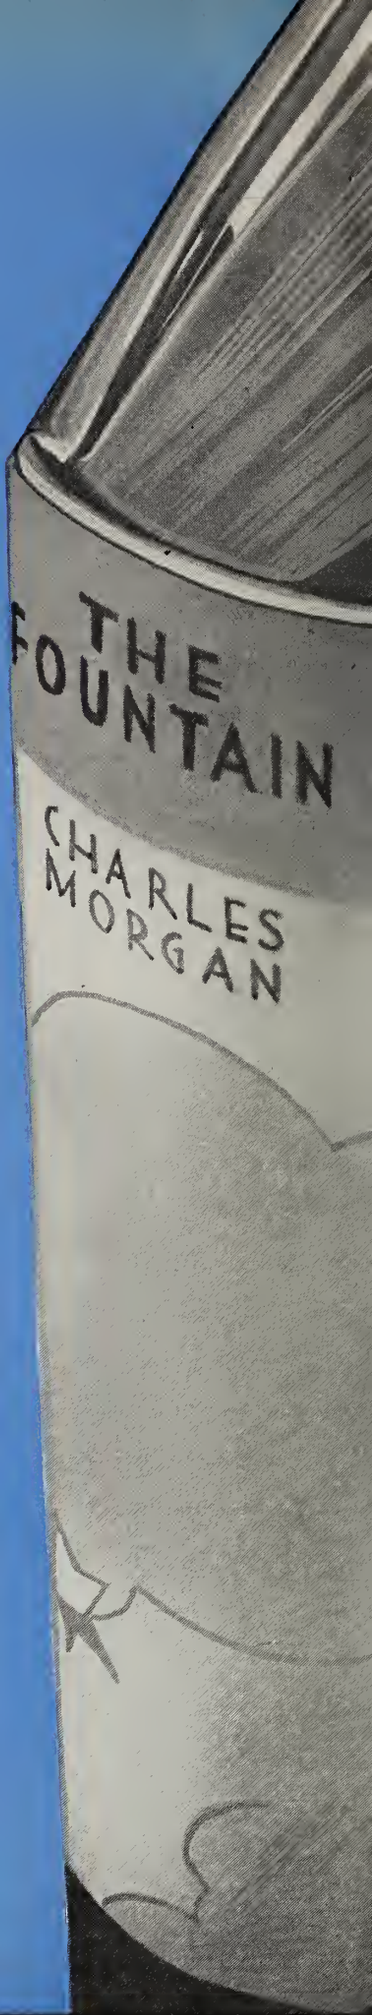
Cleopatra

(Paramount—De Mille)

Romantic Drama

Cecil B. DeMille again demonstrates his flair for spectacular motion picture making with "Cleopatra," his latest, and while the film in many ways is not so ostentatious as some of its predecessors—"The Ten Commandments," "King of Kings" and, more recently, "The Sign of the Cross"—it is redundant with magnificent settings and glittering costumes.

Mr. DeMille has here contrived a film which reflects many of the influences of William Shakespeare and George Bernard Shaw and at the same time is filled with modern, easy-going dialogue. Waldemar Young and Vincent Lawrence are the authors of the screen plav and Bartlett Cormack handled the adaptation.



The name values of the picture are Cecil B. DeMille, Claudette Colbert and Warren William. Treatment of the stupendous settings will lend color to advertising copy and the battle scene in which thousands of extras are used should prove a powerful appeal to the youngsters. It is worthy of note that there is virtually nothing in the picture which could be described as offensive. In fact, Mr. DeMille depicts a surprisingly moral life in the Roman and Egyptian courts.

The story deals with the infatuation of Julius Caesar, played by William, for the Egyptian queen and more particularly for the wealth of her country. When Caesar returns to Rome, bringing Cleopatra with him, he plans to divorce his wife and set himself up as king and dictator. He is murdered in the Senate and Cleopatra flees to Egypt, Marc Antony after her to bring her back in chains. There is a repetition of Caesar's infatuation as Antony succumbs to the wiles of the queen. Antony, however, dallies too long with Cleopatra, while in Rome, Octavian is denouncing him as a traitor. Octavian descends on Egypt to force Antony to return to Rome. Antony, however, casts his lot with the Egyptians and at the battle of Actium the Romans are victorious. Antony commits suicide and Cleopatra, rather than go to Rome a captive, poisons herself.

The battle of Actium is the film's highlight. Thousands of men, horses and chariots engage in fierce hand-to-hand struggle, while on the sea Roman galleys hurl fiery catapults into the Egyptian barges. It is of interest that Roman battle methods were much the same as those employed in modern warfare.

There are plenty of names for the marquee, including that of Henry Wilcoxon as Marc Antony, Ian Keith and C. Aubrey Smith. Costumes of the women, gorgeous sets and the glittering steel of the men's armor, combine with the action to make "Cleopatra" a typical production in a long line of spectacular DeMille pictures.—AYER, New York.

City Park

(Chesterfield)

Comedy-Drama

While romantic interest is woven through the story and development of the production, audience sympathy is concentrated upon Henry B. Walthall, who dominates with a salable character study of the whimsical Colonel who takes it upon himself to solve the problems of the youngers about him, innocently muddles them worse than ever but eventually solves them all. Besides Walthall the more familiar names are Sallie Blane, Matty Kemp, Hale Hamilton, Johnny Harron and Gwen Lee. The likable role of Walthall and the theme carry the greater exploitation values, with possibilities also in the title.

Sallie Blane, out of job and funds, learns from Gwen Lee that city jails are not so tough, and she picks out a detective to accost, to make sure of a sentence. Walthall, with Wilson Benge and Lafe McKee, his newly-made cronies of a park bench, intervene. They find an apartment for her, over the protests of the Colonel's family. Matty Kemp misjudges her and comes to free the Colonel from what he considers an infatuation.

The Colonel has hunted up Harron, her sweetheart from the little home town, and gets him a job as a bank guard. Harron is bought off to open the way for a robbery, and when his share of the loot is received he hides it in the room. Detectives trail him and arrest him, but the Colonel, in his innocence, saves him. Harron wins Miss Blane's consent to elope with him, but the Colonel, having done some investigating on his own, learn the true state of affairs and confronts him with the evidence. Kemp's first distrust has turned to love and all's well all around.

The street walker inferences make the picture adult fare, to be set away from the end of the week.—ROVELSTAD, New York.

The Defense Rests

(Columbia)

Drama

Jack Holt in a different type of role and the timeliness of the subject matter of the picture are the two main selling points of "The Defense Rests." Here Holt, veteran box office performer, plays a criminal lawyer, unethical and constantly using all the tricks of his trade, who recognizes the tawdriness of his career but can do little or nothing about it because he is in too deeply. A kidnaping case is the main theme of the film—a topical exploitation point which the exhibitor should not overlook—and, although the kidnaping is merely implied, the case revolving chiefly around Holt's efforts to have his gangster client acquitted, the "snatch racket" in all its ramifications is a singularly strong motif to be stressed, with special emphasis on the fact that the law is always the winner in the end.

The story concerns Matthew Mitchell, played by Holt, whose very brilliancy saves him from the epithet of "shyster." Jean Arthur, having just received her doctor of laws degree, applies for a job in Holt's office and gets it. Against his remaining sense of decency Holt is forced to accept as his client a kidnaper, and his case is nearly won when the mother of the abducted child, who, after ransom had been paid was returned to its parents dead, commits suicide in Holt's office as a protest against his saving the kidnaper-murderer from justice. Holt, repentant, turns over evidence damaging to his client to the district attorney, thereby voluntarily losing the case. This is done in such a manner that his client's gangster friends do not suspect Holt of double-crossing them, and at the same time the entire gang is rounded up, Holt's life is saved and he and Jean Arthur are married.

Nat Pendleton, whose screen activities to date have been concerned chiefly with rather amiable gangsters, appears in this picture as a sort of glorified ambulance-chaser assistant to Holt. His name might be co-featured with Jean Arthur's on the marquee, with Holt's for top billing. Action and drama, with here and there a touch of comedy, this picture should provide an hour's entertainment for adult audiences.—AYER, New York.

Ramu, the King of the Sun

(Fairhaven)

Travelogue

Here is a production which definitely classifies a travelogue and should be sold as such. There is no story, nor are there any climactic action developments, except possibly the final assembling and charging of the hordes of Abyssinian troops in maneuvers ordered for camera purposes by Ramu the king. This is one of several expeditionary pictures made by Captain E. A. Salisbury into out-of-the-way territories of the world, here into the South Seas. There is no cast, except the natives appearing in the ceremonies, and games.

The Malay peninsula and surrounding islands are visited by the expedition. They see the pygmies of the Andaman Islands, go on to Colombo, to Ceylon, across the Arabian Sea and into the Gulf of Aden and to Jidda, gateway to Mecca, sacred city of all Mohammedans.

Natives are shown in their marriage dances, at their daily occupations, playing games, the fakirs in their performances. There are the shots of the belles, bared to the waists, shots familiar to expeditionary films and here without any plot developments to raise censorial eyebrows.

In situations where other of the Salisbury pictures have been shown, attention can be called to the fact that here the Salisbury cameras give a pictorial story of the tribes of the Malay peninsula in the mystic South Seas and of the land of Abyssinia.—ROVELSTAD, New York.

Produced by Capt. E. A. Salisbury. Distributed by Fairhaven Productions. Running time, 68 minutes. Release date, Aug. 4, 1934.

Adventure Girl

(RKO Radio)

Adventure Melodrama

Joan Lowell, traveler-author of the book, "Cradle of the Deep," recounts on the screen a trip in a schooner to Central America with her father and two sailors. All is connected with a story of a hunt for buried treasure in the jungle land that was once the home of the Incas.

Coupled with considerable action that develops into capture and escape from the savages are several outstanding scenic shots.

First there is a hurricane in the Caribbean and Miss Lowell rescues Bill, former Marine and now one of her sailors. Next they board a derelict, and she finds a map to the hiding place of an emerald in a forbidden temple. She arrives at the Indian village and starts her search, led by the suspicious Indian princess. In the temple ruins she at last reaches the idol behind which the emerald is hidden. Bill has led the princess away from the scene, but she hears Miss Lowell's poundings and returns for a hand-to-hand struggle with the invader. Miss Lowell is captured by the natives and brought back to the village to be burned alive. Bill has escaped from the Indians, works his way back to the scene of the intended sacrifice and rescues Miss Lowell. They wade through a waterfall, get into their motorized raft, set a ring of gasoline blazing around the craft, dive through the bottom of the raft, swim under the flames, and are saved by the schooner crew.

It's frankly melodramatic from the time the search begins. Into the action are inserted a battle between a mongoose and the deadly snake, the fer-de-lance, and Miss Lowell's fight with a boa constrictor which has wound itself around her neck.

The end of the week is possibly the better booking allocation for lesser situations.—ROVELSTAD, New York.

Recording engineer, Larry Lynn. Editorial supervision by Sam B. Jackson. Narration by Joan Lowell. From the text by Ferrin Frazier. Running time, 76 minutes. Release date, Aug. 17, 1934. Big Hearted Herbert

(First National)

Farce Comedy

Here's entertainment that entertains. It's fast moving, clean, laugh-laden domestic farce comedy, dealing with a situation graphically familiar to almost every American family. The fun in its action, dialogue, situations and characterizations kept the preview audience in glee from start to finish. While it's entertainment fully in accord with any new standards, it is also showmanship. The kind of showmanship forcefully demonstrating that the show itself regardless of name values is the thing that now counts. "Big Hearted Herbert" boasts no magnetic names automatically inspiring crowds to mob the box offices. It does, however, offer whole-hearted amusement.

Sans any bizarre glamor, the story is an exciting yarn of simple folk. Its actual counterpart might have happened—probably has—in any household. Father Herbert, prototpye of many in real life, is a self-made business man. A plain man, whose success is the result of his own persevering hard work, he clings to old-fashioned ideals and idols. Things that are anathema to his modern minded family—chromos on the walls, a cuspidor beside his easy chair, plain food, plain talk—are his delights.

First going into a tantrum, he wrecks a swanky dinner party which his wife Elizabeth and daughter Alice have prepared for the girl's prospective elite class husband, Andrew. Venting his idiosyncrasies on family and guests as well, he restores the crayon portrait of his father to its honored place above the fireplace and sets the shiny urn-like spittoon beside it. The shocked guests go away unfed after ineffectually trying to wise the old boy up. The family is heart-broken.

But the family turns the tables. He wants to play host to a big customer. Then the household gives him a complete dose of his own medicine. The horsehair furniture is restored; the old-fashioned ribbon bedecked portrait easels come out. So does the checkered table cloth. Dinner is stew, served direct from the pot. Mother and daughter, slatternly gowned, go completely old-fashioned in talk and action. The amazement, shame and horror they experienced at their party was heaven on earth compared to Herbert's horror.

But it teaches him a lesson. It makes possible the marriage of Alice and Andrew. It makes it possible for Junior to go to college, even though he still believes that a college education is only a sideline to football glory. Mother Elizabeth can bury all the hated old archaics, even father's chromo and the cuspidor in the attic. Herbert has only one happiness left, little boy Robert decides that he'd like to follow in his father's footsteps.

The most necessary thing to do in connection with this picture to insure maximum box office results is to exercise every bit of ingenious interest creating showmanship in getting a capacity house in for the first showings. The word-of-mouth advertising of those who see it can be depended upon to interest those you fail to reach directly.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Not Against Flesh

(General Foreign Sales Corp.)

Mystery Melodrama

A "shock" picture, with moving skeletons, black magic, murder and suicide, and a climax that calls for driving a stake through the heart of a being in a coffin dug out of a cemetery grave, the gruesome is emphasized to a degree that removes the film from production value for American theatres of general patronage.

The picture, made in France, is one of black magic, of a young student's search for the clue to a series of mystifying deaths that have terrorized the village of Compierre, and is from the book, "In a Glass Darkly."

The student comes to a lonely house for lodging. In the night an elderly man enters the room, leaves a package and departs. The old man is murdered, and the package reveals a book in which the man has written his memoirs of the events he has traced in his fight against the unseen force. His daughter is taken ill. The village doctor is called. A part reading of the memoirs has shown that the doctor is in league with the mysterious influence. Further reading discloses the old man's conviction that the only solution is to drive a stake into the heart of a Marguerite Chopin, buried in the village cemetery. The student rushes to the bedside of the stricken girl and dashes from her hands a bottle of poison which the doctor placed within her reach. The caretaker and the student go to the cemetery, open the grave, and as the stake is driven home, there is a crashing of lightning. A peg-legged soldier, who has been another accomplice of the vampire, falls dead. The doctor is trapped in a flour bin, the caretaker starts the mill grinding and the doctor is buried alive. The student rescues the younger sister, whom he finds tied to a beam in preparation for her death.—Rovelstad, New York.

Hello, Sailors

Lively Entertainment

With Tom Patricola and Buster West as the pair of gobs from the fleet, meeting their girls and having a furious scrap with a pair of marines on New York's Riverside Drive and round the town, this subject is lively and highly entertaining comedy. As the boys are taken over by the girls, Sandra Ward and Marion Martin, the battle rages between the sailors and marines, with an amusing sequence on Central Park lake, with the contestants in rowboats. The pair are clever dances, as well. An entertaining subject.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Entertaining

There is considerable entertainment in this subject, a conglomeration of vaudeville acts on the screen, with Val and Ernie Stanton acting as masters of ceremonies. As a background to the dance numbers are the 12 Mentonettes, gracefully effective as a dancing group. Diversified, the subject is entertaining. —Running time, 20 minutes.

Excellent

One of the Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman series, this subject pictures, in quick flashes, and via splendid camera work, the avid hunger of the populace at large for speed and more speed. In the air, in the water, on the ground, in sports and transportation, is caught, often with thrilling effect, the rush of today's fast mechanized pace. A highly interesting and well edited subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Mickey's Rescue

(Columbia)

Good

There are laughs and real entertainment in this Mickey McGuire comedy, in which Mickey and his gang, disturbed as they plan a birthday party for his brother, Billie, discover Billie is about to be adopted by a wealthy family. They set out in search of him, learn the hotel where he is "residing," and plan a rescue. When Billie falls from a window, catches on a flag-pole and Mickey goes down a rope from the roof after him, it is a real rescue. The youngsters are lively and amusing, and the subject should be found generally entertaining.—Running time, 20 minutes.

The Flying Mouse

(United Artists)

Excellent

The latest number of the Disney Silly Symphonies series, this combines an object lesson for the youngsters with an excellently executed and highly entertaining bit of motion picture, done in color. It recounts the story of the mouse, who longed for the freedom of flight which the birds possessed. When a rescued butterfly turns into a fairy and grants him his wings, however, he soon realizes the value of being content with one's own identity. Ending happily, the subject is a delightful addition to the series.—Running time, 7 minutes.

There's Something About a Sailor

(Paramount)

Lots of Fun

One of the most colorful of the Betty Boop cartoons, in this production we have Betty as a recruiting sergeant. She persuades Her Hero to enlist for the war with a mosquito army. It's here that the fun really begins, with Max Fleischer's cartoon makers working in a number of new turns, to a choice sound accompaniment, and with something happening every second.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Service With a Smile

(Vitaphone)

Entertaining

When Leon Errol is wakened in the early hours of the morning and told his service station has burned to the ground, he goes to the insurance company. Asked to describe the kind of place he had, Errol permits his imagination free play, and the result, with chorus girl attendants and a paradise of automobile service, makes for a highly tuneful and completely entertaining short subject in Technicolor. Finally, taking the agent to the site of his station, Errol discovers his informants were only joking. A good musical number.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Just We Two

(Universal)

Weak

Grady Sutton and Sylvia Picker, bashful newlyweds, have their difficulties when a host of friends, led by Sylvia's aunt and her annoying son, break in on the couple in their "little love nest." When the couple try to relieve themselves of the burden, a near riot occurs which doesn't do the new house any good. But they eventually discover they are in the wrong house, and the day is saved. The comedy has its noisy moments, but little really amusing or entertaining comedy.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Fiddlin' Fun

(RKO Radio)

Amusing

An amusing cartoon number of the Aesop Fables series, in which Cubby Bear, as the suitor of the daughter of Nero of Roman history, is ignored by the emperor and his choice for his daughter's hand. Cubby finally succeeds in obtaining permission to enter the chariot race, and despite a breakdown and other mishaps, succeeds in winning race and girl.—Running time, 7 minutes.
